WASHINGTON.

LOTS OF NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL.

Nominations — Office Hunters — Extra Session Talk — The President's Health, Etc., Etc.

WASHINGTON, 22.—The President has nominated Stewart L. Woodford for United States attorney for the southern district of New York; Asa W. Tenney, United States attorney, eastern district, New York; Lewis T. Paine, United States marshal, southern district, New York; Clinton D. McDougal, United States marshal, northern district, New York; Edward S. M. Rier, United States marshal, northern district, Ohio; H. Fink, United States marshal, eastern district, Wisconsin; A. M. Jones, United States marshal, northern district, Illinois. Postmasters—H. W. Briggs, Gilroy, California; Charles W. Raner, Fort Collins, Colorado; John A. Post, Boise City, Idaho.

The Senate confirmed Henry S. Pearson as postmaster of New York; R. W. Berry, collector of internal revenue, Boise City, Idaho; Lieut. Col. John M. Brannon, to be colonel Fourth Artillery, vice Upton, deceased.

Republicans are not agreed as to electing Mahone's Virginia readjuster' candidate for sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, State Senator Riddleberger. Some say the election should go over until the regular or extra session.

Anti-republicans are somewhat disappointed by the stalwart character of the nominations in New York, and Illinois.

Although there is popular clamor for an extra session there is also a strong under current against it, especially among western congressmen and the financial interests, and the best republican opinion is that it will not be called.

The cabinet will probably decide this afternoon. The appropriation for water and gas for public buildings is insufficient for the fiscal year.

The Chicago Journal says, regarding the nominations made today: The long agony is over. The name of a Mr. M. Jones—long Jones, of Joe Davis' county, Gen. Logan's candidate, was, to-day, sent to the Senate by President Garfield for United States marshal at Chicago. Chicago doesn't like this, but must, we suppose, grin and bear it. We presume Mr. Garfield will not claim that it is particularly emphatic of his determination to enforce the principle of civil service reform.

The President's nominations today caused considerable talk, and was regarded as an indication that he intends to recognize the stalwart party, and to be governed by making appointments by the wishes of senators.

The auditor of railroad accounts will, in a few days, bring the cost of the Central Pacific to the attention of the Attorney General. He hopes to begin early in the administration and attempt to secure an adjustment of the controversy. The last administration, it is claimed, let the case go by default, because it did not take tangible shape until so near the end of Hayes' term that the Attorney-General was unwilling to open it when he could not hope to turn it over to his successor in a complete condition. Attorney General MacVeagh can start fresh with it and if reports of the auditor are true, he will have a peculiar task on his hands, when accomplishment will reflect credit upon him, and when failure will be very damaging to government. It is alleged that for the two and a half years ending with '80, there was due government from the road, over $3,000,000 in money alone, while all that will be collected will be about $724,000.

Secretary Kirkwood has approved the decision of the commissioner of the land office, that the lands embraced in the old Cherokee Reservation so called, near Dardanell, Arkansas, are not subject to entry and are not included in the grant to the Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad Company. Congressional legislation to extinguish the reservation is suggested also, prior to the ascertainment of any valid Indian claims, and that actual settlers on the reservation be protected in their homestead rights. The question relative to this reservation has been pending before the Interior Department since 1828(?).

The semi-official announcement that no final decision was reached at the Cabinet meeting to-day, in regard to the extra session question, is regarded as a strong indication that no call will be issued. The various arguments outlined in last night's dispatches averse to the issuance of a call have evidently, to-day, gained great currency among republican senators and representatives, for many who have heretofore advocated an extra session for the purpose of enacting a funding law are now convinced that no measure satisfactory to their party would have any assured chance of passage at present, and while the pressure in favor of an extra session has about exhausted its force, the opposition is hourly becoming more powerful. Protests, directly or indirectly, addressed to President Garfield are pouring in from representatives of the business interests of all the principal cities. All the republican members of the Senate finance committee, together with Senators Bayard and McPherson, two of the democratic members, have unitedly advised the President against the issuance of the proposed call for refunding purposes this summer, and Secretary Windom has expressed a decided opinion that the Treasury department will be abundantly able to take care of the maturing debt for the remainder of the calendar year, without any additional authority from Congress to as great an extent and with as satisfactory a saving of expenditures for interest as could reasonably be hoped for if Congress was convened in May. On the whole, the outlook to-night indicates that the idea of convening an extra session this spring will be abandoned, and that if Congress be convened in advance of its regular session, the date will be fixed for about the middle of October.

A fresh instalment of office seekers have put in an appearance at this port within the past 24 hours, taking the places of disheartened ones, who are now turning homeward. Indiana and Kentucky seekers are especially numerous. A rumor is abroad that the President intends to shake up the general offices in Indiana. There are from six to 15 applicants for each [illegible]

The nominations sent in to-day, for the various New York marshalships and district attorneyships are all pronounced to be Conkling men, and, with one exception, are all reappointments of officers whose appointments were originally procured by him, and whom President Hayes ineffectually endeavored to displace by the nominations of Foster, Shepard, Jacobs and others, which expired without action with the last Congress.

The republican Senators in caucus decided to offer a resolution in the Senate providing for a new election of Senate officers. The following were agreed upon unanimously: Secretary of Senate, Geo. C. Gorham, California; sergeant-at-arms, Henry Riddleberger, Virginia; principal executive clerk, Jas. R. Young, Pennsylvania. The following were selected by ballot, Chief legislative clerk, Charles W. Johnson, Minnesota; chaplain, Rev. Dr. Byron Sunderland, Washington. Riddleberger is a warm personal and political friend of Senator Mahone. He was a colonel in the Confederate army. Mr. Johnson was nominated at the instance of Senator McMillen.

Young Ruffians.

NEW YORK, 22. — The Evening Post says: Three young men, well connected, went to the house of L. Royal, whose wife is the daughter of the county treasurer, and an estimable lady, and made insulting proposals, which caused her to order them out of the house, whereupon they seized and brutally outraged her. They have been jailed. There is intense excitement.

The Boer Peace.

A London dispatch says: In the House of Commons Gladstone said government had received a telegram from General Sir Evelyn Wood, stating that an arrangement had been made with the Boers, who substantially accept the British conditions. The announcement was received with loud cheers.

Prospect Hill, 22.—An armistice of 48 hours has been concluded, in order to terminate the negotiations. The terms of the truce are that all arms, munitions and other property captured by either side during the hostilities shall be restored; that Transvaal shall be granted independence, subject to conditions to be hereafter settled by the royal commission, and that the Boer government shall commence after the commission shall have made a report. Meanwhile, the British garrisons are to remain in Transvaal, without interfering with local affairs. The Boer forces are to disperse forthwith, and Captain Elliott's murderer is to be delivered to justice.

In Gladstone's statement of peace with the Boers, he said the conditions were the sovereignty of the Queen, British control over foreign relations, and the establishment of a British resident at the future capital. The Boers, however, are promised complete self-government. A royal commission, consisting of Governor-General Sir Hercules Robinson, General Sir Evelyn Wood, and Sir John De Villier, will be appointed, to consider the position of the natives, regulation on frontier affairs, and the question whether any and what portion of the territory eastward within certain limits shall be severed from Transvaal. The conditions also provide for the disposal of the Boers forthwith and the temporary maintenance of a British garrison, which, however, is not to interfere with local affairs. Gen. Wood promises not to advance or send warlike stores in Transvaal. The House received the announcement with prolonged cheers.

BIG NOSED GEORGE

Attempting to Escape is Lynched.

CHEYENNE, 22.—George Parrott, alias Big Nose George, of the Elk Mountain murderers, and an infamous road agent, who is under sentence to be hanged on April 2d, attempted to break jail at Rawlins. He got his shackles off with which he attacked the jailor when he entered the corridor to lock the prisoners in their cells for the night. The jailor's wife, hearing the conflict, had the presence of mind to lock the outside door, locking the jailor in with his prisoners. The alarm was then raised and a number of citizens hastened to the jail, released the jailor and secured the prisoner. He will be doubly ironed and strictly guarded until the day of his execution. This action of George is surprising since he has always manifested a contrite spirit and did not deny his guilty to the indictment, and desiring to be hanged soon. When the sentence of death was passed on him he wept like a child and broke down completely. He also said his health was failing, and in consequence of these facts he gained much sympathy, but now threats of lynching are made, and all desire now to see him suffer death.

A special to the Cheyenne Leader says that Big Nose George was taken out of jail by a party of masked men at 10.55 to-night and taken to a telegraph pole opposite the railroad machine shops, where a rope was thrown over a cross beam of the pole and Big Nose George was made to climb up a ladder, when a rope was placed around his neck and the ladder then pulled out from under him, letting him swing between heaven and earth. His last words were: "I will jump off, boys, and break my neck."

THE CZAR'S FUNERAL.

Described by G. A. Sala.

NEW YORK, 22.—The following is a continuation of Geo. Sala's description of the removal of the Czar's body from the Winter Palace to the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul, prevented coming yesterday owing to the disarrangement of the cable:

In the procession, after the Grand Dukes and Princes, walked the generals and aids-de-camp of the Emperor, with the aids-de-camp and suites of their Imperial Highnesses and the foreign Princes. Then, preceded by a company of grenadiers of the palace, approached the stately mourning coach, with the Empress and her children, accompanied by the Princess Marie Paulovno, wife of the Grand Duke Vladimir. The windows of the carriages were flanked by two esquires at arms, and the rear was guarded by a couple of Cossacks. Almost similarly escorted, drove in one mourning carriage the Grand Duchess Alexandria Josephevna, daughter of the late Saxe-Altenburg, and the wife of the Grand Duke Constantine, Olga Feodovovna, Princess of Baden, and the wife of the Grand Duke Michael, with the Duchess of Edinburgh. In another carriage were the Princess Maximilianovna, Princess Romanskovki, the Duchess of Luchtenburg, Therese Petrovno, Princess Eugenie Maximilianovna of Oldenburg, and the Duchess Helene Georgievna of Mecklenberg Strelitz. Following these came the ladies of honor attending the princesses. Then the great court officials with chamberlain's gentlemen in waiting, his late majesty's physicians, body servants, etc., five companies from as many regiments of guards, one battery of artillery, two squadrons of cavalry, another battery of horse artillery, and finally a squadron from the school of cavalry. Meanwhile, a black flag, bearing a cipher of the deceased Czar, embroidered in white, had been hoisted to the tall glided spire on the cathedral within the fortress. The centre of the nave of the cathedral was covered by a huge catafalque, with its cloth of gold, lined with ermine, rising to the very roof of the edifice. Beneath this was the dais, with three grades, covered with crimson velvet, while the surrounding pillars of the catafalque were shrouded alternately with draperies of cloth of gold and cloth of silver, bearing the monogram of the lamented Czar. In accordance with the Russian custom, black draperies are but scantily employed in the interior of churches.

At length the head of the cortege consisting of a personal escort, his late majesty's brilliant band, the curassiers, with white tunics and silvered helmets, mounted on superb black chargers, appeared at Ivanorskina gate. Foreign ambassadors, ministers plenipotentiary, and consorts, with members of the respective legations, ladies in waiting, maids of honor to the late empress, senators, and such high Russian officials, whose rank entitles them to places in the church, ranged themselves around the steps of the catafalque, anxiously watching for the bringing in of the illustrious dead. Bishops, priests and deacons, in sable velvet, stiff with silver embroidery, stood in readiness, expectant and immobile, and in dead silence. Then filed into church a great body of officers of superior rank bearing on cushions decorations, crosses, badges, crowns and diadems, all intermingled in such glittering, glistening confusion, that the scene could only be likened to some swollen river full of gold and silver. These stood around the head of the coffin in a semi-circle. The regalia was arranged on either side of the imperial standard. To the left lay the shield and sword, and on the right were the orb and sceptre, crusted with brilliants and surmounted, one by a matchless sapphire, and the other by the celebrated Orloff diamonds. Adjoining these were the crowns of all kingdoms and principalities which, together, make up the Empire of all the Russias, in delicate, Oriental metal work and uncut precious stones. Greater than all these were the imperial crown itself, matchless in beauty, shining resplendent in jeweled lustre. Then following the body of the deceased Czar, on a sumptuous gilt coffin, borne by the Grand Dukes Constantine, Nicholas, Vladimir, Paul, Serglus, and the Duke of Edinburgh. It was reverently placed exactly beneath the centre of the dome of the catafalque. The Emperor and his brother removed the lid from the bier, and the upper part of the body of the dead Czar, attired in the uniform of the Preobrajinski Guard Regiment, was exposed to view. The Emperor, Alexander III, placed himself, with the Empress and imperial family, at the head of the coffin. Priests and choristers intoned the dirges of the Russian funeral services, while a parson handed each person present a lighted taper, and deacons sprinkled the church with holy water. The scene was one of great splendor. There stood the black-robed priests, reading words of the gospel in the sonorous Slavonian Russian liturgy. At the four corners of the catafalque stood as many aids-de camp general. Motionless on the steps of the dais were guards of military cadets. In the midst of all this splendor lay the murdered sovereign, with a ghastly upturned face and folded hands. The lower part of the body was completely hidden under a heap of fresh flowers deposited by loving hands. When the service was concluded, Alexander III, kneeling on one knee, kissed the hand of his dead father. The Empress followed his example, then bowing slightly to persons in the vicinity, the imperial couple left the cathedral. The Duchess of Edinburgh and the grand duchesses present were successively conducted to the coffin, to pay the last tribute of love and reverence to the murdered sovereign. Then followed all the Imperial royal mourners, princes and members of the corps diplomatic. They gazed awhile at the features, which, although altered, were yet easily recognizable, then stooping they kissed with reverence the hand that had signed the liberation of 40,000,000 serfs. The corpse will be in state until Saturday, in the shadow of the clustered columns that stand about the plain topped tombs of white marble. Beside the tomb of the late empress is a vacant space, where, according to his expressed wish, will repose the remains of Alexander II, forever.

Sala sends a ghastly description of the late Czar's appearance after embalming, as shown by photographs offered for sale in St. Petersburg. He says the features are seen in profile, the left side of the face being exposed. The sparse hair was carefully brushed from the temples, the grizzled mustache and whiskers were carefully trimmed and kempt. The eyes are more sunken, and there seems to have been a dire wound on the cheek, the marks of which have been partially concealed by art. The head reposes on pillows of white satin. The body is clothed in a green uniform tunic, with massive epaulettes of gold bullion. The right hand, partly bent, rests peacefully on the breast, close to the medallion of some image sacred to Russo-Greek communion.

St. Petersburg, 22.—The indictments against Nicolai, Roussakoff, Andrei, Teljkoff, Timofor, Michaeloff and the woman Hesse, will be communicated to them and they will be allowed seven days for the preparation of their defense by counsel. The Ayence Russe says it is evident the assassination of the Czar was planned abroad, chiefly in Paris and Switzerland.

SHORT AND SHARP.

A party on a hunting excursion went up to the house of a farmer to get some milk, and experienced considerable difficulty in getting the gate open. One of the party said to a sturdy old granger: "We had a good deal of trouble getting the gate open." "Yes," responded the granger, dryly, "I fixed it up to keep hogs out."

"Henry is so practical!" said Mrs. Youngwife. "When mother went into the country last year, Henry sent all her things after her the very next day; he said she might want some of them, you know. And it's kind o'funny," she went on, "mother did want them, for she has never come back to live with us since. Wasn't it queer?"

When a woman has worked for two hours to sweep a room, and then, having collected the dirt and lint and little scraps of paper into the dustpan, goes to the window, opens it, and throws the dirt from the pan, just a lively little gust of wind comes along and sends it back again all over the room again, does she get mad? Well, rather!—Boston Post.

In an action that was recently tried in an English court, when the question in dispute was as to the quality and condition of a gaspipe that had been laid down many years before, a witness stated that it was an old pipe, and therefore out of condition. The judge remarking that "people do not necessarily get out of condition by being old," the witness promptly answered, "They do, my lord, if buried in the ground."

A New Hampshire farmer recently agreed to sell his farm for $2,000, but when the day came he told the expectant purchaser that his wife was in hysterics about the trade, and he guessed he'd have to back out." The purchaser complained, and finally asked how much more would induce him to sell. "Well," replied the thrifty son of the Granite State, "give me $250 more and we'll let her cry!"
