MOVE THE TRACK AND DO JUSTICE

Present is the Best Time to Change Course of Utah Central.

WILL HARM LEAST NUMBER

When Removed to a Houte Below Twelith South-Will Cost People Eight Thousand Bollars.

"It will cost eight thousand dollars to move the Utah Central tracks from their present location on Eighth and Ninth South streets," said Hon Le Grande Young today, "to a point outside of the thickly settled portion of town. We ask the city to give us alx thousand dollars and we, the citizens along the present line, will raise the other two thousand dollars among ourselves. We think our request is a reasonable one and that in granting it the City Council will be simply doing its duty by the citizens who have pelltioned them and by the whole city at large; and when the facts in the case are known we have no hesitation in saying that any reasonable person will neree with us in our contention that the move should be made.

"When the railroad company first put "When the railroad company first put its track along the canal bank through to Sugar, it paid to the city the eum of six thousand dollars. The people through whose properly the canal right of way passed were the aggricoed parties but they received no compensation from the railroad for the injury done their property by reason of its construction on the land. These people gave the right of way to the city for a canal and not a railroad. Then upon finding no other way through to reach the mouth of Parley's canyon the railroad asked the city for and were granted asked the city for and were granted the privilege of using the canal right of way for their line, which they built along the bank of the canal, and paid to the city six thousand dollars for this privilege.

"It was bad enough for these land owners to have the canal run through their property, but they gave the right of way for it because of its immense benefit to the people of the whole city—and, for that matter, the whole State, indirectly. But when the railway track was not there is addition. put there in addition to the canal the injury was infinitely augmented.

'Now, all we ask the City Council to do is to return to the railroad company, through the Council's potitioners, that gix thousand dollars which it got for the railroad right of way that cost the city nothing, but that did cost the people the docrease in valuation in their property.

So much for the consistency of our request to the Council. Now for the good the removal would do for us and the injury it would do others:

"It is a fact that if any considerable portion of realdence or business property is damaged, the injury will be felt by the city at large, in that the degree of value of a city's property for realdence ourposes governs the number of resistance. urposes governs the number of dents therein, all other conditions being equal. That a railroad track running along a street injures the property along that street is accepted; but the railroads are necessary and they must be put somewhere. Under the democratic principle of dealing with men and things the object is always to achieve a desirable public end by the infliction of as little harm as may be upon as few citizens as possible. We have before us this idea of the greatest good to the greatest number when we advocate the removal of the Utah Central track from where it is to the south of the city. Our position is that the track ought to be moved to a route along a little south of Twelfth South street. We don't advocate the putting of the line along any public street, but contend that the right of way should be purchased from the property holders along that course and have it securely fenced. Of course, we must admit that the location of the track even there will infure somebody; but the harm will not be applied to so many. Where it will hurt a dozen property owners below Twelfth South it now injures probably a thousand people in its present loca-No one-not even a stranger l the city-would advocate the building of a transcontinental steam railway through Main street, because it would certainly be an unreasonable proposiway and must have it, but we want the line located where it will do the least harm while it is performing its useful A number of other citizens were seen by this paper's railroad representative and there was found no opposition to the contention of Judge Young and his rellow petitioners.

OUTLOOK DARK FOR SHEEPMEN.

Continued Drouth Causes a Big Decrease in Flock Values.

A HEAVY LOSS IS EXPECTED

Large Numbers of Southern Utah Sheep Being Taken to the Big Horn Basin, Wyoming.

"The outlook for the sheep business in Utah is anything but bright. The fact is it is dark, darker than for a long time past. The ranges are dried up the sleep are poor and prices have fallen rapidly the last sixty days, particularly the last thirty. What the outcome will be no man can forsee, except that the losses will be heavy. They are clready heavy and many sheep men are discouraged."

Thus spoke a leading sheep raiser to the "News" today on his return from a visit to several southern Utah coun-ties. Continuing, he said: "The condi-tion is the worst I have ever seen. Ev-erywhere I went I found the ranges so parched that every vestige of grass but disappeared and in many places the brush was dead from lack of moisture, while it is drying up this way the peo-ple of Salt Lake can hardly realize the uninviting aspect of affairs in the southern counties. It is really most discouraging to all classes. Great atretches of wheat lands have been out far hay. In some instances the crop has not been high enough to cut and will be a total loss to the farmer. The class that suffers most is the live stock raiser. Already both sheep and cuttle are much wasted in rize, and large numbers of sheep from this section are being driven to the Rig Horn Pasin country where a colony of "Mor-mon" settlers recently located. Those s an excellent sheep growing country On this showing and by reason of the drouth that prevails here it will not be surprising if the Big Horn Basin soon becomes a sheep growing center of con-becomes a sheep growing center of con-siderable importance."

Speaking of sheep prices the gentle-man said: "Stock sheep are now sell-ing for $1.25 a head. 75 cents less than a year ago, and the bottom has not been reached yet. In western Wyom-ing prices are only a quarter better and the outlook anything but reas-suring. There will be no fat sheep shipped from Utah ranges to the East this year. Since may go as feeders; but that is all. They will not go ready for market.

Utub will not suffer alone, however Ad carse reports come from all of the surrounding States and a great decrease in sheet values is as certain as anything can be. I do not desire to raise an alarm, but the truth might just as well be stated."
