spirits of the opposition in Usah. The "Mormons" cannot be induced to fa vor their schemes, and so they would relace the Territory to complete political vassalage. They cannot rule, therefore they would ruin and destroy. And all the pretended opposition to a social practice that is out of the ordipary custom of the country, is a sham and a subterfuge.

If the "Mormons" of I labo would have sustained the Republican nominations they would have been secure in the right of suffrage to-day. Every Republican nominee for office there, from the Délegate down, at any election, would have jumped at the privilege of gaining the votes of the "Mormon" people. There has never been an election since there have been contests in the Territory, but overtures have been made selves, and unless they unite in some by the very party which has sought to effort to create a different impression destroy the "Mormon" people.

This is a matter of politics. And all kinds of political tricks have been played by adventurers to gain the winning hand.
