

SKAGUAY JUSTICE.

Man Who Stole Flour Strung Up and Hanged.
THEN IS FILLED WITH BULLDOGS.

Notably High Struck on McMillan River that is Hanged Richer Than the Klondike.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 30.—An unknown man has been shot on the Skaguay trail by a committee of vigilantes, and his body is now rotting beneath a pile of rocks within a few rods of the trail. This man was brought down by the vigilantes on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock from Skaguay. The Uplift left Skaguay August 23. The story is general in that it can be learned, the details being unknown among the Uplift's six passengers. Some time ago a sack of flour was stolen from the Uplift's baggage. A search of the baggage pointed to a man who was accompanied on the summit. A committee of six was chosen to hunt out and punish the thief. The men went to the tent of the suspected man and found the missing sack. The man begged for mercy, but the committee, satisfied of his guilt, decreed that he be immediately killed.

The man was dragged from the tent and strung up to a pole. The committee then made a short circuit of the trail, and the man's body was placed in six places. Feeling that duty done and sick of the vigilantes, the Uplift left at once and even waiting to put the body in the ground. The Uplift left at once and even waiting to put the body in the ground. The Uplift left at once and even waiting to put the body in the ground.
