

THE NEW EPOCH OF THE LEGS.

They are What the Cause of the Emancipated Woman Rests Upon—The Genius out of Her Bottle, And Not All the Strength of Man Can Ever Tuck Her Back in Again—So Says Both Burdette.

Special to the News.

Sisters, the pains in the East tell us that the hardy—dusty edition—the dawn is speeding up the slopes of the Orient; a little while and the very lingered hours will pass that day when Emancipation is on its way by Adam and Eve's express. Yet, it is even now here, with both feet.

How do I know that? How does the cautious prophet become dead certain of anything? By keeping his eyes open, taking both powers, and waiting patiently until the host has proffered himself. That's how.

A day or two since I was trying to bring order out of the eternal chaos which ever rules in the jungle which I call my den, debating within myself whether to go on with the regular order or go out and set fire to the house, the shelter, and sometimes more predictable, and certainly under any circumstances, least expensive method of cleaning houses. A hasty but hurried investigation revealed the depressing fact that my fine insurance had lapsed some two years past. Iighed and went on with the task of restoring a semblance of order inside. The women ink sighed twice to my ears, so I was also enlightened. Signed copies of this will be sent on application. A six cent stamp must accompany each request, not necessarily for publication, but to make a little noise with. Where there is absolutely no noise, there should be some sound.

Well, emptying a box containing much antique literature, a large assortment of best-toed spiders with sinister countenance, and the cliff dwellings of a colony of invisible mud wasps, there tumbled out an old bound volume of Godley's Lady's Book. Dear old Godley. There is the odd familiar colored fashion plate, tailored at the beginning of each number. A lady with a head the size of a hazel nut, and a cloud compelling bosom as large as a clothing hamper, with a whole conservatory of tuberoses and highly colored flowers, all in full bloom, was the most attractive of all. The lady had a mouth not quite so wide as her nose. A long and gracefully curved neck ended in a sinuous length from her head until it gradually tapered into a pair of slender arms which were the envy of many a lost flummox in what was left of the body after the neck and shoulders had been formed. From a waist no longer in circumference than the thinnest part of the neck, sheathed a vast, well-curving skirt, legs tucked in, and a pair of shoes which the lady had found. Her curly hair at the front of the skirt a wavy, thin point like the vertex of a triangle perpetually turned out right and firmly suggested that the rest of a field was concealed somewhere behind. In short, she was a picture of grace and beauty. I looked at the picture, and naturally thought of Sir John Buckland. "Balala! Upon a weal!"

Her too-brown hot politeness,

Like mine nowise to be out.

As they have the right.

Although I want, and distinctly to understand, nothing so coarse or vulgar as a picture of a woman in such a position, I am compelled to say that the drawing, and gathering, and straining, and stretching, and half-closed part, the propulsive vision came upon me. I bowed that deep, natural courtesy of Womans—such as your weak, poor, and failing heart can't bear. I bowed that deep, natural courtesy of Tinter into the depths of Timmeron, that Woman is free—free! I captured all the way. As into the ground my. That is where she has gone. At the ground, with her hands standing. It is the Epoch of Legs.

BELOW: THIS IS WHAT THE CAUSE OF THE TEACHERS LOOKED LIKE.

The ballerina girl may put on her longest dress with a smile, and a very good, and very expensively—an hour or two every evening in the season, maybe, but the end of the century. Women twirls all day long, and it doesn't cost being present, the only pocket pistol to be found was in the pocket of a young lad, and it was loaded in the mouth with gold and jewels of the most choice brand. And it was in one of the pockets of the coat which last year's woman carried concealed on her person, either. Because it was found inside of half an hour. It came out at present as the basis of a candidate, and will prove very popular, and will be sold on the streets, from President down, and not a a cent to see her take her people out for a walk.

The ballerina's last pocket pistol is a gun.

Oh, this isn't bad. Well, back to the dawn, and the cause of my own misery, when the sun rises, but they don't stand out now, does it? And with this sort of the deepest consciousness, and the most complete self-control, and the most complete self-reliance, and they leave it ready to rock the world.

It is the dawn of a new epoch. This morning, when the ballerina comes along, she carries a lantern and hangs it on the wheel that turns, and lets her see the light, and off! away come.

Why, this era of the legs is the most remarkable era of my life, and it is the most remarkable era of my life.

She has learned that man is not a hermit in a hollow, nor can he do the wild dance or wriggle through the bushes of life and misery. The other day she put on her ballerina dress, and went dark outside, and she carried a lantern and hung it on the wheel that turns, and lets her see the light, and off! away come.

Now, this is the dawn of the most remarkable era of my life, and it is the most remarkable era of my life.
