Nauvoo temple and gathered around them the temporal blessings and were prepared to enjoy life when persecution culminated in their expulsion from their beautiful city in common with their fellow religionists. In the spring of 1846 the family with the entire population of Nauvoo crossed the Mississippi river into the wilderness of Iowa. The Cluff family made a brief stop at Bonaparte, on the Des Moines river, from there they went on to Pileah, and after many trying vicissitudes they came to the valley in 1850, and after investigation, the family decided to make Provo their home. During the "Walker Indian War" Benjamin served as a soldier of defense and in 1855, President George A. Smith called him to go to Parowan to defend the few colonists there. Returning to Provo he married Miss Mary Ellen Foster, but in 1854 he returned to Parowan with his wife, going back to Provo in 1855. Shortly after Benjamin was called by the first presidency to go to Las Vegas, where he continued until the approach of the "Jointment Army" when all missionaries were called home. In 1882 Elder Cluff located in Logan. In 1884 he was called at a general conference to go on a mission to the Sandwich Islands where his wife joined him in 1885. He assisted President George Nebeker in starting the Latter-day Saint plantation on the island of Oahu. He was released to return home in 1890. He did not, however, remain long in Logan but moved to Coalville, where he assisted in building the railroad from Coalville to Chalk Creek, after which he moved to Center ward, near Helper City, and was made Bishop of that ward. While here his wife Ellen died, the mother of seven children. After serving the ward for 16 years his children were attracted to the Brigham Young academy and he accordingly moved to Provo. He finally moved to Arison where he lived until 1899. In 1897 his wife Mary Ellen died also leaving seven children. In 1908, he accepted his son Benjamin's invitation to accompany him to his home in Mexico, so in the spring of that year he left with his son to live in Mexico. He was ordained a patriarch under the hands of President Joseph F. Smith a few years previous to his departure. He was a faithful Latter-day Saint, and leaves a family of 12 children, numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren with a host of friends to cherish the memory of a noble man of God.
