

ATTACK AT NIGHT CAUSE OF ALARM

Quiet Residence Section on Capitol Hill Scene of Activity Last Night.

HAPPENED AFTER DARK.

Men, Women and Children Were Frightened by Rifle Firing Just as The Retiring Hour Was at Hand.

Capitol Hill residents were stirred last night by what they thought to be a running fight against a bandit band. The firing of rifles punctuated by sharp commands aroused them about 10 o'clock from their evening repose. Nestling among the rocks of the hills in quiet, the homes quickly flashed with the turning on of lights, porches were soon filled with curious men and boys and peering from behind doors just after the women of the section peered forth into the darkness to see what was afoot. Crouching low to the ground men with brass buttons and rifles scurried here and there, kneeling now and then behind a rock or bush to fire, and then to rush on again. The neighborhood was by this time thoroughly awake and the bolder spirits sallied forth to investigate. The first to return from the scene of activity reported that there was no occasion for fear. Many of the others stayed with the riflemen to see the pursuit end.

The cause of the stir on the hill was company C of the National Guard of Utah under command of Capt. H. K. Eadie with Lieut. Simpson and Sheets, the company being put through an exercise in night attack by an advance guard against an enemy's outpost. Leaving the armory shortly after 8 o'clock last night in light marching order with overcoats and leggings and armed with rifles and blank cartridges, the company was marched to State and North Temple streets. From that point Sgt. Smith was sent with a detachment to form the enemy's outpost. His instructions were to dispose it between the graves on the south. Ensign Peak on the north and City creek on the east. The other members of the company were kept in ignorance of the location to which the outpost was assigned.

SCOUTS SET OUT. With pieces loaded and locked, the scouts from the guard went north up the hill. Crouching near the ground, ever on the alert, they searched for signs of the enemy. Finally, after much ground had been covered in vain quest for the enemy, they observed a movement behind a bush. Just duty had observed his observer and lay in wait for his advance, not knowing that he himself had been seen. The scout pushed forward with caution and got very near the sentinel. He retreated under cover and reported his find to the commander of the advance. Then the support was brought up and the forward movement began in the direction pointed out by the scout who had found the sentinel. Cautious though the advance was, the sentinel observed the movement toward them and firing to spread the alarm to the hypothetical support of the outpost started things moving in lively fashion. The advancing party drove the outpost back and when the action had succeeded as far as the outline of the hill, the assembly was sounded and the enemy good naturedly joined with the attacking force and the formation was made for the hike home. The officers undertaken in lively fashion and the company arrived at the armory shortly after 11 o'clock in good spirits without a casualty list.

TO BE GIVEN MONTHLY. A good attendance added to the success of the exercise, which was the first of a series for the winter, one to be given each month. The principles of the lesson were learned in the armory, the non-commissioned officers being given separate training in a non-commissioned officers' school, which is conducted by the commissioned officers of the company. The officers are now for study in an officers' school and thus from the text-book to the maneuver site is a progressive course requiring close application, but to an interesting subject. The principal lesson sought to be impressed on the infantrymen last night was the danger incurred when a soldier moves in too erect a position, his form being silhouetted against the sky or other background, and thus he exposes himself to observation and fire. That this principle was well understood by the men last night is proved by the fact that the outposts were not seen by the scouts, nor the scouts within a few yards of each other. The first exercise of the series was much enjoyed by the men last night, and the program promises to be an interesting feature of the winter's instruction in the national guard.

CHANGE OF TITLE.

The following circular was issued this morning, from the office of General Manager Bancroft of the Oregon Short Line:

"Effective this date, O. H. Jenkinson is appointed assistant treasurer of this company with office at Salt Lake City, and will perform duties heretofore assigned to him as local treasurer. The title of local treasurer is hereby abolished."

The title of local treasurer has been used ever since the organization of the O. S. L. But to secure uniformity in official titles among the various officials of the National Guard, it is abolished, and the local treasurers of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Oregon Short Line are now called assistant treasurers, the general treasurer being Mr. Crosby in New York.

PROVO MILLS TO BE SOLD.

The Company Will Dispose of the Plant in the Highest Bidder.

Much interest will be caused by the appearance of an advertisement in this issue of The News signed by Messrs. Reed, Smith, George, R. H. and John C. Corder representing the Provo Woolen Mills company of Provo. As is generally known, the plant of this company has not been worked for some years past and a recent census taken of the stockholders on a charge of insolvency, and they would submit to a considerable assessment for the purpose of starting up the plant again, or whether they preferred to sell the property to the highest bidder, resulted in a decision in favor of the latter, and the advertisement is inserted in accordance therewith.

MORE COMPETITION TO FOLLOW MERGER

Such Is the Opinion of Local Manager W. S. Hawk of the Postal Telegraph Company.

Manager W. S. Hawk of the Postal company said this morning, relative to the absorption of the Western Union Telegraph company by the American company interests at Boston, that while the Postal company is the heaviest stockholder in the American Telegraph & Telephone company, it does not hold a controlling interest, though no doubt the fact that it holds so much stock makes it a factor not to be overlooked in shaping the American company's policies and general management. Manager Hawk did not think the move necessarily meant any merger of the Western Union and Postal interests. On the contrary he rather believed it meant an even more strenuous competition between the two companies for business. Attempts were made in the Postal's early days by the Western Union, he said, to effect a consolidation, or merger of some kind with the Western Union; but it was always Mr. Mackey's policy to remain an independent corporation, and give the public the benefit that always accompanies competition. Up to date there is nothing to indicate any change in this policy of the company.

Supt. A. H. May of the Western Union at San Francisco, and now in town, had no opinion to offer. He is here on a sad errand, in connection with the funeral of his wife's brother, so that his attention had been given to entirely other matters for the last few days. Local Manager Long had received no intelligence beyond what was stated in the Associated Press dispatches.

Mr. Richards suffered from an epileptic fit last Monday, and was taken to the emergency hospital, where he was attended by Dr. F. B. Steinhilber, who pronounced his condition so serious that he was removed to St. Mark's. He steadily sank beneath the attack of the disease.

Mr. Richards came here from the east several years ago. He was well known in Denver and other western cities, where he worked on various newspapers. He received his education at Phillips Exeter academy, New Hampshire, and Harvard university. He was a man of fine address and brilliant attainments. At one time he was considered the best sporting writer in this part of the country. He is survived by a mother, who lives in the east.

SIXTY DAYS FOR AMTORG.

Amfort was sentenced to serve 60 days.

ANDERSON IS ARRAIGNED.

Thomas Anderson, colored, by his attorney Samuel King, waived preliminary hearing on a charge of murder in the first degree, in police court this morning, and was bound over to the district court for trial by Judge Bowman. Anderson is alleged to have killed William Smith, colored, April 7 of this year, in a shooting scrape that followed a row between the two men in a Commercial street saloon.

KNOX CONFIRMS KNUTSFORD SALE

Banker Headed Syndicate for Its Purchase but Was Superseded.

REALTY CONTINUES ACTIVE.

State Street Storm Center of Demand For Business Property—North End Booming.

Frank Knox, president of the National Bank of the Republic, this morning said that the Knutsford hotel property had undoubtedly been sold and that the consummation of the deal awaited only the perfection of the records in court. He said that some time ago he, as the head of a syndicate had made an offer for the property, but that in the time granted for the completion of the deal a better offer had been received and the opportunity had been lost.

"I am not entirely familiar with the details of the deal," he said this morning, "but the last I can say is that it has been bought because of the fact that that portion of the city looks good to investors, as it has to me, and they got in on the ground floor. Just what disposition they are going to make of the property I do not know. They may hold it until the lease runs out on the hotel property, or they may acquire the lease."

"I do not know definitely just what it is intended to do with the property, but the business is undoubtedly good, and from what I know of the people who I think have acquired the property the improvements will be in thorough consonance with those in that part of the city."

ACQUIRE PHILIPS PROPERTY.

Mr. Knox also said that the Philips property, diagonally across the street from the Knutsford hotel, had been bought by a number of investors, and that it had been acquired on a 99-year lease. Just what improvements were to be made the banker could not say, but it is a fact that the section of the Boston and Newhouse buildings, the new Commercial club, the Newhouse hotel, and the big day building on the corner of Fourth South and Main have acted as a huge lodestone for real estate investments of late. This district has been the mecca of activity, and in contradistinction to other real estate dealings throughout the city, the investments here have been of a permanent character, and not for the purpose of turning over money.

NORTH END COMING UP.

Notwithstanding the fact that unwanted activity has manifested itself on south Main, there is a very strong undercurrent which is backing up toward the north end of the city. This district has been the mecca of activity, and in contradistinction to other real estate dealings throughout the city, the investments here have been of a permanent character, and not for the purpose of turning over money.

STATE STORM CENTER.

In the past month the wind has veered to the east of south Main, and State street now is the storm center. Inquiries daily by both local and out-of-town investors have been for State street property. This, of course, holds true only for business properties. The demand for residence lots and buildings has increased in great leaps of late, and while the greatest section is to the south and southwest, the demand has been very general all over the city, with the bulk east of Main street.

OTHER BIG DEALS.

There are deals on at the present time aggregating over a million dollars, according to prominent dealers on the street. Just what these are the street is not ready to divulge for the reason that nearly all of the buyers demand secrecy in order to obtain contiguous properties before a great inflation takes place. The buyers are about evenly divided between local investors and those representing out-of-town capitalists who are attracted to the great growth of Salt Lake. It is known that the Cliff property, at Third South and Main, is under consideration by an eastern syndicate which contemplates the erection of a new skyscraper on lower Main. This is an old landmark, and will be wiped away by the march of progress to the south. F. D. Cliff, broker of the property, would neither confirm nor deny the sale, but intimated that the news of a possible deal was not entirely without foundation. The corner one of the most valuable in the city and it is understood that a frontage of about 50 feet on south Main street with something over 100 on Third South is the property which is desired.
