

Bare Footed Dancer Coming to America

London Dramatic Letter

(Special Correspondence.)
LONDON, June 26.—Probably the most interesting bit of news this week—from the American standpoint at any rate—is embodied in the announcement that Maud Allan has signed to cross the Atlantic next year. In some respects she has been the biggest sensation we have had in London for many a long day; circumstances themselves seem to have conspired to make her famous, or, as others would put it, notorious. From the very first society held out a welcoming hand to her. She lunched with the prime minister and hobbled with bishops and other church dignitaries. Manchester refused to receive her on moral grounds and the consequent hubbub, in which the Manchester watch committee came off second best, only served to bring her more prominently before the public.

There can be no question that the Maud Allan boom has been superbly worked in this country. Certainly her performance is a very remarkable one—nothing can be more natural, more expressive, more graceful. But ask the experience of trained dancers on her technique and see what sort of a reply you will receive. I remember talking the matter over with Adeline Gougeon, who has run the Maud Allan in England, and she told me yesterday: "They can afford that sort of thing in America, but on this side such conditions would simply spell bankruptcy for the man who offered them."

The theatrical season is in its last throes and with very few exceptions theaters will be shutting down within the next fortnight. "The Merry Widow" is to succumb and 10 days more will see the end of that popular piece at Daly's. George Edwards has hurried off to America, and in England, said to me yesterday: "They can afford that sort of thing in America, but on this side such conditions would simply spell bankruptcy for the man who offered them."

There has been a good deal of friction lately between Stuart and Edwards and matters have still to be straightened out. Edwards protests that he wants a rest and would prefer to be relieved of all responsibility in relation to the next production at the Gaiety. It will be interesting to watch the result should he persist in his intention of standing aside. In that case it is by no means unlikely that some of the principal artists will also shake the dust of the Gaiety from their feet.

It is safe to say the New York theater will be the one to "one" the Gaiety. The Commissioner Baker—if the law is enforced—by saving her small boy from injury and herself from a deal of worry.

On Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. Asahel Woodruff and their two daughters left New York for Washington by way of boat, sailing to Norfolk and Point Comfort, reaching Washington in three days, where they remain for a few days, sight-seeing, before going on to the west. The visit of the young Misses Woodruff has been an interesting one, it being their first trip east. It was replete with novelty from the first to the finish of their journey.

From cool Gowanda, Ontario, Canada, seems a long cry to the stifling heat of this city, and Mr. Burgess Young, who hails from that spring-like region and who surprised his friends by flying into their circle yesterday, fully realizes the vast difference in climate. Going on snow shoes for 60 miles into the Hudson Bay country, living for months on the prospectors' table fare, "slapjacks and bannocks," "sow-bosom and beans," and returning to civilization by the canoe route, are only a few of the many hardships endured by Mr. Young and his companions in their pilgrimage hither. From Copper Cliffe, Ont., where Mr. Young has been for two years, he ventured into the wilds to do some prospecting on a mining claim. In that endeavor, however, he was not successful, and he returned to the city, where he has been for some time, and is now in New York.

When, on last Wednesday morning, I walked into Charles Frohman's room, I found him in a state of transparent delight. In his hand was a cigarette, which he immediately pressed on me, announcing the enormous success of the production of "Joan of Arc" at the Harvard University Stadium. From later and more extensive accounts it would appear that Frohman's private information was in no way exaggerated and that, in the part of Joan, Maude Adams had made one of the hits of her life. Frohman told me that the expenses reached $15,000, but as $25,000 had been realized from the sale of seats, there would be the tidy little sum of $10,000 to hand over to the author. He had made one of the hits of her life. Frohman told me that the expenses reached $15,000, but as $25,000 had been realized from the sale of seats, there would be the tidy little sum of $10,000 to hand over to the author.

The famous French actor, Lucien Guity, began a fortnight's season at the Adelphi on Monday last. Unfortunately he made rather a mistake in choosing so old-fashioned a piece as "L'Assommoir" ("Drink") for his initial performance. He made amends, however, by giving us later Henry Bernheim's "Le Voleur" ("The Thief"). He was seen to great advantage in the role of the thief, and he has since then been playing "Le Voleur" with great success. He has since then been playing "Le Voleur" with great success.

Charles Frohman, after refusing the play in manuscript, has bought the American rights of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's success at the Lyric, "The First of June." It is a play produced in New York with a good all-round cast in the fall. Waller, of course, had the first chance of the piece for America, but finally decided that the principal part was not a suitable good enough for him to make his first appearance in it before a New York audience. His decision, to my mind, is a wise one, for it is only in a real Waller part that he can hope to make an instant and emphatic success with you. William Devereaux, author of "Henry of Navarre," which is now coming money for Julia Nelson and Fred Terry, is writing a play for Waller, the subject of Sir Walter Raleigh and if all goes well he will make his debut probably in this next year before the American public.

preparing for the coming season in the drama.

The success of Mr. Isaac Russell in journalistic circles is certainly gratifying to his friends here, as it must be to those at home. His articles on the Philadelphia strike, where he went and interviewed Pratt, the leader, whom he knew in Salt Lake at the time of the strike, there are attracting notice from readers interested in that movement. The coming Pearson's will contain a story woven around the agitation that has brought him into prominence with the magazine element and several good offers have been the result. The Philadelphia Evening Times has a photograph of Pratt with Russell, the correspondent, beside him in a carriage.

In the pictorial literary section of last Sunday's American, Jack Sears has a complete page devoted to two subjects, one on Wisdom and the other on Folly, with an editorial by Brisbane on the illustrated articles. The Wisdom picture shows the wise man devoting his energies to one object, until he succeeds in accomplishing something. The Folly is a satire on the man and woman who become slaves to fashion; both subjects are cleverly worked out, and have received a good notice from the well known editorial writer. Mr. Sears' work in this line is in demand for Sunday issues, and each week sees some original idea well brought out. Not a little good enough for him to make his first appearance in it before a New York audience. His decision, to my mind, is a wise one, for it is only in a real Waller part that he can hope to make an instant and emphatic success with you. William Devereaux, author of "Henry of Navarre," which is now coming money for Julia Nelson and Fred Terry, is writing a play for Waller, the subject of Sir Walter Raleigh and if all goes well he will make his debut probably in this next year before the American public.

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

(Special Correspondence.)
NEW YORK, July 4.—Think of a firecrackerless "Fourth of July"—not even a toy pistol to be heard or seen—think of it—plenty of bunting and patriotism to slow music, but alas, for the youngsters' delight. The tenor sang yesterday; other new commissioner sent broadcast the proclamation—and Monday, this day we celebrate, will be quiet as a country Sabbath.
