

Count Arsene Andreivitch—Since my accession to the throne of my ancestors, it has been my lively desire to visit my ancient capital, that loyal and beloved residence where I was born and where I received baptism under the protection of the relics of the blessed Alexis, the thaumaturgus of Moscow.

Having to-day satisfied that desire, I have witnessed with the greatest satisfaction the cordial and sincere emprossment which the inhabitants of Moscow have shown in their reception of myself and all my family, a traditional welcome which Russia has always given to her sovereigns. I charge you to express my sincere gratitude to all classes of the population of Moscow, and to assure them of my good will. My happiness would have been complete if recent events had not dimmed the satisfaction of these sweet moments.

My order of the day to the Russian armies has already made public that after an unexampled siege of eleven months the garrison of Sebastopol, after having given unheard of proofs of courage and self-denial, and having successfully repulsed six desperate assaults, has crossed over to the north side of the town, only leaving "blood stained ruins" to the enemy. The garrison of Sebastopol has done all that man could do.

I accept past and present events as the impetuous decrees of Providence, which has given a year of sad trials to Russia. But Russia has supported still greater trials, and the Lord, in His great mercy, has always given her his tacit support. Let us, therefore, now also place our trust in him.

He will defend orthodox Russia, who has taken up arms for a just cause—for the cause of Christianity. It is a great satisfaction to me to see the unceasing proofs which all men are giving in their readiness to sacrifice their property, their families, and even the last drop of their blood, for the maintenance of the integrity of the empire and for the national honor.

It is in the manifestation of these sentiments of the nation and in these acts that I derive strength and consolation, and, uniting myself inseparably with my heart to my heroic and faithful people, I repeat, putting my trust in the help and grace of the Almighty, the words of the Emperor Alexander I., "Where right is, there is God also." I am ever and invariably yours,

ALEXANDER.

The Polish journal "Czas" thus describes the position of the Russian army in the Crimea on the 23d of Sept.:

The Russian forces occupy a line, fortified by art and nature, forming a semicircle round the position of the allies, and extending from the Telegraph and Fort Constantine, situated at the extremity of a small promontory, to the impenetrable chain of mountains of Tehatir Dagh. The main force of the Russians, consisting of three divisions, is posted behind that line, on the plateau of the Belbek, and facing the south. The right wing is composed of a considerable corps, occupying (on the north side of Sebastopol) the citadel of Severnaya, and forts Catherine, Constantine and the Telegraph. The left wing holds the fortified defiles of Aitodor and the chain of the Tcherkes-Kerman, as far as the source of the Belbek and the mountains of Yalta. The army of reserve is stationed at Bakshiserai and Simpheropol. Other troops maintain the communications between the principal army and three other corps—namely, the one before Kertch, with its right wing at Kafia and its left at Araba; another in observation before Eupatoria; and the third, consisting of at least 40,000 men, protects Perekop. The Russian troops in Crimea still possess two roads by which they can communicate with Russia, the one passing by the Isthmus of Perekop, and the other by the bridge of Tchongar across the Putrid Sea.

MARRIAGE AND MORALS IN UTAH.

AN ADDRESS WRITTEN BY ELDER PARLEY P. PRATT, READ IN JOINT SESSION BY MR. THOS. RULLOCK, CHIEF CLERK OF THE HOUSE, IN REPRESENTATIVES' HALL, FILLMORE, DEC. 31, 1855. THE ASSEMBLY TENDERED THE AUTHOR THEIR THANKS BY A UNANIMOUS VOTE, AND BY A LIKE VOTE ORDERED THE ADDRESS TO BE PUBLISHED IN THE DESERT NEWS.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN:

At the opening of the present session of our annual Legislature I had the honor of being unanimously chosen Chaplain of the Council.

I was then and there laid under a solemn oath to faithfully perform the duties of this high and holy calling to the best of my abilities, and was also solemnly charged by the honorable President, Mr. Kimball, not merely to be fervent in prayer during the session, but also to contribute my mite in moulding the moral and social institutions of our common country.

In accordance with these sacred responsibilities placed upon me, I have, with some pains, prepared this address, which I am extremely happy in having the privilege of laying before you: not merely, or principally for your sakes; but for the sake of the people of our Territory—our nation, and the world.

As our young and rising Territory is about preparing to enter upon her sovereignty as a free and independent republic, and to assume her place amid the family of American States, it becomes her citizens, and especially those engaged in founding her institutions, to purify themselves and to come together with pure hearts and clean hands; and clothed with light as with a garment, lay a constitutional foundation, and make or adopt such laws as will tend to purify and exalt the people,—establish righteousness and peace, and multiply and perpetuate a nation of freemen in the highest degree of moral, intellectual and physical development.

No time-serving, or mere temporary policy should enter into our composition, or influence us for one moment. We act, not merely or principally for ourselves or the living age; but for untold millions of posterity, and for ages yet unborn; who doubtless will be influenced by our institutions, and mould their morals, manners, precepts, and even their consciences more or less after the pattern we set them.

A wholesome moral atmosphere, and a conscience purified and enlightened by the Spirit of Truth are indispensably necessary to a permanent national growth, and to the strength and perpetuity of institutions.

The All-wise Creator, the God of nature, has implanted in the human heart certain affections, which, under proper culture and direction, give rise to family ties: hence the necessity and importance of the moral and social relations and the institutions for their proper direction and government.

'Tis nature's universal law, and the just and great commandment with blessing; that each and every species should multiply and fill the measure of its creation. Hence the growth of families,—the germs of nations;—and hence, as we before observed, the necessity of laws founded in wisdom, to guard, as it were, the fountain and issues of life.

In short—moral and social affections and institutions are the very foundation of all government, whether of family, church or state. If these are perverted, or founded in error, the whole superstructure is radically wrong, and will contain within itself the seeds of its own decay and dissolution.

These facts are not only self evident, but are according to all experience;—being exemplified in the decadence and dissolution of nations and empires of old; as well as in the general weakness and corruption so characteristic of men and things in more modern times.

The prophet Isaiah, in looking through the vista of long distant years, at length beholds the vision of modern "Christendom," or of the corruptions growing out of Roman sway. He exclaims: Isa. 24, 5, "The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws; changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant."

We here enquire: What laws were transgressed? What ordinance was changed? and what everlasting covenant was broken—the effect of which would defile the very earth under its inhabitants?

This leads us back, in our researches, to the earliest institutions, laws, ordinances, covenants, and precedents or record touching marriage and the moral and social relations.

If we find laws, statutes, covenants and precedents emanating from God; sworn to by himself to be everlasting; as a blessing to all nations:—if we find these have to do with exceeding multiplicity of the race, and with family and national organization and increase:—if such institutions are older than Moses, and are found perpetuated and unimpaired by Moses, and the prophets—Jesus and the Apostles, then it will appear evident, that they were intended to be perpetual; and that no merely human legislation or authority, whether proceeding from emperor, king, or people has a right to change, alter, or pervert them.

It will then remain to be shown by whom these institutions were changed, or perverted; the direful effect of such change upon the nations; and the only course left for those who would survive the crash of nations and the wreck of worlds.

Our object, gentlemen, is to urge upon the statesmen and people of, at least one state or government of our earth to avoid the rock and quicksands on which so many have made shipwreck—to restore the laws, the ordinance, and the everlasting covenant of our God; that her citizens may be purified and preserved by the same; and her institutions, being founded in truth, may be perpetuated for ever.

I beseech, therefore, honorable gentlemen to hear me patiently. Abraham, the friend of God, lived in Asia upwards of four hundred years before the law of Moses was written on tables of stone, or thundered from Mount Sinai.

To this man God gave laws, commandments, statutes, and judgments in an everlasting covenant.

He said unto him: Genesis 12th, verse 2nd, "And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing; and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

And again: Genesis, 17th chap., verses 1st to 8th: "And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the Lord appeared to Abram, and said unto him: I am the Almighty God: walk before me and be thou perfect, and I will make my covenant between me and thee, and I will multiply thee exceedingly. And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him saying, as for me, behold my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations. Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram; but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee, and I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee.

And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God."

In the foregoing promises it is evident that there is an everlasting covenant, touching multiplicity of our species, government-making, or the raising up of families and nations, and their exceeding prosperity and increase:—a covenant everlasting and unchangeable in which all nations should be blessed, if they were ever blessed at all.

In connection with this covenant we have reason to believe that God would reveal laws, statutes, and institutions which would be productive of the greatest possible increase of a wise, healthy, and virtuous posterity.

In the precedents recorded of Abraham and his posterity two principles are conspicuous as being subservient to the carrying out of these ends: viz:—

First:—A plurality of wives:—Secondly:—An entire prohibition of all sexual intercourse except upon the principle of marriage:—a breach of which was considered a capital offence, punishable with death. God provided Abraham with Sarah, Hagar, Keturah, and several other wives not named. By this means he became the father of many nations and his seed was multiplied exceedingly.

God also gave to Jacob, Abraham's grandson, four wives:—viz: Leah, Rachel, Bilhah, and Zilpha; by which means he became the father of twelve tribes. The history of these things is so conspicuous in the Book of Genesis that we need not quote chapter and verse.

Now after Abraham had obtained all these wives, and had raised up children by them, the Lord bears testimony in the 26th chapter of Genesis, verse 5th, saying:—"Abraham obeyed my voice and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws."

Here then, we have demonstration that a man living four hundred years before the law of Moses was given, had statutes, commandments, and laws given him of God; and that he kept them.

These laws evidently included polygamy or plurality of wives, from the fact that he had them, as a means of carrying out the promise of exceeding multiplicity. Here then, the matter is set for ever at rest, that polygamy is included in the ordinance of marriage, and in the everlasting covenant and laws of God: and that, under proper regulations, it is an institution holy, just, virtuous, pure, and, in the estimation of God, abundantly calculated to bless, preserve, and multiply a nation.

Hence the laws of some of our States, which recognize polygamy as a crime, are at once both unconstitutional, and unconstitutional, as well as immoral. Common law in England, and in the United States, recognizes the Bible as the very foundation of all moral and criminal jurisprudence: and the Constitution of the United States, and of each State guarantees the liberty of, at least an enlightened conscience, founded on the moral law of God as found in that Holy Book. Hence, should an individual, or a community, in all good faith regulate their marriages by the laws of God as given to Abraham, no State law can harm them while the civil courts are bound to abide that holy and sacred guarantee of the Constitution: viz: "Liberty of conscience."

Having demonstrated the fact of an everlasting covenant made with Abraham and his seed, including plural marriage, and certain laws designed to multiply and bless many nations, and to be a blessing to all the families of the earth, we will now enquire after the penal laws touching morality, or the intercourse of the sexes.

The first intimation we will notice on this subject is found in Genesis 20th chapter: as follows:—

"And Abraham journeyed from thence towards the south country and dwelt between Kadesh and Shur, and sojourned in Gerar. And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, she is my sister: and Abimelech, king of Gerar, sent and took Sarah. But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night and said to him, behold thou art but a dead man for the woman which thou hast taken, for she is a man's wife. But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, Lord wilt thou slay also a righteous nation? Said he not unto me, she is my sister? and she, even she herself, said, he is my brother: in the integrity of my heart, and the innocency of my hands have I done this."

And God said unto him in a dream, yea I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart: for I also withheld thee from sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her. Now therefore, restore the man his wife; for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: but if thou restore her not, know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou and all that are thine."

Here we have the law of God revealed by his own mouth about four hundred years before the law of Moses was given: making death the penalty of adultery.

This penal law then, was part and parcel of the laws, statutes and covenants under which Abraham and his neighbors lived, and it seems to have been an ancient and general law handed down by the fathers, to which Abimelech was no stranger; he did not plead his ignorance of the law, but the innocency of his intentions, and his ignorance of the true circumstances.

Again, Genesis, chapter 34: Records a case of fornication, committed by Shechem, the son of Hamon, the Hivite, prince of the country, with Dinah, the daughter of Jacob, the grandson of Abraham; and how punished.

Two of the sons of Jacob, viz: Simeon and Levi, took their swords and slew this fornicator and all the men about him, who had been accessory to the seduction of their sister, or who had consented thereto: and they took their goods for a spoil.

They may in this case have superseded the bounds of the law; but still it goes to show with what abhorrence these sons of a chaste and plural marriage held the crime of fornication.

We will now enquire whether the law of Moses, or the gospel ever changed the covenant of Abraham, or disannulled the law of marriage, or the penalty of death affixed to adultery and fornication.

For this purpose we shall trace the subject down through the different ages and dispensations, bringing a few instances out of many, illustrative of the subject. But first of all we will take the direct testimony of the Apostle Paul, found in Galatians, 3rd chapter, and 17th and 18th verses inclusive, which read thus:—

"That the blessing of Abraham might come on the gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith."

Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth it, or addeth thereto. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made, he saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed; which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ,—the law (of Moses) which was four hundred and thirty years, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, (of Moses,) it is no more of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise."

Again,—verse 29th, Paul says to the gentiles:—"If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Here we have the most direct and positive testimony, in the New Testament, that the covenant and promise made to Abraham were intended for all time, and for the believing gentiles, and all true Christian people; and that they were entirely distinct from the law of Moses, and were never disannulled, or changed, either by Moses or Christ. Hence we affirm that the law of plural marriage, and death as a penalty of adultery and fornication, has been in force through all time, and through every dispensation, from Abraham till the present: and that of right it should be of force among all truly Christian nations:—that the carrying out of these holy laws in righteousness would greatly multiply and bless a nation;—and that the breach, or change of them, would corrupt the world, and defile the very earth with abominations.

But, let us now come to historical illustrations. In the 25th chapter of Numbers we have an account of Zimri, a prince in Israel who committed fornication with Cosbi, the daughter of Zur, a prince of Midian; and how Phinehas the grandson of Aaron, the priest, took a javelin and thrust them both through the body, and slew them: and how the Lord staid the plague on account of this act; and rewarded Phinehas with an everlasting covenant of priesthood, for his zeal in thus punishing the crime of fornication.

We should remember too that Moses, who was himself a polygamist, both in practice and as a legislator, was the prophet and legislator, under whose administration this crime was thus severely punished.

In the first book of Samuel, chapter 1st, we find an account of Elkanah, and his two wives, Hannah and Peninnah; and of Samuel, the son of this pluralist, who was a promised child, devoted to the service of God and brought up in the holy temple. To this child came the word of the Lord against the house of Eli the priest, saying: (1st Samuel, 3rd chapter—verses 11th and 14th.)

"Behold I will do a thing in Israel, at which both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle. In that day will I perform against Eli all the things, which I have spoken concerning his house: where I begin I will also make an end. For I have told him that I will judge his house for ever, for the iniquity which he knoweth; because his sons make themselves vile, and he restraineth them not."

Therefore I have sworn unto the house of Eli, that the iniquity of Eli's house shall not be purged with sacrifice nor offering for ever."

Here seems to be certain sins which the ordinances of remission could never cleanse. God swore that neither sacrifice nor offering should ever atone for them. What were these sins committed by the sons of Eli? The answer is found in the 2nd chap. of 1st Samuel. They, as priests, robbed the sacrifices, and committed whoredoms with the women who came to the tabernacle:—this they did repeatedly and would not repent. In the 4th chap. of said book, we find the record of the fulfillment of the words of the young child, Samuel. Israel was worsted in a battle with the Philistines; the two priests, the sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were slain; the sacred ark which they bore was taken by the enemy; their father Eli, on hearing this news, fell backward and his neck brake; and Phinehas' wife died on hearing the same news. Here we have a most striking example and illustration of God's blessing on plural marriage, and of his curse and death, attendant on adultery and fornication.

Samuel the son of Elkanah, the polygamist was blessed as a holy prophet, to denounce death upon adulterers.

We next will notice a case of adultery committed by David, king of Israel, and how punished. 2nd Samuel, chap. 12—verses 7 to 14:—"And Nathan said to David:—Thou art the man. Thus saith the Lord God of Israel:—I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul; and I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things. Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the Lord to do evil in his sight? Thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon. Now therefore the sword shall never depart from thine house; because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife."

Thus saith the Lord, behold I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house, and I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbor, and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun. For thou didst it secretly: but I will do this thing before all Israel and before the sun. And David said unto Nathan:—I have sinned against the Lord. And Nathan said unto David, the Lord also hath put away thy sin; thou shalt not die. Howbeit, because by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme, the child also that is born unto thee shall surely die."

Here again we find death the penalty of adultery; but in this instance God in his mercy spared his life because it was a first offence, and because he sincerely repented. But he punished him very severely, in the death of his child,—in taking his
