FRENCH SEAMEN AT WORK.

Paris, June 6.—The seamen at practically all the ports of France this morning obeyed the order of the national committee at Marseilles and returned to work.

now representing Haywood, and from J. C. Sullivan, president of the state federation of labor.

Mr. Richardson listened keenly to this part of the witness's story and made notes upon it. Haywood, surrounded by his family and attorneys, sat stolid at times, but on occasions leaned far forward in his chair, gazing steadily at Orchard with his single eye.

Orchard said he decided to prepare a bomb to place beneath Peabody's bedroom window at Canon City, Colo.

The state here created something of a sensation by producing in evidence the lead casing of the bomb. It was the size of a two-gallon can. Orchard identified it. He said he had shown the casing to Pettibone in Denver and loaded it in the basement of Pettibone's store, the latter assisting him. Thirty pounds of giant powder were used.

Pettibone, Orchard declared, gave him $100 before he returned to Canon City with the bomb. On his way to the latter place a companion heard a clock ticking in the grip with the bomb and wanted to know what it was.

"I told him jokingly that it was a bomb, and I was going to put it under Peabody's bed. I got a chance," Orchard went on. "But when I reported this conversation to Pettibone, he told me I had better not try it on Peabody at that time. He said, however, that he wanted something pulled off before the convention, and he must have something to show for the money we'd spent."

"Pettibone and I then went to work and prepared a bomb for Judge Gabbert. We made it out of a half-gallon tin can, using 19 pounds of giant powder."

ON GABBERT'S TRAIL.

"Pettibone and I planted the bomb in a vacant lot which Judge Gabbert crossed on his way home. We left a wire out of the bomb and to this we intended fastening a pocket book, the lead casing of the bomb, and the bottle of sulphuric acid inside the bomb. We tried one day to fasten the wire, but Judge Gabbert came too fast and we had to leave it alone."

"Pettibone had to go next day to Salt Lake to attend the convention of the Western Federation of Miners, leaving me to attend to Judge Gabbert. He said we must certainly do something before the convention. I was afraid to touch the old bomb, so I prepared a new one. As Judge Gabbert started out to his home, I rode ahead of him on a bicycle and fastened the pocket book to the wire. I rode off down town and did not hear an explosion until an hour afterward. A man named Wally had picked up the wire and was killed. Judge Gabbert had passed without noticing it."

When he reported the result to Pettibone, the latter said it was "hard luck."

GEN. SHERMAN BELL MARKED.

Orchard told the details of his movements almost day by day, stretching the conversation to its longest length. He said the next man selected for attack was Sherman Bell, former adjutant general of Colorado, who had been instrumental in securing the bomb for Orchard. It was decided to buy a rig to drive out to Bell's house. He took Haywood to ride in the rig and then bought it for $155. The big rig was sent to the house of the name. He and Pettibone drove out to Bell's house several nights in succession. About this time Meyer returned to Colorado and when he ordered it stopped. Meyer, Orchard declared, said he did not want anything pulled off in Denver while he was there, as he would surely be arrested. He also said he had some outside work which was very important.

Orchard had now brought his story down to August, 1906.

The witness went back to June of the same year, however, to tell of another attempt on Judge Goddard. This was made a few days after the failure to "get" Judge Gabbert. The bomb for Judge Goddard was planted in a grass plot near the gate leading into the front yard of his residence. The connection with the bomb broke in some manner without exploding it. Orchard said he examined the place and found the grass dead where the bomb was planted—this being due to the escaping sulphuric acid fumes.

After this failure, Orchard said he discussed matters pretty thoroughly. "Meyer told me he thought we ought to get rid of Johnny Neville. I knew too much about the Independence day affair and was demanding money," said Orchard. Then for the first time the witness came down to the Steunenberg case.

THE STEUNENBERG PLOT.

"Haywood suggested," he said, "that we ought to get ex-Gov. Steunenberg. He thought that if we got him after letting him go seven or eight years and then went back to Paterson, N. J., and wrote letters to Judge Gabbert, Judge Goddard, Peabody, Bell and others, telling them they would get the same thing as Steunenberg. It would show them they were not forgotten either and would have a good effect. Meyer said it would be better than killing them, that it would be a living death, for they would be confronted by the thought always of somebody waiting for them."

MEN SENT TO CALDWELL.

"Haywood said he had sent several men to Caldwell to do the Steunenberg job. Among them were Minnie Art Bascom, McCarthy and Steve Adams. Minster was a miner—a member of the union. I didn't know McCarthy. Pettibone and Haywood told me that Steve

GOV. CUTLER FOR CONSOLIDATION.
Chief Executive Addresses Graduates of University on Local State Issues.

BIG CEREMONIAL PARADE.

It is Headed by Normal Girls in White Gowns. Regents Bringing up the Rear.

Joshua Goddard and Florence Rosenberg Contribute Student Numbers To Program.

With a ceremonial parade such as has never before been attempted in Utah, the thirty-eighth annual commencement of the state university was celebrated today. The conclusion of a program of music and speeches, President Kingsbury called each graduate before him, and delivered the university diploma, in the case of degree graduates, and a certificate for those who leave the normal course.

The exercises are the first ever held on the campus, as no building was large enough to accommodate the friends of the graduating classes until the recent completion of the gymnasium. Prior to that the exercises were held in the Salt Lake theater, and the formalities were confined to an assembly of the graduates, the normal students, the state officers, the regents, and the college students in caps and gowns.

This morning a parade formed with the Kingsbury Normal band, the Normal students following, the two groups making a beautiful effect in white gowns. Behind them the caps and gowns of the degree men and women made a pleasing contrast in black, and then came the faculty, alumni, state officials, and guests, the entire body of the parade.

Inside the gymnasium, the entire upper floor had been filled with seats, and an open area preceding the parade in rendering concert numbers. Inside the gymnasium, the entire upper floor had been filled with seats, and an open area preceding the parade in rendering concert numbers.

GOV. CUTLER'S ADDRESS.

In taking up the question of "Responsibilities of Citizenship," Gov. Cutler went directly into local conditions, addressed the graduates upon the "Citizenship" which they had created, and hoped that they would carry this love into their duties as citizens.

On the general question of loyalty to state and nation, Gov. Cutler declared that the right of the state to educate its young men and women rested on the fact that the state regards the citizens as the sovereign and not the king. He therefore must be prepared to assume and to carry his responsibilities, and to understand them. Recalling the recent celebration of Memorial day, he declared that the great sacrifice of lives would not have been necessary in the Civil war had the people more generally understood the principles upon which our free government is based. The agitation and disturbance were confined to a few individuals, and the state would respond more cheerfully to the educational demands, and would do it with a feeling that the funds were being invested to a good purpose.
