The Dallas Commercial gives particulars of an attack made by a snake six feet long and as thick as a man's wrist, upon a man in a buggy. He fired at it, when it made its way up into the vehicle, colled the lower part of its body, and attempted to launch its deadly fange into the man's throat. He succeeded in shooting and killing the reptile. This was not done at Salt Lake, and the man was not a Gotham sensational journalist. There may, therefore, be some truth in this snake story, as the "man in the buggy" was not trou-bled with dipsomania.
