He said he had learned to love President Partridge, in the years in which they had worked to-gether in the Stake presidency, because he had become acquainted with sthe man and with his object in life, which the speaker had ever found to be high and noble. President Partridge had been conscientious and earnest in all big labors, he had been here of modifi-

his labors: he had been born of goodly parents, had learned 'Mormonism' in his youth, and had no other desire than to perform all his duties in the church. He had expressed himself before and during his last illness as being ready to go to his reward, and had felt joy in th thought that he had so ordered his life that he was not ashamed to meet his Maker or his friends who have passed befor

Elder Smoot spoke highlyof the many noble qualities of President Partridge and his good example, and spoke of the pleasure and satisfaction it gave him (the speaker) to know that all the children of President Partridge were faith-ful members of the Church and were following in the footsteps of their father, which would insure them a place by their father's side when called to leave this life. Elder Smoot then read the following telegram:

had been said by Elder-Smoot and the other speakers, and to the love and union which had characterized the la-bors of the presidency of the Stake during President Partridge's connec-tion with the quorum. He also spoke of the resignation with which the de-ocased had met death, and of his de-aire that his funeral should be con-ducted without optemation.

are that his runeral should be con-ducted without estentation. Elder Stephen L. Chipman spoke of the unity which had existed in the quorum of the Stake presidency, since the speaker became a member, and hoped he might so live that when his time to pass away came, so much good could truthfully be said of him as had been said of President Partridge.

President Geo. Q. Cannon was the inst speaker: he said that whon he heard of the illness of President Partridge he had not expected his death t follow so soon; but, from the remark follow no soon; but, from the remarks of the previous speakers. Brother Part-ridge was, without doubt, prepared for the end. The speaker referred to the birth of the departed in the land of Zion in the days of great tribulation, of his busy life in promoting the wei-fare of his fellow men, of his great love for the principles of the Gospel, and his integrity in all the relations of life.
