REBUKE WELL DESERVED.

It is very seldom that a United States Senator feels it his duty to denounce a newspaper publicly as severely as did Senator Sutherland the Tribune, on Monday in the Republican convention. But the arrangement was well deserved. The Tribune has proved by its best course that it has no valid claim to consideration in any gathering of citizens. It is an enemy of the community upon which it depends for existence. It is an enemy of the people whose patronage it solicits.

We do not give way to any tendency to exaggeration if we maintain that the outcome of the Tribune policy, if it were followed to its logical consequences, would be a repetition in Utah of the tragedy of Illinois, and the subsequent exodus. To prove this we need only refer to the recent editorial apologies in the Tribune for the assassination of the martyrs, and the role that followed. The Tribune has charged that the "situation of Nauvoo has its counterpart in the attitude of the Church leaders and the condition of their followers today," whatever may be the supposed gravamen implied in that charge! It has more than hinted that the massacre of the martyrs was perfectly right, or that escape from it was impossible, owing to "their incessant assaults upon decency." The logical conclusion is that the Tribune would gladly see the fearful tragedy enacted again. There is no escape from that inference from its statements, unless, indeed, they can be accounted for on the supposition that the author of them is non compos meatus.

We can see now that the irresponsible mob that overran the border counties of the state of Illinois at the time the Carthage drama was enacted, as well as the infamous agitators who took advantage of existing prejudices and anarchistic conditions, were the enemies of the state and of the people. The Utah agitators who are endeavoring to imitate those of Illinois, are no less public enemies. They will not succeed in murdering or driving the "Mormons," no matter what their secret hopes and aspirations may be, but they will succeed in retarding the material progress of the state, and perhaps in engendering enmity between neighbors and thus injuring business, since legitimate business always flourishes best where peace and unity prevail.

These are facts for the citizens of all faiths and affiliations to consider at this time. The people have it in their power to relegate to oblivion the strife-bredders who have proved themselves public enemies, and to establish truly American conditions, with peace, good will, and prosperity assured. Which shall it be?

VIEW OF PALESTINE.

An interesting entertainment, to which we beg to call the attention of Conference visitors and others, will be given on Friday evening in the Tabernacle. Its main feature will be an illustrated lecture on Palestine. Musical numbers will be rendered by Professor J. J. McClellan, and this will be another feature.

The stereopticon views that will be shown are reproductions of photographs taken by Mr. C. E. Johnson who accompanied Madame Lydia Mountford on trip through the Holy Land in 1884. In the interest of the St. Louis World's Fair, Mme. Mountford is well remembered here for her lectures on Palestine and Biblical subjects generally. Her familiarity with the customs of the people of the Holy Land, her knowledge of the various tongues and her extensive acquaintance with ecclesiastics and officials made it possible for Mr. Johnson to secure pictures of people and places never published before. He made in the neighborhood of two thousand negatives covering objects famous in Bible history, as well as many modern features of more than common interest. Among the latter are types of people now inhabiting the Holy Land—Hebrew, Arabs, Turks, Bedouin sheiks, shepherds and many others.

This will be a high class entertainment of interest to all Bible readers. We beseech for it a liberal patronage.

MR HEARST'S VIEWS.

We noted recently that Mr. Hearst's views have apparently undergone a change and that in his Jamestown speech he decried class hatred and indulged in discriminating praise of the capitalist and the trust. The speech was regarded as indicating a sudden change in his political and social views.

In an interview in the New York Times, Mr. Hearst skillfully controverts the accusation of any radical change in his attitude and philosophy, and maintains that he has always recognized the distinction between a trust that is monopoly and one that is a co-operation for better management and cheaper products. He illustrates the case in these words:

"I have eight newspapers in different cities, operating in harmony. That is certainly a certain kind, but a combination that is beneficial to the public as well as to me. The features and various attractions that are secured for one paper are reproduced in all the others. By using the combined capital of eight papers, I can secure more for my readers than if I should buy for one paper alone. Is not combination of that kind for the benefit of the public?"

As Uncle Sam has undertaken to dig the big ditch across the Isthmus, money enough should be appropriated to do the work as speedily as the natural obstacles will permit. The completion of that canal means the beginning of a new chapter in the world's history. It means a new epoch to this country.
