LETTER FROM LA PLATA.

Editor Deseret News:

Here we are in the new mining district of Cache county. This camp has now about fifty claims all snowing ore, but as yet there has not been any one of them proven to be very rich, in fact, only one has assayed 125 ounces of silver; the rest go low in lead. The showing thus far is good, but does not justify the noise it has received. There are about 200 men at work in the mines and prospecting and about 100 coming and going a day. It is well that they are close to home, so that those that are disappointed do not lose much time.

One thing noticeable is that Salt Lake is but few and far between. Today there were only seven men. This might be called Ogden's addition, as most of the comers and goers are Ogden people. It might be called Ogden's picnic ground. We have seen the father with his wife and children, and the young man with his sweetheart showing her around the mines as though their future happiness depended on them. The old man of 80 and the youth of 15 are seen with pick or shovel on their shoulders climbing the hills, smiling and sweating, happy in the morning, disappointed at night, some leaving next day the others trying it again.

The camp is situated in the mountains as most of mining camps are, but it is a beautiful sight. Coming down the hill all at once you see forty or fifty tents, small and large, ranged on either side of Main street, with the camp fires on the hills on every side. It is life indeed.

Supper over early, the evening is spent in groups in front of some tent that has a fire in front of it, discussing the day's find, the value of the find, the formation, the future of the camp, with here and there a song, and once in a while a yell something like a Comanche Indian.

The town has four restaurants, six stores, one butcher shop, where one can buy beef cheaper than in Salt Lake City, two bakers' shops with bread at ten cents a loaf, four whisky shops, and one blacksmith shop, with prices but little higher than in the city.

Here old timers meet. I have seen men here that have been in every mining camp excitement since there were camps in the west; indeed it is both amusing and affecting to see some of these veteran prospectors meet; the chilliness of time in their eyes gives way to a twinkle of brightness when they grasp hands, with the exclamation: "Is this you, John? I last saw you in White Pine," another, "The last time we met in Deadwood, in fact as soon as an excitement springs up the old prospector is sure to be there." It is safe to say there are now twenty men in this camp that have been in every mining camp in the United States and Mexico. To give you even a short sketch of their life and habits would take too much time now; will try and do so later; suffice to say give me an old time prospector, and I will show you not only a good man but one generous to a fault.

The city was surveyed yesterday and is being graded today, but not on the same plan of grade as Salt Lake.

This one does not destroy the property adjacent.

To give the reader an idea of the comers and goers, there never was a wagon or buggy or carriage made that the like has not arrived in this camp. With this the reader can only draw on his imagination to get an idea of the helter skelter of getting here and getting back again.

H. J. FAUST.

DEATH OF MRS. FRANK JENNINGS

Mrs. Frank W. Jennings passed peacefully from this to the spirit world at 3:45 August 27th. The deceased was widely and well known as a lady of many virtues, and a feeling of deep sorrow will prevail among her many relatives and friends in consequence of her death. She had been ill for four weeks, but serious results were not anticipated until a few days ago when it became known that death was almost certain. She was the daughter of the late H. P. and Phoebe T. Kimball and was 31 years of age.

She leaves a husband and three children ranging from four weeks to eleven years.

Amid much manifestation of genuine sorrow on the part of the several hundreds of friends present, the funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Frank W. Jennings took place at the family residence, South Temple street, on Saturday afternoon. No stronger evidence could have been given of the great love and esteem in which the deceased lady was held by her wide circle of acquaintances during life than that displayed at these last sad ceremonies, for scarcely a dry eye was to be seen among the vast multitude during their progress.

The opening prayer was offered by Elder H. W. Naisbitt, and Bishop Whitney (cousin of the deceased) followed with a touching address, full of sympathy towards the bereaved husband and children. A male and also a mixed quartette were afterwards given, the singers being Messrs. Pyper, Whitney, Spencer and Goddard; Mrs. Pyper and Misses Knowlton and Edith Clawson. The closing prayer was offered by President George Q. Cannon. An unusually long line of carriages followed the remains to the cemetery, where the dedicatory prayer was said by Bishop George Romney, and the ladies and gentlemen above named rendered an appropriate anthem.

The floral tributes were very numerous, and embraced some exquisite designs. The members of the Home Dramatic Club sent a pedestal and cross, surmounted by a wreath and dove, and other offerings were as follows: Pillow, Mrs. Priscilla Jennings; pillow, C. J. Stanford; anchor, Harold Jennings; pillow, W. B. Main; star, Mrs. William McIntyre; pillow, Mr. and Mrs. Brent Wells; anchor and star, C. S. Burton; harp, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Jennings; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Jennings; cycle, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Wood; cross, Harry Jennings; basket, Mr. and Mrs. Farlow; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. Webber; anchor, John Carlisle; lyre, Mr. and Mrs. James Jennings; Mr. and Mrs. Walt Jennings; bouquet,
