

EVENING NEWS.

PUBLISHED DAILY, SUNDAY EXCEPTED.
 AT FOUR O'CLOCK.

DAVID O. CALDER.
 Editor and Proprietor.

Friday, May 14, 1875.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The birthday anniversary of the Pope was celebrated yesterday with unusual demonstrations of joy.

It is said that the U. S. government has been robbed of a million and a half of dollars by the operations of a silk importing ring.

The raid on the whiskey thieves continues, several more seizures having taken place. The whole-sale liquor dealers in Massachusetts are rejoicing over the affair, prices having been reduced by the frauds that they were unable to compete with western manufacturers.

The parliament of New South Wales has appropriated $25,000 to represent the colony in the Centennial Exhibition, at Philadelphia.

The Harvard Club held its annual dinner at San Francisco, yesterday.

The bodies of twelve of the Schiller victims have been embalmed, and will be sent to the United States.

It is said that the British government has been urged to annex the island of New Guinea.

A London dispatch says that a Liverpool steamer was ashore on one of the Scilly Islands.

The assurances from Berlin are of the most satisfactory character, and indicate that the preservation of peace is sure.

The examination of witnesses in the Beecher trial closed yesterday, and the court adjourned until next Wednesday.

The fastest time on record has been made at Lexington, Ky., by Searcher, who ran a mile in 1.41.

The condition of Mr. Breckinridge is unchanged, and there is now said to be no immediate danger of death.

The New York legislature is in favor of the general government recognizing the belligerency of Cuba.

Judge Dillon, of the U. S. Circuit Court of Iowa, has decided that the terminus of the Union Pacific Railroad, is on the Iowa side of the Missouri river, and that the owners of the bridge have the right to charge reasonable tolls.

Jefferson Davis, in a speech to the Texas veterans of the Mexican war, entreated them to be as loyal to the states and stripes as they formerly were to the Lone Star.

Four convicts made their escape from Sing Sing prison in New York State, this morning, in a novel and desperate manner. For particulars see telegrams.

The Inman steamer City of Buenos went ashore on the south coast of Ireland yesterday.

Striking miners compelled a number at work to quit, at Tyrone, Pa., last night; and this morning there was a fight between the strikers and the police.

Twenty-three thousand dollars damage by fire at Columbus, O.

An ex-member of the Alabama legislature, and late postmaster at Union Springs, has been convicted of embezzlement for stealing money from letters.

The National Bank, at Rio Janeiro, has suspended.

Sad news comes in this afternoon's telegrams from Missouri, Minnesota, Illinois, and Kansas, to the effect that the grasshoppers are devouring everything green; that the farmers are discouraged and the people are starving.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

By Telegraph.

PER WIRELESS TELEGRAPH LINES.

TO-DAY'S DISPATCHES.

EASTERN.

Anniversary of the Pope's Birthday.—More Rochester, of the Government.

New York, 14.—A special dispatch from Rome states that the Pope's birthday anniversary was celebrated with extraordinary rejoicings, and that deputations, letters and congratulations arrived throughout the day. Twelve prelati reached the age of 84, but Pio Nono alone surpassed the years of Saint Peter in his chair.

An investigation of the operations of the silk conspirators shows that of the silk placed upon the market in the United States, the government has been deprived of a million and a half of dollars.

A private dispatch from Rio Janeiro says that the national bank has suspended.

Miners Compelled to Quit Work.

Tyrone, Pa., 14.—About half the men at the Pennsylvania mines were compelled by the strikers to stop work last night.

A rupture.

There seems to have been an open rupture between the Panama and Pacific Mail Companies; the Panama Company has been disengaged from the further consideration of freights, and the Pacific Mail managers don't seem disposed to grant any concession.

The Red Cross.—Beijing.

Chicago, 14.—The mid on the Illinois disaster is being vigorously kept up. An information to condemn, for the non-payment of rescue taxes, was filed yesterday by the state and district attorneys against the Union Copper Distillery, at Calumet. All the distilleries at Milwaukee, released on bonds by order of the U. S. circuit court, were, to-day, suspended by orders from Washington until new bonds can be issued, the old bonds having been forfeited by the late fire.

The distilleries held a meeting last night, and telegraphed the distillers in Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis, asking them to join in the expense of prosecuting a suit against the government, contesting the constitutionality of the law, and the seizure of the distilleries.

A Boston special says the whole-sale liquor dealers in that vicinity are rejoicing over Secretary Breckinridge's decision, and the result; they have realized damage to their business by the frauds, the effects of which put prices so low that they could not compete with western distilleries.

The Pekin Alcohol Co., and a rectifying establishment at Canton, China, have been seized at Pekin, Ill., by the collector yesterday.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

By Telegraph.

PER WIRELESS TELEGRAPH LINES.

TO-DAY'S DISPATCHES.

EASTERN.

Anniversary of the Pope's Birthday.—More Rochester, of the Government.

New York, 14.—A special dispatch from Rome states that the Pope's birthday anniversary was celebrated with extraordinary rejoicings, and that deputations, letters and congratulations arrived throughout the day. Twelve prelati reached the age of 84, but Pio Nono alone surpassed the years of Saint Peter in his chair.

An investigation of the operations of the silk conspirators shows that of the silk placed upon the market in the United States, the government has been deprived of a million and a half of dollars.

A private dispatch from Rio Janeiro says that the national bank has suspended.

Miners Compelled to Quit Work.

Tyrone, Pa., 14.—About half the men at the Pennsylvania mines were compelled by the strikers to stop work last night.

A rupture.

There seems to have been an open rupture between the Panama and Pacific Mail Companies; the Panama Company has been disengaged from the further consideration of freights, and the Pacific Mail managers don't seem disposed to grant any concession.

The Red Cross.—Beijing.

Chicago, 14.—The mid on the Illinois disaster is being vigorously kept up. An information to condemn, for the non-payment of rescue taxes, was filed yesterday by the state and district attorneys against the Union Copper Distillery, at Calumet. All the distilleries at Milwaukee, released on bonds by order of the U. S. circuit court, were, to-day, suspended by orders from Washington until new bonds can be issued, the old bonds having been forfeited by the late fire.

The distilleries held a meeting last night, and telegraphed the distillers in Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis, asking them to join in the expense of prosecuting a suit against the government, contesting the constitutionality of the law, and the seizure of the distilleries.

A Boston special says the whole-sale liquor dealers in that vicinity are rejoicing over Secretary Breckinridge's decision, and the result; they have realized damage to their business by the frauds, the effects of which put prices so low that they could not compete with western distilleries.

The Pekin Alcohol Co., and a rectifying establishment at Canton, China, have been seized at Pekin, Ill., by the collector yesterday.

Reports from portions of Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska state that the grasshoppers are already devouring the crops, and that every green thing, and that the farmers are greatly discouraged.

The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.

A gentleman who has recently been on a tour in southwest Missouri says the grasshoppers are devouring every thing green in that section, and that the crops are dying by hundreds of thousands, and that he had found nothing to eat, not even in the woods, as the locusts have eaten the bushes and the leaves of the trees.

In Minnesota the locusts are eating the corn, and the farmers are greatly discouraged. The pests seem to be young, at least they are very small, ranging from the size of a flea to that of a common house fly, but their destructive powers appear to be quite as great as those of the full grown locust.