BREVITIES.

Dr. Mary Walker is lecturing in Albany on "The Human System."

The mother of Louis Blanc has just died.

The right man in the right place—a husband at home in the evening.

Victor Hugo's "devil-fish" is found in Alaska.

Kindness and cheerfulness can remove more than half the wrinkles out of the forehead of age.

Second childhood rarely attacks a man, however aged, whose mind has been kept vigorously and habitually active during his life.

A distinguished German professor has predicted that there will be only two seasons instead of four, commencing with 1868.

A Chicago girl, of sweet nineteen, now sports her fifth husband. His four predecessors enjoyed married life from six months to a year each.

A New York beggar, arrested for soliciting alms, was able to procure a thousand dollars with which to bail himself.

A dramatization of Lady Godiva is in preparation at Astley's in London, and the Menken is named for the principal part.

To a humble Christian it was remarked, "I fear you are near another world." "Fear it, sir," he replied; "I know I am; but, blessed be the Lord! I do not fear it, I hope it."

A recent survey has shown that the Missouri river, near the point of confluence with the Mississippi, has eaten away some two thousand six hundred feet of the Illinois shore. This corrosion extends four miles.

"If you had avoided rum," said a rumseller to a customer, "you could now ride in your carriage." "And if you would never have sold rum," said the bacchanal, "you would have been my driver."

In the railroad scene in "Under the Gaslight," as performed at Virginia City, Nevada, the excited miners threw as many as twenty big knives on the stage to assist the heroine in cutting the ropes which bound Snorkey to the track.

"What is that?" said a Sunday school teacher, pointing to the letter O.

"Dunno," replied the urchin.

"What do you say when you stump your toe?" replied the lady.

"Dam it!" was the wicked little boy's answer.

Bee charitable—one cent pieces were made on purpose. Don't take anybody's advice but your own. It costs more to borry than it does to buy.

Ef a man flatters yu, yu kan kalkulate that he is a rogue or yu're a fule.

Keep both ize open, but don't see more'n half yu notis.

If yu ich for fame, go into a graveyard and scratch yourself against a tume-stone.

Yung man, be more anxious about the pedigree yur going to leave than yu are about the wun somebody's going to leve yu.—Joshua Billings.

Old Peppergrass sent to the intelligence office that he wanted a good girl for general housework. About the time he expected an applicant, he laid a broom down in the yard, near the gate. Presently a girl comes up to the gate, opens it, and strolls into the house; the broom being immediately in the path, Miss Betsy strides over it. The old man was on the watch, and the first salute the girl got was, "I don't want you!" The girl departed, and suddenly another bullet-headed Nancy appears. Seeing the old broom in her way, she gives it a kick, and waddles up to the house.

"You won't suit me, Miss Mopsy!" bawls Peppergrass.

Finally, a third appears, opens the gate, and coming into the yard, she carefully closes the gate behind her, and walks up—the broom still in the path; this she picks up, and carries along to the house, where she deposits it alongside the woodshed. Before the girl can explain her business there, Peppergrass bawls out:

"Yes, yes, come in; you'll suit me!"

And she did, for that girl lived with Peppergrass seven years, and only quitted it to go to housekeeping on her own hook; and a capital wife she made. Peppergrass was right.

One day as conductor Jones was running from Elmira to the Erie Railroad, he found, among other passengers, a boy who had no money, who told him he was poor and alone in the world, and wanted to go out West, where he thought he could do better than in the East.

The conductor told him, of course, that he could not ride unless he paid his fare, "and," said he, "when we arrive at the next station, Corning, you must get off."

The boy promised he would do so. On his passage through the cars, after leaving Corning, the conductor came across the boy again.

"Did I not tell you to get off at Corning?"

"Yes, sir," said the boy, "and I did get off, but I got on again."

"Well, sir," said the conductor, "when we arrive at the next station, I want you to get off and stay off."

Again the boy promised, but shortly after leaving the station, who should the conductor find but the boy.

"See here, sir, I thought I told you to get off and stay off."

The boy acknowledged that the conductor told him so. "And," said the boy, "I did get off, and was going to stay off, but just as the train was starting, you said 'All aboard,' and I thought you meant me as much as anybody."

It is, perhaps, needless to say that the conductor acknowledged himself beaten, and gave the boy a free ride to the end of his route.
