

EVENING NEWS.

Saturday, Oct. 20, 1888.

STAKE CONFERENCES.

Appointments for Quarterly Conferences Until April, 1889.

Weber, Jacob and Cassia Stake—Sunday and Monday, October 21st and 22nd, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, January 20th and 21st, 1889.
 Box Elder, Tooele and Onelia Stake—Sunday and Monday, October 23rd and 24th, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, January 27th and 28th, 1889.
 Cache and Wasatch Stake—Sunday and Monday, November 4th and 5th, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, February 21st and 22nd, 1889.
 Bear Lake, Emery, Summit and Uinta Stake—Sunday and Monday, November 11th and 12th, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, February 19th and 20th, 1889.
 Sanpete, San Luis, Morgan and Harnock Stake—Sunday and Monday, November 18th and 19th, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, February 26th and 27th, 1889.
 Milard, San Juan and Sevier Stake—Sunday and Monday, November 25th and 26th, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, March 5th and 6th, 1889.
 Utah, Panguitch and Snowflake Stake—Sunday and Monday, December 2nd and 3rd, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, March 12th and 13th, 1889.
 Davis, Kanab and St. John Stake—Sunday and Monday, December 9th and 10th, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, March 19th and 20th, 1889.
 St. George, Malad and St. Joseph Stake—Sunday and Monday, December 16th and 17th, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, March 26th and 27th, 1889.
 Garowen, Beaver and Maricopa Stake—Sunday and Monday, December 23rd and 24th, 1888; and Sunday and Monday, March 23rd and 24th, 1889.
 Those stakes which have held their conferences on Sunday and Monday have realized a much more numerous attendance than when held on Saturday and Sunday. This is due to the fact that the stake meetings have been held on the same day and at the same place, and the attendance has been increased by the convenience of the stake meetings.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Religious services of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be held in the Tabernacle to-morrow (Sunday) afternoon, commencing at 2 o'clock.

Home missionaries will preach in the country wards tomorrow.

In the city wards services are held in the various ward meeting houses at the hours named:

First ward	8 a.m.	Twelfth ward	6:30 p.m.
Second ward	9:30 a.m.	Thirteenth ward	7:30 p.m.
Third ward	10:30 a.m.	Fourteenth ward	8:30 p.m.
Fourth ward	11:30 a.m.	Fifteenth ward	9:30 p.m.
Fifth ward	12:30 p.m.	Sixteenth ward	10:30 p.m.
Sixth ward	1:30 p.m.	Seventeenth ward	11:30 p.m.
Seventh ward	2:30 p.m.	Eighteenth ward	12:30 a.m.
Eighth ward	3:30 p.m.	Nineteenth ward	1:30 a.m.
Ninth ward	4:30 p.m.	Twentieth ward	2:30 a.m.
Tenth ward	5:30 p.m.

Meetings convene in the country wards as follows:

Sugar House	8 a.m.
Farmers	9 a.m.
Mill Creek	10 a.m.
East Mill Creek	11 a.m.
North Cottonwood	12 p.m.
South Cottonwood	1 p.m.
North Jordan	2 p.m.
South Jordan	3 p.m.
North Ogden	4 p.m.
South Ogden	5 p.m.
North Salt Lake	6 p.m.
South Salt Lake	7 p.m.

Services in foreign languages are conducted as follows:

Scandinavian Hall, 10 a.m.
German, City Hall, 10 a.m.

FRAGMENTS.

FRANCIS CORN, Esq., of the Utah Central has come into the north country for a few days.

The trial of Mrs. Susan Dudley, of Parley's Canon, yesterday afternoon, resulted in her acquittal.

W. B. BENNETT, of West Jordan, brought to this office today a fine looking Apple which weighed seventeen ounces.

The Emma Abbott engagement commences on Monday. The sale of tickets up to the present has been very heavy.

We deeply regret to learn that Prof. Willard Dine, of the Salt Lake State Academy, is prostrated with an attack of typhoid fever.

Bishop T. H. CUTLER, of Lehi, was taken to the penitentiary last evening, to serve a six months' term for living with his wives.

ANOTHER good house greeted Donnelly & Girard's "Natural Gas" last evening. The piece again went with its usual vim.

BROTHER MATTHEW BARNES and his son desire to extend sincere thanks to all those who took part at the funeral of the late Sister Sarah Barnes, and to all who kindly assisted during her illness.

NO ONE should fail to see the wonderful Electric Clock exhibition at 225 S. Main Street. Large crowds visit the exhibition every afternoon and evening. The Floating Head illusion is a great mystery to all.

The "Vestibule Trains" on the Burlington route from Denver to Chicago, are becoming quite a feature in railway travel. H. J. Curtis, general agent for the road in this city is distributing some neat advertisements of these special trains.

We are requested to announce that tomorrow morning Rev. C. L. Libby, of the Methodist Church, will preach on "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit." In the evening Mr. Libby will lecture on "The Reason Why God Revealed His Will to Man."

This report of Secretary Fairchild, to the Senate, in response to an inquiry as to what banks the government had loaned money without interest, or deposited it, creates the Utah National Bank, Ogden, with $200,000, and the Union National Bank of Salt Lake with $25,000.

HIRSH MINKEL was being tried in the Police Court today for battery on a boy named Wm. Stanton. The latter was standing outside of the circus tent on Washington Street yesterday afternoon, when some one within threw a rock at him, inflicting an ugly wound over his left eye. Minkel is accused of being the individual who threw the stone. A peculiar feature of the trial was the examination of the dead man's witnesses. Prof. Harry White acted as interpreter, writing the answers as they were given in the sign alphabet by the witnesses. The pantomime was quite interesting.

Letter From an Elder.

We have been permitted to peruse a letter written by Elder Ezra T. Stevenson to his father, Elder Edward Stevenson, of this city, and dated Kaiti, New Zealand, August 28th, 1888. The writer speaks in high terms of the President of the mission, Elder Wm. Faxon, and of his kindness and consideration for the Elders over whom he presides. The Elders in that field are nearly all young men, President Faxon being the only one over forty years of age, and most of them are under thirty. The letter contains some excellent sentiments and breathes a pleasing spirit.

THE ABBOTT ENGAGEMENT.

Something About the Repertoire of Operas to be Produced Here.

Gowned, the composer of the immortal opera "Faust" after hearing Emma Abbott sing the grand role of "Marguerite," exclaimed that the American prima donna was his ideal of the character in every sense. No artist before the world today has labored so unrelentingly and conscientiously as Emma Abbott to achieve the foremost place in English opera, and the result of patient effort allied with an unquestioned musical talent, has been success unqualified. Here name is known in every household. She opened at the State Theatre next week with the largest and stoutest company of artists that has yet been associated with her since the inception of her brilliant career. Emma Abbott presents a repertoire to the music lovers of Salt Lake that abounds in the choicest works in her extensive category of standard opera. Added to such popular favorites as Verdi's "Macbeth," "Chimes of Normandy," "The Bohemian Girl," and "The Barber of Seville," will also give Emma's beautiful vocal "Rise of Castle," with the entire company in the cast. The revival of "Macbeth" will also be given on Wednesday and Thursday, at which Emma Abbott will positively appear as "Macbeth" in the ever popular "Chimes of Normandy" will be quite a musical treat. The opera presented will be magnificently costumed, Emma Abbott wearing over $300,000 of magnificent Worth costumes. The career of Emma Abbott on the American stage has been one of continuous success. Possessed of a clear, clear, crystalline voice, of wonderful dramatic ability, she is shining brightly above all other artists of her time. Our citizens realize that the Abbott Opera Company has realized a much more numerous attendance than when held on Saturday and Sunday. This is due to the fact that the stake meetings have been held on the same day and at the same place, and the attendance has been increased by the convenience of the stake meetings.

First District Court.

At Provo, yesterday, the following cases were heard by Judge Judd:

United States vs. W. M. Bromley: application of defendant for change of venue because he could not get justice in this court, denied.
 People vs. Lafayette Huntman: assault; plea of guilty; sentence was suspended during good behavior.
 United States vs. Erick Lovelace: unlawful cohabitation; a pardon has been extended to defendant by the President of the United States; the case was dismissed.
 United States vs. Richard Jenkins: plea of guilty; sentence set for November 1st.
 United States vs. Olof J. Anderson: plea of guilty; sentence set for November 1st.
 People vs. Philip Marks: cruelty to animals; trial, verdict of guilty, fined $10.
 United States vs. George Halliday: unlawful cohabitation; plea of guilty; sentence set for November 1st.
 United States vs. Wm. Christensen: unlawful cohabitation; plea of guilty; sentence set for November 1st.
 United States vs. Orlando Herron: adultery; plea of guilty.
 United States vs. Peter Rasmussen: unlawful cohabitation; plea of guilty; sentence set for November 1st.
 United States vs. Gustave Torberg: a non-morant; adultery; trial; verdict of guilty.
 Fairview vs. L. Wilson, dismissed on motion of plaintiff.

A Terrible Fall.

A woman who gave her name as Charles Miller arrived from the east yesterday. His head was all bandaged, his eyes, a portion of the nose and mouth being the only features visible. He claims to have lived in Ogden for years, some time back, is a painter by trade, and says he used to own a paint shop on Fourth Street. A party of his friends, who were with him, said he was employed to paint the bridge over the river at Ogden. The bridge was 135 feet high. While engaged at his work, a distance of 50 feet from the ground, he lost his footing, precipitating him to some extent below where he was picked up unconscious, in which state he remained for eight hours. He was taken to the hospital at Denver. Up to examination he was found that the skull was broken; several bones in the face were broken and most of the teeth knocked out. Both shoulders were dislocated, both arms broken in three places and both legs in five places. He remains at the hospital for eighteen months, having just been discharged. At present he wears four silver plates in his skull, each two to three inches long, and he will remain here, he claims, until he is able to walk. The mystery is how it was possible for a human being to survive such a tremendous fall. The whole system and yet live.—Ogden Standard, Oct. 19.

Deputies in Ogden.

Last evening a number of deputies visited the residence of Mrs. Fygar, on the Bench, probably suspecting that a long absent one had returned. The first intimation the family had of any proceeding was that of seeing a man standing at the shady northwest corner of the house. Mrs. Fygar stepped out and asked him what he wanted. "Nothing," he answered. "Nothing," he insisted that he did want something as he had no business at home. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He then started to go, but she called him back and insisted that he wanted nothing, said his name was Ward and that he was a man of business. Around the house started, but he only got to the corner to be surprised at finding Weststone with his hands on his head and eyes looking through the bed-room window. "What are you doing there?" "None of your business," I answered. "I am an officer of the law," came the answer. "Chris, nothing daunted, told him that he was not an officer of the law, and that he was a man of business. He