

ent. Enlisting orders have been issued, which will cause an addition of two new regiments. An appointment was made for the election of officers at the next company muster, which takes place on the last Saturday of next month. Thus you see, although much has been, yet more remains to be done. Good condition of arms, and accoutrements, sufficient supply of ammunition, and punctuality at the hour appointed, are things to be remembered and acted upon, in a reformed manner hereafter.

More perhaps than at any previous muster, have all, both officers and soldiers, seen the usefulness of performing camp duty, and of discipline. All that were present, appeared to feel well, and glad they had turned out; and returned home, I doubt not, far better pleased with themselves, than others who let their imaginary interest persuade them from the path of duty.

It is to be hoped that the first Cohort, will hereafter, be better supplied with music, and the General Staff especially, with flags.

Yours, respectfully,

D. H. WELLS.
