CATTLE RAISING.

The business of cattle raising is not now the mere turning loose of vast herds upon the plains and allow-ing them to fatten and prosper of their awn accord. From the time the small plains, the crowding into an area one, half the size of ten years ago. But cattlemen of today are making for-tunes just as they did when range was cheap and plentiful. Better business methods are necessary, and herein lies an interesting story of economics. A dozen years ago a Texas ranchman asserted that 25 acres of grass land was insufficient for the fattening of one steer for marketing. Last month an equally successful rancher of Okia homa allowed three acres for each of his 8,000 head, and said that this is of his 5,000 head, and said that this is really an half acre in excess of actual need. He says that the range steers of today fattens easier than the long-horns of frontier days. Better blood has been bred into the stock cattle.

The cattle ranch of the present era is not a cattle ranch at all, but a farm run on a large scale. Take a 50,000-run on a large scale. Take a 50,000-acre tract of land, used primarily as a cattle ranch. Not less than 15,000 acres of this will be in cultivation, sown to
