

ANOTHER DEVELOPMENT.

NATURE, or Providence, use which term you please, has been very bountiful with Utah. All the elements necessary for rich and prosperous State are found within her borders. Under the influence of tillage and irrigation the land yields abundantly of grain, vegetables and fruit in wonderful variety. The grass on the hillside affords pasture for immense herds of cattle and sheep. And the mountains are strewn with minerals of the most valuable kinds, while the air is pure, the water sweet and the climate unsurpassed.

New developments are continually attesting the prolific resources of this greatly blessed region. The ordinary materials for building and ornamentation of dwellings have been in use here for long time. But recently, marble in vast masses has been added to the material riches of the Territory, and is likely to become so plentiful and cheap in this city, as to be utilized for building as well as monumental purposes. This valuable stone is to be found in several parts of the Territory.

On the 21st of last June a company was organized for the working of the marble deposits on Snake Creek, Provo Valley. It is called The Watch Marble Mining Co., and is incorporated with a nominal capital stock of $250,000—in One Dollar shares—of which $50,000 is set aside as a working capital. The officers are: Wm. Shovel, President and Treasurer; Lorenz M. Davis, Secretary; Sydney Eppison, N. C. Springer, C. A. Springer and John S. Barnes, Directors. The lead shows marble in eight about 8,000 feet in length and 1,000 feet high. It is of splendid quality and fine grain, tough and workable, and said not to be excelled in the country. Thirty men are at work in the quarry, and a first class mill and other appliances are in use to prepare the blocks for the market. Demands have already been made beyond the Company's present power to supply and the working capacity at the quarry will have to be doubled.

Samples of the marble, worked up and in the rough, will be exhibited at the Territorial Fair. The Company will place it on the market, at eastern prices without the addition of freight. This will exclude the imported article entirely if the quality proves what is claimed and the low cost is preserved. California has already given orders for a quantity of this marble and it is believed that it will be widely sought after.

Marble fronts for elegant residences and first class stores are improvements that will soon be seen in the city of Salt Lake, and the wooden head boards for the graves of the departed will go the way of log houses and pole fences, and give place to the sculptured urn and chiseled memorial stone.

These remarks are not based upon actual examination of the Watch Company's quarries, but upon the statements of reliable informants and personal inspection of specimens of the marble, a piece of which can be seen at this office.

Marble works will, we have no doubt, become one of Utah's established industries, and we are pleased to record this new additional development of our wonderful Territory.

CONGRESS AND WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The National Woman Suffrage Association is preparing for another session on the Congressional front, and has its guns ready for the campaign. The following sample petition to Congress from Cornelia W. Browning, being circulated throughout the country with the request that leading women will prepare and sign in ink, two similar petitions, and send one to the Senate and another to the House of Representatives:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled: Cornelia W. Browning, a citizen of the State of New York, City of Brooklyn, hereby respectfully petitions your Honorable Body for the removal of her political disabilities that she may exercise her right to vote, all State Constitutions and Statute Laws to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Your petitioner respectfully represents that she is a real estate owner, paying heavy taxes annually for public improvements and for the support and punishment of pauperism and crime that are the direct results of the liquor traffic, while she has no power to suppress vice or regulate the traffic.

CORNELIA W. BROWNING. In addition to such petitions, others are to be sent to the Legislatures of the different States, requesting those bodies to pass a resolution that it is the duty of Congress to submit to the country a Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as follows:

ARTICLE XVI. Sec. 1. The right of suffrage in the United States shall be based on citizenship, and shall be regulated by Congress, and all citizens of the United States, native or naturalized, shall enjoy this right equally, without any distinction or discrimination founded on sex.

Sec. 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Congress also is to be petitioned on this subject from all parts of the Union.

We do not think the ladies who are managing this movement will succeed on their present plan of operations. There is a widespread feeling of alarm at the disposition manifested to increase the national power at the expense of the local. This proposed Amendment would take away from the States the elective franchise, one of the plainest of State rights under the Constitution, and hand it over to the Federal Government. Even the friends of woman suffrage—the majority of them—will object to this; its enemies are furnished thereby with an additional weapon wherewith to fight it.

It has already been decided by the Supreme Court that while Congress has the right to pass laws concerning citizenship, to the States is reserved the power to prescribe rules and regulations for the exercise of the voting power. True, the Fifteenth Amendment infringes upon this power so far as the colored race is concerned. That was passed and adopted by the country under the excitement of emancipation and the effects of the war. It was a popular measure. But woman suffrage is not popular. If Congress were to submit such an Amendment it would be voted down by the country, and the cause for which these ladies labor would be lost for an indefinite period.

The wisest course, in our opinion, which they can pursue, is to concentrate their efforts on some State of the Union in which there is the greatest probability of success. Woman suffrage once established in a State, and found to work to advantage, an example will be formed, which other States will not be slow to follow, for man is an imitative animal, and States are but aggregates of humanity. More people do things because others do them, than for original motives and independent principles. We advise the ladies, whose cause is just if it is not popular, to concentrate their forces on one State and keep up the attack till victory crowns their efforts, and not waste their powder and shot on Congress, which will only treat their cause with ridicule or neglect.

THE CAUSE OF THE OLAMOR.

"As the present Administration is the first that has seriously undertaken the formidable task of rooting out the evil of polygamy by making it a dangerous pastime and of drying up the foreign fountains of supply by exposing the illegality and rickiness of polygamy, it would seem as though it was entitled to the hearty support of all good citizens."

The above is from the New York Mail, a strong Administration organ. It explains the present raid on the "Mormons" and the movements connected with it, at home and abroad. Anyone who thinks the officials of the Government are a cent above the supposed morality of the side of the polygamy question, is egregiously mistaken. Political capital is the object in view. The public have been excited on Utah and "Mormonism," and now it is to be made to appear that the Republican party, and especially the present Administration, are doing or going to do wonders in the way of suppression. This accounts for the extraordinary, extra-judicial and unprecedented proceedings in the empanelling of the grand jury for the Third District and all that will be connected with the doings of the courts here during the present term; Party politics is the ruling influence in the land; party politics governs the decisions of courts; party politics is running the nation; party politics is leading thousands upon thousands to hell.

THE LIFE AND ADVENTURES OF W. R. COOPER.

The Veritable Prince of Forgery. NEW YORK, 30.—A special from London says: William Ringgold Cooper, the forger, who is wanted in San Francisco, has been arrested and identified.

A Herald special from London has the following details: The man who was arrested a week ago last, and formerly of the United States, but one of the most daring and successful forgers who ever operated, was caught in the North Atlantic squadron, during the war, after which he was on duty in the office of the navy department in Washington, where he forged the names of several paymasters to the amount of several thousand dollars. Though well known at Washington, he went to the fourth auditor's office, coolly represented himself as paymaster at Baltimore, got the money, then went to the next office and represented himself as another paymaster and secured a further sum. He was subsequently arrested. Cooper's friends represent that he died in prison, but in reality he went to San Francisco at the expiration of his term, when he became a stockbroker and committed tremendous forgeries. A year or two ago, he fled, and was never heard of again. His forgeries for the sum of $30,000. The check had been paid, and but for the foolhardiness of the forger, the signature being perfect, Cooper would have escaped; but when the detectives and the bankers thought he was back again, they sought for him in the house of Glynn, Mills & Co., where he had taken refuge, and he was subsequently arrested and demanded to know what all this talk about a forged check. He was very indignant, but was nevertheless immediately arrested. This affair further led to his detection in another forgery, perpetrated on the Bank of England in June last, for which he will be arraigned to-morrow, and will lead to discovering the manner in which he had been living in England while perpetrating these forgeries. The detectives found he had been residing at East Lodge, at Ham, near London, Hertfordshire. There he had carried out life in a sumptuous fashion. He had a house, a drag, carriages, traps, three liveried menials and a number of other servants, such as any rich gentleman in the West of England would desire to have. He followed the house and hunted and shot with the neighboring gentry. He attended the village church with pious regularity, gave grand dinner parties and donated liberally to the cause of the parish. He kept an account at the village bank, and he paid his bills promptly. His house was filled with valuable books and papers and bric-a-brac, and he was superbly furnished throughout. He was known and highly respected in the entire district. While playing the gentleman at his country seat, he paid frequent visits to London, where he went about in all sorts of strange disguises, and forging the names of his friends and down in Hertfordshire. The manner in which he imposed on astute bankers is well illustrated in the following story.

On the 28th of June a well appointed brougham was driven up to the Bank of England. A boy descended from the back seat and going up to the door of the carriage received from a gentleman inside a check and instructions to get the money for it inside. The boy was dressed in a livery, and was a suspected. The clerk asked the boy how he would have it. The boy answered, "Gold." As the bank never pays out large amounts in gold without an explanation, the paying clerk asked the boy where Godwin was. The boy answered, "Godwin." "Call him," said the clerk. The boy went and told the pseudo Godwin what the clerk had said. Cooper, who was disguised in bushy brown whiskers, refused to leave the carriage. The boy returned to the bank and told the clerk what the gentleman had said. The clerk, becoming suspicious, went to the bank, but the brougham with Godwin had disappeared. The boy, being questioned, said he was the gentleman at the Cannon Street Hotel, that he had asked him to come with him and brought him to the bank where he had asked him to present the check. As the Cannon Street Hotel he had entered his name as Neville Hunter. After leaving the bank he had his driver take him to the hotel where he alighted. The driver then noticed that Cooper had a smug face. The swindler got his luggage, drove to Charter Cross station, and dismissed the brougham. He was never heard of afterwards till his arrest last week, when detective Mitchell, chief of the absent officers of the London police, thinking that Glenn, the forger, might be the man wanted at the Bank of England, succeeded in establishing his identity. In reading the accounts of Cooper's forgeries in the London papers, it occurred to a young Mr. Kane, an American gentleman residing here, that the prisoner Cooper might be the same he had met during and after the war, when Kane was also in the navy, and who he knew committed great forgeries. Kane was induced reluctantly to attempt his identification in the interest of the public, though he had not seen Cooper for forty years, and was never even on speaking terms with him. He went to Newgate to-day, with detective Mitchell. The governor of the prison did not want Kane to try and identify the man and did not indeed believe that he could, under the circumstances, but ultimately decided to let him make the attempt. Fifty persons were turned into the yard. They filed past the grated door behind which Kane and the governor were stationed. Man after man, slouching by, yet not the right one, when among the last few came a thin, pale, shaven man, with black hair and dark, piercing eyes, and of medium stature. "That's the man!" ejaculated Kane. "Good heaven!" exclaimed the governor, stamping his foot. "Can you identify a man whom you never knew and have not seen for fourteen years?" Kane said, "I do, positively." It was the right man. Hoppin, secretary of the legation, was applied to and promised to ask for Cooper's extradition. It is found that Cooper is wanted at San Francisco, but it is by no means likely that the prisoner will be given up until Glenn, Mills & Co. have done with him. Cooper had, or till recently had, a large quantity of California bonds at Glenn's, which were the proceeds of his exploits at San Francisco. To show the audacity of the man, it should be added that Cooper opened an account at the Bank of England soon after the forgery committed in June last. Cooper is still ignorant of the forger who identified and connected with the Bank of England forgeries. His identity remains a mystery. Forgeries to the amount of from 10,000 to 15,000 pounds on American letters of credit were recently committed, Smith, Payne & Co. being the victims. The forger got a thousand pound bank of England note from Smith's, then went to the Bank of England and represented that they were going to South America, and wanted gold. The bank people were bamboozled and gave the gold and small notes. As soon as the forgery was discovered the bank stopped the payment of the notes. The forgers changed the numbers and so passed them. No clue has been discovered to the forgers and the bank is sensibly chagrined.
