men and girls—rich and agreeable— who get scarcely a passing glance be-cause they lave not set the tongues of the gossips in action. It is much bet-ter to be spoken about unkindly than not to be referred to at all indiffer-ence ing the most disastrous portion which can fall to the lot of any is-pirant for position in the fashionable world.

At. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid's Thursday afternoons there is a preponderance of pretty girls and those of them who have been most discussed are: Miss Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ridgley Carter. She is certainly very good-looking and wears her clothes with real distinction. She was yoted the prettlest girl at the last reception at the Embassy. Mrs. Wyberg of Cincinnati is talking about as interesting daughter who is to be presented at the first June court. For so young a girl she has a great deal of repose, which is usually lacking in American women. She and her mother have a suite of rooms in the Hyde Park hotel which they are going to make their headquarters until the end of July. May Van Alan is another debutante who is much admired and is a real success. At. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid's Thursday

"THE TIME OF HER LIFE."

"THE TIME OF HER LIFE."

The president's nices has come and been well received. She is well-bred and plasant but she is not the type that sets the Thames on fire. When the Princess of Wales dired at the embassy the other night she talked to her for a considerable time and I hear the princess was vastly pleased when this tactful young woman said it would mean "the time of her life" were she permitted to have tea in the nursery with the young Waleses. This was a concession which was immediately granted by the princess, who adores her children and was charmed to find Cortnae Robinson so interested in them. It seems that the Princess of Wales is beginning to regard Americans with more favor. A year or so ago there were but two of that nationality on her visiting list—the Duchess of Marlborough and Lady Paget.

CUT OUT THE HOSTESS.

CUT OUT THE HOSTESS.

Mrs, George Cornwallis West was of the guests invited to meet the Japanese Prince Fushimi at the Duke and Duchess of Connaught's dinner-party and directly he joined the ladies in the drawing-room after dinner he never quitted her side until the lady rose to go home. They talked French nearly all the while though now and again Mrs. West, who is a splendid linguist, was able to say something in Japanese, a fact which pleased the great soldier considerably. It is a fortunate thing that the Duchess of Connaught is not a jealous woman or she would naturally have feit hurt at the manner in which she was left "out in the cold" by the guest of the occasion.

But this is not all. Fushimi was to have gone to Aldershot to see a review at which the king was also to be present. It was so wet, however, it had to be put off so the Jap had the afternoon to himself. After making a brief visit to the national gallery to see pictures which bored him unmistakably, he drove straight to Winston Churchill's, the present address of Mrs, West, who is keeping house for her son and to the unutterable amazement of the household explained that he had come to have another chut with Mrs. West, Winston, who thicks there is no woman on the fact of the earth like his brilliant American mother, was immensely amused and flattered. After tea the prince seemed to get fixed in a glue-pot and never moved to go until his hostess was compelled to tell him that she and her son were going out to dinner. It was then past 8 p. m., and they had only about a quarter of an hour in which to dress!

SHE HAD THE NERVE.

SHE HAD THE NERVE.

For quite a long time the Countess of Essex "dropped" out of society and she was rarely to be seen anywhere. This was partly owing to her health, which has been very indifferent. She is now much better and able to get about as usual. She has, however, to live by rule and is still an enthusiastic vegetarian. Lady Essex has always been in the magic circle of the king's friends, being one of the bright amusing well-dressed American women he likes. It is, however, doubtful if she will ever again be able to stand the gay crowd who have the constitution of horses. The Countess of Essex is one of the few women who have had the backbone to refuse his majesty's invitations. As late as last spring she decilined to go to Biarritz to join the king's friends and selected quiet Beaulieu instead. For quite a long time the Countess of

KAISER WAS FURIOUS.

Everyone will be glad to welcome Glady's Deacon again to London. She was a favorite and is well known in the English as well as the American set. Do you remember how the crown prince of Germany, when he was staying with the Mariboroughs at Blenhelm lost his head over her and the favore the effect. the Marlboroughs at Blenheim lost his bead over her and the furore the affair caused? It was said at the time that the kalser was very angry with the Duchess of Marlbourough for having such an extremely beautiful girl at her house party—putting as it were temptation in his son's way. Gladys's mother hade an abourd fuss in the newspapers about the affair which was very silly of her for no one with any sense regarded the matter as anything beyond a boy and girl flirtation. LADY MARY.

HOTEL TO PROVIDE AUTO FOR EVERY GUEST.

Special Correspondence.

DARIS, May 25 To satisfy the demands of American visitors for the best that money can provide, regardless of expense, plans have been drawn up for a pulatint hotel to be creeted in the Place de la Concorde. In beauty of design, it will far surpass any of the present chavannaries in the Gay City. The extent to which the long pursa will be rathred to may be inferred from the fact that an automobile will be placed at the disposal of every guest for which an inclusive charge will be made. This, the promoters of the scheme, flatter themselves is going "one better" than anything provided by American hotels.

The annually increasing influx of Americans has greatly stimulated the erection of hotels. New ones are going up in all directions. One opens this week, it is the rebuilt "Meurice," and occupies a commanding site in the Rue de Rivoil, overlooking the Gardens of the Tufleries. Another big hotel, the "Majestic," which is nearing completion will have 500 bedrooms. Its site has a topical interest: it was here that Queen Isabelle of Spain lived after her dramatic exit from the scene of active sovereignity. In this same neighborhood of the Champs Elysees another great house of entertainment for the wayfarer is springing skywards. It has been named the "Astoria" though I am not aware that it has any connection with the "Waidorf-Astoria" of New York. Several other hotels are projected. One is a big annex to the "Petersburg." There is talk, also, of a mammoth establishment on the Boulevards in proximity to the Credit Lyonnais and the Place de l'Opera.

Notwithstanding all this activity there seems little likelihood of the city being over-hotelled. At present, though only the advance guard of the American summer migrants has appeared, the botels are chock full. A being over-hotelled. At present though only the advance guard of the American summer migrants has appeared, the hotels are check full. A newly-wedded pair, blissfully ignorant of the state of affairs, drove up to the Grand Hotel the other day and four other hotels in succession before they could find the least accomodation. An American acquaintance who sought to engage 11 rooms for a trans-Atlantic party who proposed coming to Paris in the third week in June, found his quest, a hopeless one at all the leading hotels. All their rooms are booked already for weeks ahead.

There is no need of an American entente-cordiale with Francs, American dollars long age rendered it superfluous. A French shopkeeper who beasts the sign "English spoken" said to me the other day "Where ze John Bull spend five francs ze Uncle Sam spend 10. I like ze John Bull, but I adore ze Uncle Sam."

blots. The stupid editors of the folio say the same thing, although we know that some of the plays were remodelled three times, showing the struggle for perfection. Therefore the manuscripts seen by the actors were certainly only copies."

ONE STUMBLING BLOCK.

ONE STUMBLING BLOCK.

"Have you seen," I asked, "some of the objections which Prof. Dowden urges against the acceptance of your theory that Rutland was the real Shakespeare? He says if that were the case he must have written 'Venus and Adonis' when only 17 years of age and 'Love's Labors Lost, 'when he was between 14 and 15."

"One must be quite ignorant of the extraordinary precocity of that generation," said Dr. Bleibtreu, "to imagine that a youth of 17 would then be incapable of producing such a work as 'Venus and Adonis.' It becomes easily possible when we consider what Lope de Vega, Raphaele, Caeser Borgia and Sidney did when they were still mere striplings. I grant you it would seem incredible that a boy of 14 or 15 could have written 'Love's Labors Lost.' But in assigning 1590 as the year in which that play was 'probably written' Prof. Dowden assumes too much. It rests on no more substantial foundation than the mention of a clever horse which was exhibited about that time. But the same horse made a greater sensation in a trial for witchcraft in 1597 and it is far more probable that it was in that year this play was written. It seems to me absurd to ascraft in 1597 and it is far more probable that it was in that year this play was written. It seems to me absurd to assign the most elegant of Shakespear's comedies to the outset of his career. It was in 1598 that 'Love's Labors Lost' was first published.

SAYS IT IS RIDICULOUS.

"Beerbohm Tree's contention that o one could have written Shakespear's plays but an actor' is ridiculous. Dion Boucicault says, 'Shakespeare was the greatest of poets and the worst of playwrights.' Quite true, and what other great dramatist except Koliere was ever an actor? That Rutland was a constant attendant at play-houses we know from Sidney's memoirs."

we know from Sidney's memoirs."

At much greater length than I have space to set down in detail Dr. Bielbtreu advanced several other arguments in support of his theory that Roger, Earl of Rutland, was the author of the Shakespearean dramas. That a man in Shakespeare's position could have acquired the wide learning and knowledge of other countries—particularly of Italy. France and Denmark—which they display, he contended was extremely improbable to say the least. But Rutland had ample opportunities for acquiring such say the least. But Rutiand had ample opportunities for acquiring such information. He started on the grand four of Europe in 1596. He visited France and Italy; stayed at Venice. Mantua, Rome and Milan; studied law in the university of Padua. He accompanied the Earl of Essex in his expedition to the Azores which would account for the knowledge shown in "The Tempest," He also fought in Holland which would suffect to explain the reference to Dutch life in the Shakespearean works. From 1601 to 1603 he was imprisenced and during this period no single Shakespearean drama appeared. In 1603 he went to Denmark to attend the baptism of the Danish crown prince as the representative of James I., thereby acquiring a knowledge of Denmark and local color for "Hamlet." He actually met Guildenstern and Rosencrantz at the Danish court. He died in 1612 and then the production of Shakespearean dramas ceased.

HAS STUDIED THE SUBJECT.

HAS STUDIED THE SUBJECT.

Dr. Bleibtreu has not advanced his theory lightly, and it cannot be lightly dismissed. He is a prodigious worker and in conducting literary researches his patience and industry dre inexhaustible. He is the author of many motable works and ranks as one of the greatest contemporary German writers on literature and history. He has made a profound study of English literature and has written a history of it. But his admirers regard "The True Shakespeare" as his greatest achievement. Since its appearance they have dubbed him "The Columbus of Literature."

If the German professor's theory should gain general acceptance, Belvoir Castle, the ancestral seat of the Rutlands will displace Stratford-on-Avon as the shrine of the devotees of the man who—whoever he was—wrote not for an age but for all time. It would lend itself well to that purpose. Of all the stately homes of England there is none which surpasses Belvoir in grandeur and beauty. At present tils closed because the present duke, who succeeded to the tires and estaties only last year. had

At present it is closed because the present duke, who succeeded to the titles and estates only last year, had to cut down expenses in order to save enough money to pay the heavy death dues. Newhaven will be the first stop from London. There the automobile will be loaded on to one of the cross channel steamers and unloaded again at Dieppe. From there a bee line will be made to Paris. Here the stop may be lengthy—a matter of 10 days or two weeks. A smaller motor car will be used to move around the gay city and the many beauty spots of its neighborhood.

the many beauty spots of its neighborhood.

From Paris the course will be westward into Switzerland, Austria, Italy, perhaps Greece, or, should the roads be bad at any place, side excursions may be made by train. And the bride and bridegroom will not care much if the trains in some parts of the continent are slow. For they will have months in front of them and no cares of the business world to worry them.

As the summer advances and the heat in the south arrives, the big automobile will swing around and make for Germany, the Rhine, and then northward to Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and finally down the superbiked roadways of Holland and Belgium,

GOING ROUND THE WORLD.

Here the automobile will be abandoned for the time being, and ship will be taken for Gibraltar and Malta and Egypt. It will be fall by now, and Egypt and the Holy Land will be delightful. Then through the Suez canal to Ceylon and India, Singapore, Hong Kong, China, and Japan. Japan is the objective point. By this time both will probably be weary of traveling and will come straight across, America to their future home in England.

Just now Edna May is as busy as can be, planning. She has a hundred and one things to look after. Most important of these is the purchase of the extensive trousseau which will be necessary for so long a honeymoon. She is occupied, too, with arrangements for the sale of her town house in Cadogan square, with its furniture. Mr. Lewisohn is also busy. He recently took a run over to the United States to settle his business affairs preparatory to a long stay abroad. He also arranged the transfer of necessary securities to his bride-to-be. Mr. Lewisohn, as a marriage settlement, has settled a quarter of a militon dollars on Edna May and her children forever. This amount invested in gilt-edged British securities will bring in an income of $10,000 per annum. Such settlement is entirely separate from the dower right which the wife will have in her husband's estate. It is merely a matter of a little pin money. Edna May has a few thousands of her own saved up, and these will also be put into gilt-edged Securities, so that as a wife she will have no business works. lties, so that as a wife she will have no business worries and no business work, except the occaional clipping of cou-pons. A. Yes, I had two. I had both of the physicians who made the original diagnosis make the tests, and they both reported normal.

Q. Were they surprised?
A. Intensely so. One of them told me I could pass for insurance.

Q. Will you tell us about fi?
A. It was about five years ago my heart began to trouble me. My normal weight of two hundred pounds was so reduced my friends hardly knew me. I slept but little, and was steadily declining. About fix ime I made application for membership in a fraternal society, the medical examiner rejecting me. I then consulted a physician, who promptly diagnosed my case as Diabetes. He was frank and told me I could not live long and to put my affairs in shape. His report was so serious that I went to another physician. He confirmed the diagnosis. I spent a summer at Bartlett Springs, hoping the change would help me. I had by this time fallen to 135 pounds, and was so weak I could walk but a few feet at a time, and had no falin that any neighborhood noticed my serious condition, and upon learning what my trouble was, told me that Diabetes was curable, and where to get the Fulton Compound that was curing it. My recovery was then gradual.

Q. Do you know of any other recoveries?

A. Yes. A neighbor, a Mrs. Lawrence.

A. Yes. A neighbor, a Mrs. Law-rence, living on Duncan street, was reported to be suffering from Bright's Disease. My daughter told her about it, and she was soon improving un-

I also sent word to my friend, Wil-liam Martin, an S. P. conductor, run-ning between this city and Stockton, about it, upon learning that he was so hadly off with Diabetes that he was ning between this city and Stockton, about it, upon learning that he was so badly off with Diabetes that he was contemplating giving up his position on the road. He came down and procured it and got the same results I did. He began to gain, and when I saw him last was as big and stout as ever, telling me that his physician reported that there was finally no sugar. Had he not been killed he would be alive today, at least so far as Diabetes is concerned.

I also told Col. Hawkins about it. He had Diabetes, and he took it and it cured him. He is in the government service and you will find him by in quiring at the custom house.

I also told Capt. Hubbard of the Barkentine S. N. Castle about it. He had Diabetes. I got on the cars with him myself and went up with him to show him where to get the Compound. It acted in his case just as it did in mine. When he went away on that coyage he was in mighty bad shape. On his return he was looking and feeling his old self and admitted to me that it was wonderful. He showed his interest by taking a lot of the Compound down to the islands.

Another interesting case was that of a young German, a next door neighbor of mine, who upon his recovery from typhoid fever, was taken with dropsy, his feet beginning to swell. They finally got to an enormous size. I told his mother that this Compound was certain in dropsy, and she got it.

In a month he called me in to look at his feet. They were again their normal size. I predict that this Compound will have the greatest sale of any medicine in the world. I know it to be a positive cure in Diabetes, Bright's Disease and dropsy.

Interviewers had no difficulty in finding Col. Hawkins, and took the following testimony.

Q. Are you the Col, William Hawkins Mr. Short of the Call told us of as having been cured of Diabetes?

A. Yes, sir, I had that disease. I fell off in flesh from 230 to 185 peunds, and in 1896 was surprised to have the physicians tell me my trouble was Diabetes. I took medicine in quantities, but could not check it and was very despondent. Mr. Short told me there was a cure and I lost no time in taking it up.

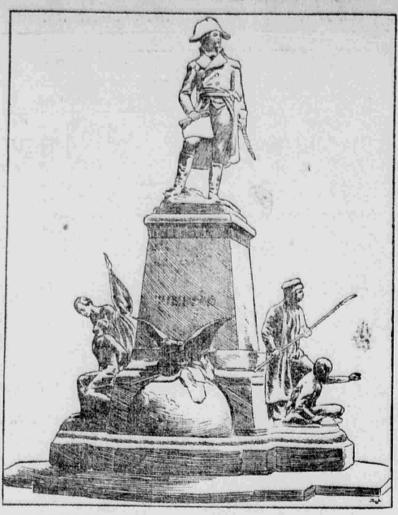

Q. How long was it before you commenced getting results?

A. The beginning of the third week I noticed that I was being relieved. From that time on the improvement was continuous, till the recovery was complete. I now keep no diet and feel perfectly well.
