He states as to the sulphide mine that the values are so variable and the number of tons avail-able so indeterminate, that it is better to look upon any profits derived from this source as a means of fiding over until the mill is working to its full ca-pacity. It is possible, however, he states, that vigorous prospecting may disclose an exceedingly valuable prop-erty. erty. ASCERTAIN COSTS.

ASCERTAIN COSTS. The report ands with the following: "The development of the underground mine should be pushed until such time as the full extent of the payable are in the porphyry mine is more accurate-ly known. The mill should be brought up to its full capacity at the envirat-possible date, and should be worked at such capacity until such time as the figures for working costs can be veri-field. If those figures prove to be as retimated in this report, then sufficient money should be raised to double the capacity of the ndil, to pre-mint of enough stripping to be done to permit of steam shovel mining, and to pro-vide sufficient trading capital to finance six months' work of the mine and mill, and the necessary excess development and the necessary excess development in the porphyry mine."
