POEMS EVERYBODY SHOULD KNOW.

GREATHEARTS HEAVEN

Said Sir Greatheart to his angel, "I can dig and cleave and hew, Build me navies, cities, kingdoms, as I will; You dominion lost in Eden now is well-nigh won ancw. And I hold the earth and sea my vassals still.

"Vet thou whisp'rest me of heaven, with its music and its peace-What have these to do with men at clanging noon? Let the psalms be for the weary, for the beaten, battle cease, But for me thy summons cometh oversoon.

"With my words I praise my Maker, ships and bridges are my song, And for harps, a thousand thousand engines' beat. As I hang mine iron highways in the clouds the cliffs along, Or let in on bison-ranges seas of wheat.

"Aye, and give me but tomorrow, and I'll shout back from the pole, One tomorrow, and I'll flaunt me high in air Till the eagle lags below me, and the thunder-wheels that roll Now but ruin, through the skies my ships shall bear.

But what's left to venture yonder, in that finished world and fine, What's to win that still may challenge courage stern? Do they take their manhood with them who this leap-life resign? Heaven? Yes; but not at noon we thither turn."

And the angel said. "At bedtime pleads the child among his blocks, 'Wait a bit. I build a castle tall and strong!' Thou bridge-builder, whom the spider mid his flying cables mocks, Think not thy heaven is only rest and song. "It is writ God's servants serve Him, there as here. The Morning Star Waits a ruler who shall be of Adam's kind, And when Immanual rideth forth to Armageddon's war. Mightier powers than earth can muster march behind.

Fear not thou. If doing please thee, there are deeds beyond the sun, High adventures that shall long outlast his light.

And this fruth shall settle in thee, ere thy heaven is well begun, That up there, and here, and always, right is might." -William Harvey Woods, NOTES.

Every one who reads the magazines has seen in the past year a series of stories by Miss Zona Gale, dealing with the adventures of a charming old couple named Pelleas and Ettarre. The announcement that Miss Gale has put these original characters into a novel called "The Loves of Pelleas and Ettarre." which is to be published shortly, has been greeted with general approval. No stories of recent years have attracted more favorable attention by virtue of their grace and charm of manner, their insight into human nature and their originality. The success of the novel seems to be a foregone conclusion,

The Harpers are this week to publish an invaluable book for boys. The which of the book is twofold, it is to be published to the province of the book is twofold, it is to be a foregone conclusion.

The Harpers are this week to publish an invaluable book for boys. The object of the book is twofold, it is to add keen zest to outdoor pastimes, and at the same time to be of great practical value.

The book is profusely illustrated with cuts and diagrams, explanatory of the directions in the text. Its title is Harper's Outdoor Book for Boys. It vastly widens the scope of outdoor possibilities in the woods, the water, the air, the snow, or even in one's own yard. It tells how to make tents and boats, sleds and skees, fishing-tackle, and a wide variety of other things. It gives directions for camping and preparing an outfit, for lishing and preparing tackle—in short, for doing the many things that hows preparing tackle-in short doing the many things that boys to do and enjoy doing out of doors.

The practical side of the book lies The practical side of the book lies in the development of a boy's abilities and skill along lines of high mechanical and practical importance. In all, the book is an admirable guide, based upon the experiences of those who have done just what they describe. It is written by Joseph H. Adams, and there are also contributions by Kirk Munroe, Tappan Adney, Capt. Howard Patterson, Leroy Milton Yale, and others.

The Harpers will this week publish a biography which will undoubtedly take a place of high importance. It is a life of that remarkable man, Charles A. Dana, and the biographer is Gen. James H. Wilson, who was his intimate friend and compaign for many years.

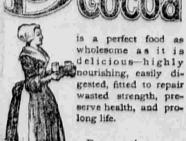

is Gen, James H. Wilson, who was his intimate friend and comparion for many years.

The book is the life-story of one who was not only a world-famous journalist, but a man who was closely identified with the men and movements of a half-century.

Mr. Dana is shown, too, not only as a man of importance and influence, but on the side of his personal characteristics as well—his knowledge of art and books and science, his connection with the Brooks Farm community, his fascinating personality.

How Dana, as assistant secretary of war, accompanied the armies in the Civil war, and made reports to Secy, Stanton in regard to the generals, and notably Grant, is an interesting feature of the book. The account of Dana's life after the Civil war reads like a personal history of our own times. A great deal of hitherto unwritten history appears in these pages, and the entire book is full of interest.

Winston Churchill receives a royalty of 30 cents a volume, and already his receipts from "Coniston" are said to have been $150,000.

ALEXANDER J. NIELSON, M. D.

The numerous friends of Mr. A. J. Nielson, a termer school teacher in the public schools of this city, will be pleased to learn of his graduation, with high honors, from the medical department of the Georga Washington university at Washington, D. C., on last Wednesday, the lith. The doctor was born in Copenhagen. Denmark, 35 years ago, but was brought to Sait Lake City as a child. After having gone through the public schools, he fin ished a course in the B. Y. university at Provo; at the age of 18 he started out as a school teacher, meeting with fine success. Always athirst for knowledge, he took a course in the University of Utah, some years later, and on emerging from that institution, was sent to his native city on a two years mission; on being honorably released, he returned home, and again commenced teaching in this city, when he left four years ago for Washington to study medicine. The medical school mentioned is one of the oldest in the country, established 1821, and is very exacting. Five prizes were awarded among the 70 graduates receiving the highest averages; Mr. Nielson secured one of these. He will immediately leave for New York, to do post graduate work, after having finished which he will return to this city to practise his profession. Mrs. Nielson (formerly Miss Andrea Jessen) and the two children, who have been with him, will be home in a few weeks. His widowed mother and two sisters reside in this city, being, respectively. Mys. Hacon Nielson, Mrs. Joseph Kjar, and Mrs. Hugo Peterson, also a brother Dr. A. O. F. Nielson of Oakley, Idaho.

The larger prizes may be awarded to undergraduate in an American college. The larger prizes may be awarded to undergraduate seems to be worthlest; but the lesser prizes cannot be awarded in the first class. Particulars may be obtained by addressing Prof. Laughlin.

Mr. Percy MacKaye's "Sappho and Phaon," which has just been published and in which Madame Kalich is to appear next season, is his fourth published dramatic work. It is also probably the most important work of this voung post, who is now recognized as standing in the first rank of living dramatic posts. Mr. MacKaye's rise has been rapid. It is only four years since he came before the public with "The Canterbury Pilgrins." The Canterbury Pilgrins." That admirable comedy was accepted by Mr. Sothern, but was not produced. It was followed shortly by "Fenris, the Wolf," which deepened the impression made by "The Canterbury Pilgrims." One is the leading importers of provisions charked recently that he had found imply cans in his preserved fruit boxes which had been substituted for the all ones taken out, so that the contents could not rattle or shift and so disclose he loss. He stated also that shavings and excelsion had been stuffed into boxes made empty or partially so, through he removal of crackers or hiscuits, but long ago a heavy loss was astalled by one of the American missonary schools at this place through he loss of linen drawn work, the value of which exceeded $1,500 gold. The rillful way in which this theft was accomplished made all efforts to recover be goods or apprehend the thieves fulls. The drawn work was packed in box which was strongly secured by son strapping and was also carefully mailed. The box was carried to the customs and thence to the steamer, and was scarcely out of the sight of some responsible person for a moment.

When the box reached the customs offseter at Pittsburg, to which it want a board from New York, it was found to contain nothing but woven straw and paper, scarcely a thread of the linen emailing. The consignor was immediately potified and the most scarching efforts were made to effect a recovery and discover the thief, but all attempts to accomplish either were of no avail. The American Magazine for Novem-The American Magazine for November Feludes an article on "Sky Salling, the New Sport," that presents a wonderful account of the sensations experienced by the balloonist. Here is a picture of how you feel as you leave the earth on your first ascendant.

"'Let go, everybody!' shouts your pilot, and the first of a series of strange phenomena strikes you. For it is not as if you were moving upit is not as if you were moving upward or leaving the earth. It seems as if the earth were leaving you. Your balloon reems to you to be standing perfectly still as if held suspended by an invisible hand while the earth receiles back, back at a startling rate. You look over the top of your basket at the people with whom but an instant before you were rubbing elboys and you gaze into a multitude of upturned faces cheering themselves blue and at a forest of arms waving hats and flags and handker-chiefs. Even as you gaze, the faces waving hats and flags and handkerchiefs. Even as you gaze, the faces blur and fade, while the decreasing noise of the cheers gives you an idea of the rate at which you are soaring skyward. And still you cannot feel that it is you who are traveling away and not the earth. You do not feel the least sensation of upward movement of the sort you feel while in the elevator of a hotel or office building. On the contrary, so indescribably smooth and easy is the motion that there seems to be none at all, and were you blindfolded and were it not for the receding sound from the crowd below, you would not know that the balloon had left the earth, and you might be tempted to step overboard into space."
