

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

First (January) Number Ready December 15th.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE will be in the widest sense a magazine of general literature; and its main purpose will be to bring together not only good reading, but literature of lasting value. Each number will be fully illustrated. The artistic side of the Magazine will represent the most spirited, sincere, and original work.

Among the many interesting and important papers to be printed in the Magazine during the first year are the remarkable series of the existence of which has only recently become public knowledge, and concerning which the greatest expectation and curiosity have been aroused. Their importance and interest will more than justify EX-MINISTER E. R. WASHBURN'S REMINISCENCES OF THE

told by him from his papers, private diaries, and personal recollection of an experience absolutely unique, as he was the only member of the Diplomatic Corps remaining in the city and in communication with the world.

GLIMPSES AT THE DIARIES OF GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

U. S. Minister to France at the close of the last century, will give an idea of the interesting and pleasant pictures of social life and characters of the time of the French Revolution.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

who will also contribute a shorter story to an early number.

NOVEL, BY HAROLD FREDERIC.

entitled "Set's Brother's Wife," the scene of which is laid in a new field—Central New York.

A STORY, H. C. RUNNER.

which has to do with a most interesting phase of New York life, will prove especially attractive and original in its subject.

Among the other interesting features of the first numbers will be:

A Novellet by J. S. of Dale (F. S. SIMMONS).

SHORT STORIES BY
Joel Chandler Harris,
T. A. Janvier (JOHN BLACK),

MY LADY POKAHONTAS.

In a work under the above title, the writer of this article presents a series of Pokahontas that was the result of the old records, conscientious study, and the simple reason to believe that even the majority of well-read people have never examined these facts, consider them either unimportant or devoid of interest.

It is not the least interesting feature of the story of Pocahontas, that she was a real person, and not a fiction, as is so often supposed. The story of her life is a well-known legend.

This romantic incident has naturally attracted the attention of many writers, and it is not the least interesting feature of the story of Pocahontas, that she was a real person, and not a fiction, as is so often supposed.

and an event so quickly occurred that seemed to falsify the theory of her love for Smith. A few days after the year 1631, she was about eighteen years of age, and a young Englishman, John Rolfe, fell in love with her. From a letter that he addressed to Sir Thomas Dale, the governor, asking his advice, it is known that Rolfe had conceived a passionate attachment for her.

The letter is published in a rare pamphlet of the time, named "The Pleasant Estate of Virginia," and is a very curious production, coming from a staid and "discreet" person, the character attributes to Rolfe. He represents himself as a prey to doubt and great trouble; ought he to disregard the commands of the authorities, and marry a "strange" woman, or marry a "strange" woman, and make her a Christian? He was unable to decide on his duty, and he said: but a still more interesting question is suggested by the letter. It is that Pocahontas was at the time prepared to marry Rolfe. If she was prepared to do so, it seems reasonable to conclude that she had quite forgotten Smith, or that theory of her romantic attachment was a mere fancy.

As events indicated before very long, Rolfe and Pocahontas were married. Rolfe, Thomas Dale called upon New York Governor, and he was soon after changed for some English prisoners; but Pocahontas clearly betrayed her husband, and she was taken to Jamestown, where she was soon afterwards married to Rolfe.

These are all the facts thus far in the life of Pocahontas, who proceeded to live peacefully with her husband, and bore him a son, "whom she dearly loved," and who was named "John Rolfe, Jr."

Afterwards, accompanied Sir Thomas Dale to England. On the face of this story of Pocahontas, there is nothing to support the hypothesis of any attachment between her and Smith. Rolfe, however, when he arrived in England, a single incident in addition to the story of her life, and Rolfe, indeed, a very strong warranty for it.

As soon as the ship containing Pocahontas, Rolfe, and her son, reached Plymouth, intelligence of her arrival was carried to London, and the event was celebrated with great pomp and circumstance. The story of her life, and Rolfe, indeed, a very strong warranty for it.

Smith was the occasion of this. Hearing in which Pocahontas, Rolfe, and her son, reached Plymouth, intelligence of her arrival was carried to London, and the event was celebrated with great pomp and circumstance. The story of her life, and Rolfe, indeed, a very strong warranty for it.

The Last Man.

There is one individual that we have always felt great sympathy for, and that is the last man in the procession. He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone.

He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone. He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone.

He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone. He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone.

He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone. He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone.

He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone. He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone.

He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone. He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone.

He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone. He is that man who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone, and who, in the face of a crowd, stands alone.
