

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Cincinnati Times-Star rightly says, "it is time to stop the circulation of the revolting falsehood" that the "Mormons" prayed for the death of President Garfield. Thanks.

The way is opening for the great work to be done in Palestine. It is proposed to form a united Jewish colony in the district of Gilead and Moab, the Sultan having granted 1,500,000 acres of land for the purpose.

The Louisville Post complains that "persons known to have committed the most cowardly crimes are allowed to go free by pusillanimous juries." Yet we do not hear any demands for Kentucky to be governed by a "commission."

German students have no end of fun. One of them at one university of Bonn has just been killed in a duel, another in a hospital hopelessly wounded, and another at Berlin has had his nose slashed off in a duel with sabres.

The largest snake of its species ever killed in Garrett County, Md., was recently destroyed by Joseph Lewis, of Sang Run District. It measured six feet in length and six inches in diameter, and had sixteen rattles.

A family group of seven persons, representing five generations, was photographed in Clinton, Wis., a few days ago. The oldest will be 100 years of age August 9, if she lives, and her great-grand-grandchild is a little girl of two years.

A stone has been quarried at Westerly, Rhode Island, which is said to "beat all creation" for size, thus demonstrating the fact that Yankees are ahead of either the ancients or the moderns. It is described as 150 feet long, 10 feet wide, 8 feet thick and weighing over a thousand tons, and was loosened by one oblong blast hole. This Rhode Island monolith outlines in dimensions the obelisks of Egypt.

The lady creditors of the Boston woman's bank will get some returns from the swindle after all. The assets will pay five cents on the dollar. The ladies who have thus secured a permanent investment of their funds in this bank may derive some comfort from the fact that the eagerness to be swindled is not characteristic of them alone, but that the sterner sex has a weakness in the same direction.

While bathing in Chautauqua Lake, a young lady of Jamestown, New York, had a novel and painful experience. A turtle caught hold of her ear, which caused her to scream frightfully, and but for the timely arrival of assistance she would have strangled. In order to extricate the turtle's tooth from her ear his head was cut completely off, after which it took ten minutes to pry its jaws apart. The lady went through the operation bravely, but says she will never again float in Chautauqua.

According to the preliminary returns of the census taken in Great Britain, April 4th, London, contains a population of 5,514,571; England, including the metropolis, 24,808,391; Wales, 1,359,895; Scotland, 5,704,370; Ireland, 5,158,809; Isle of Man, 33,492; Channel Islands, 57,731. Total for the United Kingdom, including estimate of seamen abroad, 35,248,582. While other parts of the United Kingdom have gained, Ireland has lost 253,538 since the census of 1871 and the year of Man 550. The net gain is 3,389,224 inhabitants, or an increase of 10.35 per cent.

Chicago, which has been boasting of its superior summer climate, has experienced the effects of the abnormal heat and the peculiar meteorological disturbances which have been felt elsewhere. In one week there were 527 deaths in the city of the lake, the highest number ever reached previously being 452. The same week of last year only gave 321. The death rate has been extremely high in all the large cities of the Union. Chicago's normal average is 18 per 1,000, but the above figures raise it to 55.52 per 1,000.

A BETTER SYSTEM REQUIRED.

When the late President Brigham Young pointed out the defects of the present public school system, and its tendency to make boys and girls think labor beneath them, a terrible outcry was raised, and his remarks were interpreted as "hostility to education." He advocated instruction in those branches of industry which would fit pupils for the battle of life and make them useful to society, and would have trades taught in connection with ordinary "book learning." For this he was greatly ridiculed and traduced, and pious preachers of various sects have taken great pains to inform the public that Brigham Young and the Mormon leaders were "foes to education."

The statement was false and those who uttered it knew well that they were misstating the facts. For "Mormonism," so-called, inculcates the necessity of acquiring knowledge, procuring intelligence as "the glory of God," and declares that no one can be saved in ignorance. However, many of its principal exponents view the common system of public education as faulty and defective and based upon incorrect notions, and would rather introduce a better way into our incipient State than follow in the beaten track, which bears the imprint of many folies and the proofs of many evil results. We have noticed lately the declaration of similar sentiments to those of President Young by public men and several able writers. Just now we are attracted by some remarks of the Birmingham (Illinois) Bulletin on this subject, for which it has been taken to task by one of its local contemporaries and accused of being an enemy to the public schools. The Bulletin responds as follows:

"The Journal cannot deny that the teachers in our high schools and the professors in our colleges disparage labor by teaching either directly or indirectly the vicious lesson that all young male Americans should strive to become lawyers, doctors, preachers, merchant princes, or railroad men, with the ultimate object in view of attaining the presidency or at least the gubernatorial office or a seat in Congress. This vicious lesson has a tendency to make Guineas, who become swindlers, thieves and murderers because they believe the work of the mechanic or day-laborer to be disgraceful. This vicious lesson also teaches young female Americans that they should be authors, or the wives of millionaires or presidents or governors or officeholders or professional men, and in this way often make a frivolous or bad woman of a girl who might have become useful to the world as a cook or washerwoman, or dressmaker, or mother of some honest workman's children."

Our teachers must learn to teach that labor with the hands is as honorable as brain labor. That the blacksmith is as necessary a member of the community as the lawyer—that tailoring is as honorable a calling as doctoring—that bookkeeping, the sole business of an honest man, which is a soul business of another kind—that cooking is as little to be deprecated as making a palette ship float upon a painted ocean.

If popular education cannot teach respect for labor—then education is a bad thing and our school-rooms will become rogue-manufactories. We cordially agree with the Bulletin in these sentiments, and will add, that unless morality and a belief in the Supreme Being, with the consequent doctrine of human accountability for individual acts, and of divine judgment with adequate rewards and punishments, are also taught in connection with secular learning, the public school system will prove worse than a failure, society will become more and more corrupt, and decay will overtake the greatest Republic the world has ever seen.

This is a subject worthy of the profoundest thought of our best minds. The Latter-day Saints must establish and support a system of education of their own, which shall include physical, industrial, moral and spiritual training with the intellectual instruction which goes by the name of education, or our children will not be fitted and prepared for the mighty work which will very soon be rolled upon their shoulders.

A FAR-FETCHED ASSUMPTION.

We have refrained from noticing the report of the death of the confessed villain and murderer, Klingensmith, and the absurd comments made by the press as to "Mormon" responsibility for his sudden taking off. But the reports concerning the affair are so widespread that we take the opportunity of referring to them that it may not be stated truthfully that we dare not say anything about it.

Klingensmith, it will be remembered was an apostate who figured in the trial of John D. Lee, and by his own confession was as bad as the man whose life paid the forfeit for his terrible crime, after being convicted by a "Mormon" jury. Klingensmith's testimony was utterly unreliable, because he told so many different stories, made so many false pretenses and was evidently as bad a man that his oath was not worth any more than his reckless, unsworn word. After the trial he pretended that he was afraid of the "Mormons," but proved by his actions that his claim was nothing but vain pretence, and that he not only had no cause for such an expression but that he did not believe it himself. If the "Mormon" had desired to injure him they had ample opportunity to do so both before and after the trial which he was a witness. It is now claimed that he is dead, and that in an unexplained manner the "Mormons" killed him. As a specimen paragraph we take this from the Philadelphia News.

"There is no reasonable doubt that the Mormon authorities inspired the murder. Of course, this will not be proven, and even the murderers will with difficulty be caught and convicted. And yet all are morally sure as to the real responsibility. This evil of Mormonism, murderous and corrupt as it is, must be dealt with. It is a fearful reproach to the country. It violates our laws. It is a crime. Yet it actually extends its political influence, and grows unchecked. Sooner or later rigid measures must be taken. It must be rooted out. Its crime affords an ample reason for direct and repressive laws. The sooner they are enacted, the better. In the meantime such laws as we have are being rigidly enforced. They are sufficient, if vigorously pressed, to stop the growth, and seriously cripple the influence of the Mormon church."

Is not this a splendid sample of newspaper reasoning and consistency? Klingensmith, it is said, was found dead in Sonora, Mexico. It is not clearly established that the body found was that of Klingensmith. He was such an arrant liar that he may have started the story himself. But supposing he is dead and was killed, where is the connection between his death in Mexico and the "Mormons" in Utah? There is none, except in the vivid imagination of some anti-"Mormon," who has started the absurd hypothesis, and it is seized at once by shallow writers ready to "pitch into the 'Mormons,'" on the shortest notice. There is about as much connection between Utah and Sonora as there is between Philadelphia and Peru. And then the "Mormons" are not a killing people. If they were given to deeds of blood, as falsely reported, there are infamous scoundrels right close to home who would be made to bite the dust. The fact that they are unlying is proof that the "Mormons" are entirely unswerving of the reputation for violence so lavishly manufactured for them.

Without any reason for saying so, without a single item of evidence for the assertion, the Philadelphia News states the "Mormon" authorities inspired the murder, and then goes on to argue on the ground of the unsupported supposition, that "Mormonism" must be "rooted out." "Mormonism" therefore the "Mormon" Church must be "rooted out," and "direct and repressive laws" must be enacted and "vigorously pressed" so that the system may be dealt with. Logic with a vengeance! Evidence most conclusive! Conclusion most profound! Really it appears that the statement made recently by a distinguished American that half the people he meets are insane, has some truth in it, and it is very evident that among the lunatic half are those editors who make an attempt to air their hallucinations on the subject of "Mormonism."

CRITICAL CONDITION OF THE PRESIDENT.

TO-DAY'S dispatches from the Executive Mansion at Washington, concerning the condition of President Garfield are of such a character as almost to exclude hope of his recovery. There has been, for the past twenty-four hours, the most intense excitement in Washington, and the eminently critical situation of the President has not warranted the issuance of bulletins calculated to allay this feeling. The White House and the grounds have been literally besieged with reporters and others seeking the latest reliable information as to the condition of the Chief Magistrate, and every one seen emerging from the White House has been closely questioned, and even the intelligence of his slightest symptoms is eagerly sought after. Of course, rumors of all kinds are rife; but the fact that Attorney-General MacVeagh has abandoned all hope is very significant. The Doctors are very reticent and avoid interviewing as much as possible, but all admit that the case, to say the least, is very serious, more so than at any time, since the President was shot. The latest authentic dispatches inform us that the President's pulse is still high, but that his temperature has fallen below the normal, which latter fact is conceded by the attending surgeons to be a dangerous symptom.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION.

WASHINGTON, 15.—Dr. Bliss wrote the following at 10 o'clock p. m., to a reporter in answer to a note: "The President is sleeping without any symptoms, his pulse is less by ten beats since the evening bulletin, temperature not above 99.6, respiration 20, altogether he is in a refreshing condition than at 8:30; his stomach has not vomited since 4:30 p. m. His stomach is sleeping without any symptoms, his pulse is still high, but that his temperature has fallen below the normal, which latter fact is conceded by the attending surgeons to be a dangerous symptom."

Official Bulletin.

Executive Mansion, 8:30 a. m., 16.—The President was somewhat restless and vomited several times during the early part of the night. Since 3 o'clock this morning he has not vomited and has slept tranquilly most of the time. Nutritious enemata are successfully employed to sustain him. Altogether his symptoms appear less urgent than yesterday afternoon. At present his pulse is 110, temperature 98.6, respiration 18.

Signed, attending physicians.

Official.—Executive Mansion, 12:30 p. m.—The President has been tranquil and has not vomited since the morning bulletin, but has not yet rallied from the prostration of yesterday evening, as was hoped. The enemata administered are, however, still retained. At present, his pulse is 114, temperature 98, respiration 18.

Signed, attending physicians.

Special Report.—There has been the greatest excitement here today about the President since the day that he was shot. Business was almost entirely suspended and people were running everywhere hunting for the latest news. The White House was filled and throngs pressed about the gates. The excitement started with the morning bulletin, which was considered very unfavorable. The midday bulletin, however, reassuring the people, increased the uneasiness, and the night bulletin made matters still worse. Everybody wanted to find out what the surgeons thought of the case and what hopes they had, but this was rather difficult to ascertain, as the surgeons kept themselves out of sight. This added to the alarm, and at night the whole population was on the streets going to their homes and to the White House. The surgeons remained close by the President, and the grounds at the White House were thronged. But little could be learned that could be called definite; those who had access to the rooms near the President and doctors would say little. Col. Corbin said the situation was critical. Attorney-General McVeagh told Senator Fugate, of Alabama, it was useless to deny that the case was as critical as could be. Ex-Sheriff Daggett, of Brooklyn, who has access to the personal attendants of the President said it was as bad as could be. All this seemed to increase the feeling of alarm, but gave no satisfaction as to the state of the case. It was plain all day that all the surgeons were alarmed, there was no concealing that fact. Various rumors were spread and could be heard everywhere. About 9 o'clock the president agent got to see Dr. Bliss, he said he was in a hurry to get back to the President, but would take time to say that this was a most critical turn of the President's malady. It was a complication that was not looked for. Last night, said Bliss, the President's stomach went back on him and he was unable to get any food. The wound was doing all right, there was no trouble from that as yet, it is discharging freely, the pus that is secreted. The whole trouble is with his stomach.

from dyspepsia for several years. We know that, and therefore handled it at stomach gently, and administered only such nourishment as could be assimilated, at first gave liquid nourishment and followed with solids, as the President's stomach grew better. His stomach worked well enough up to last night, when it gave way suddenly. This causes the present trouble. The stomach will not assimilate anything, not even a spoonful of water, he has thrown up everything given him to-day. The President must have nourishment. For a time after he was shot it was not so essential, he had fat enough then to sustain him; now that he is exhausted he must be kept up with nourishment. The waste goes on all the time. The question is "Can we keep up the supply." Can you do it doctor? asked the reporter. "We can for awhile there is no doubt of that, but whether we can nourish and sustain the President by enemata until his stomach recuperates is the all important question." "Doctor, do you consider the case hopeless?" "No, not by any means, the President still has a chance to get well, a very fair chance, his stomach can gain strength, soon and then there would be no doubt of it." "Doctor," asked the reporter, "does a patient sometimes grow so weak that the fever exhausts itself?" "Not until dissolution sets in and that is not the case with the President; if his stomach resumes its functions he will mend right along, there is no other trouble."

At 10 o'clock there was an enormous crowd at the White House and the grounds were crowded. Everybody was seeking news, but the surgeons were still inaccessible. Dr. Reburn told Attorney-General MacVeagh, at 8 this morning, that he could not say that the President's stomach was in any better condition. MacVeagh has given up all hope of the President's recovery, and says he doubts that he would not recover for three weeks.

Washing Fluid. Here is a very valuable receipt for your paper: One pound of lime slaked with boiling water. Put on enough so that after settling there will be one gallon of lime-water. Keep the lime-water in a bottle, the pour off. Add to this one-half pound of sal soda and one-half pound of borax, previously dissolved in a quart of hot water. Cork tight in stone jug when cool. Soak the clothes two hours in warm soda, rub slightly; soap well and put in a boiler of cold water, in which you have poured two-thirds of a teaspoon of the washing fluid. Boil and rinse in the usual manner. The clothes will be beautifully white with half the labor.

OBITUARY.

Killed at Wellsville, Cache Valley, July 21st, 1881, by being run over by his team and wagon, DANIEL HILL; born April 24, 1807, in Johnston, Scotland. Emigrated to Canada when about 18 years of age, with his father's family of 9 persons, settled on clear off two farms, the first in the Bathurst district, township of Lunenburg, where they lived some twelve years; then moved to the Home District, Canada west, here he married Elizabeth Dryce, cleared another farm and, in the spring of 1840, first heard the gospel preached by Elder Samuel Lake, who baptized him and all his father's family, and in the fall of 1841 gathered with the Saints to Nauvoo, Illinois, and when the Presidency had to leave in the winter of 1845, he took his command and went as far as Garden Grove, Utah, took his study into Watrous, Iowa; ran a flour mill a year or more, after which he went to Wauvick, Illinois, where he attended a stone flour mill, and had many an encounter with the notorious Dan Shays, and others for two or three years. Emigrated to Salt Lake City in 1852; lived in the Ninth Ward till the move south; attended President Young's mills here and at Box Elder. Then he and his brother John moved to Wellsville, Cache Valley, and built the first flour mill, where he lived till his death. Within the last twelve years he has been back to Canada twice, on business. He has been mayor of Wellsville for a number of years, and has been a member of the Seventies. At his death he left seven sons, six married, and three daughters, thirty-eight grand children and three great grandchildren. He mourns his loss without a murmur within half an hour after the accident happened and was conscious to the last.
