

REPUBLICANS IN EVIDENCE.

continuing the trust. There is considerable evidence to show.

GLASSMANN ON THE HUNTERS.

The Democrats were in power four years before McKinley's election. The same law existed then under which this great trust case was tried, yet the Democrats never made an effort to enforce that law. When McKinley went in office he had the Spanish war to contend with and took little action against trusts, but no sooner was Theodore Roosevelt installed in office than prompt action was taken and now when President Roosevelt has actually choked the life out of the biggest and most dangerous trust in the country the Democrats say that it is all for "campaign purposes." The president has won his first big trust case and now the Republican party is after the beef trust. President Roosevelt says he wants to know why the price of a live steer is falling while the price of the butchered steer grows higher, and he is going to find out why, and when he does there will be another bit and another trust choked to death, but it seems that President Roosevelt's trust policy is also too fast for the Democrats. Already eastern Democratic papers have announced that it is well for the president to go slow in his assault upon the great business interests, lest he bring a panic upon the country. There you are. If Teddy is fast the Democrats want him to go slow. Did you ever see such a disorganized, dissatisfied, unpleasing, belly-aching lot of people as the Democratic politicians of today? They remind me of a dog who had been howling all night and the master said to his negro servant, "Samba give that dog some water, so he will stop howling." The negro replied, "Masa, watta won't satisfy that air dog—he am hungry and he smells that chicken pie Melinda am cooking in the kitchen and he won't stop howling until he gets some of it." Now, that is just the trouble with our Democratic friends. They are howling and they are hungry for political pie. They have smelled the pie in the shape of good offices the Republicans have been dealing out and these Democrats are going to continue to howl until they get some of that pie and I fear that they will continue to howl because the Republicans are going to keep the pie. The smell of the pie is all the American people will grant them.

POSTOFFICE SCANDAL.

Lately the Democrats have been howling about the postoffice robberies. They forget, however, that it was President Roosevelt who started the investigation soon after he took the oath of office, and it was he that discovered the frauds and that it was discovered that the great original thief in the postoffice department was appointed by Grover Cleveland, who held over under McKinley's administration and was promptly arrested by President Roosevelt, tried and convicted. The Democratic congressmen demanded a congressional investigation of the postoffice department. They feared lest the president should allow some glib Republican to accuse the investigation was granted and lo and behold, the committee reported that the Democratic congressmen had joined the others in putting their fingers in the public treasury and what a howl went up from our Democratic congressmen—they said the committee was not appointed to investigate Congress, but the postoffice department. The committee replied that it was in the postoffice department that they found the congressmen doing business.

I do not deny that during the Spanish war some of the Republicans as well as the Democrats did some stealing in the postoffice department, but I do not think that our fearless president was great enough to publish wrong doing, even when done by members of his own party and that is why the American people respect and honor Theodore Roosevelt.

ROOSEVELT A FIGHTER.

Theodore Roosevelt has no wild cat, the mountain lion, the bear and the buffalo, the Indian and the western cowboy, the Spaniards on the field of battle, the millionaire trust and the Democrats and has whipped them all and what is more, he is prepared to do it again. After having disposed of everything in sight, who is there left to start a fight with? It surely does no harm for the government of this world to know that there is a man in the White House chair who would insist upon the American citizens and our flag being protected wherever they may be found. In fact, I believe the American citizens are safer abroad since it is discovered that we have a man in the White House chair who is not afraid to fight in preference to disgrace, dishonor and humiliation. We trusted Teddy as a cowboy, a hunter, a member of the legislature in New York, as a civil service commissioner, as secretary of the navy, as a soldier on the battle field, as governor of the great state of New York, as vice president of this nation and as president of the greatest government on earth. And during all his great career, he has never once made a mistake. Surely a man who can pass through a record like that is not going to make any mistakes when he has reached the highest round of the ladder. When his greatest ambition is to pass through his final and great career with honor and credit to himself. We think Theodore Roosevelt is a safe man in the president's chair and we are going to enter him in the race for four years more and the Democratic Moses will not even get a chance to see the dust from Teddy's heels as he races through the country from Maine to California, from the great lakes to the gulf. He will be re-elected by the greatest majority that any candidate for the presidency has received from Washington to William McKinley.

GOES AFTER SALT LAKE.

"One thing I nearly forgot—the party in Utah. I understand that there is peace and harmony everywhere but here. Here in Salt Lake there is just a slight ripple on the surface caused by the offices at the disposal of the party. I don't blame the local Republicans, no, indeed. The fault lies with the outside counties. They are so selfish that they forced these offices on Salt Lake and forced some of our brothers here to great personal sacrifices to accept these offices. If we remove this bone of contention, as we should, conditions will be perfect. Some of you outsiders send your boys forward and make them the officers. I am glad to say that both sides to the controversy are personal friends of mine, but the best thing I can wish for them is that they get out and give the rest of us a show. But seriously speaking, I want to say to the Salt Lake that you've got to wash your own dirty linen, and you outsiders leave them alone. Keep out of the fight or we'll have two Republican parties here and then, of course, the Democrats will win. If you must fight, say to these fellows here, go ahead, but don't let the rest of us know anything about it."

NAMING OF COMMITTEES.

As Chairman Glassmann finished, the motion was made to select the usual committees, each consisting of one member from each county.

A recess of ten minutes was taken and the counties then announced their committees, with the following result:

The convention at this hour took a recess until 1:30 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Much Lobbying Done—Delegates Were Slow Getting Together.

The delegates were slow to gather in the afternoon. The Utah state band, which had already done valiant work, played in front of the theater for 20 minutes after the appointed time of returning. There was an enormous amount of lobbying during the recess. The delegates might be seen groups of delegates talking excitedly and arguing for their favorite states and resolutions.

TELEGRAM FROM KEARNS.

Chairman Glassmann read a telegram from Senator Kearns, which was cheered by half the house. The telegram was as follows:

"My earnest hope is for the success of the Republican party and the continued prosperity of Utah. May harmony prevail in your deliberations and factional differences be swept away. Leaders may err but the majority of the people can always be trusted. I have full confidence in your judgment. All Republicans should abide by the results of your labor and work in earnest for Republican success and Rossvelt."

PROXIES AND ORGANIZATION.

Chairman Morris reported for the committee on credentials, which decided to honor only those proxies held by residents of the county which the proxy represent.

The committee on permanent organization then reported.

Chairman H. H. Cannon then offered invocation.

NOT RIGHT, SAID ALLEN.

C. E. Allen stated that inasmuch as Senators Kearns and Smoot and Congressmen Howell had written letters home declining to enter the contest, it would be anything but right for this convention to elect them. He wanted to know if Jesse M. Smith had not the same understanding as to these matters. Mr. Smith replied that he knew of the letters, but they were written at the request of parties who feared their election would disrupt the Republican party. He insisted that if they should be named each of their national representative would esteem it a high honor. At this point, a recess of five minutes was taken to prepare ballots.

UP GOES FLOUR.

The Salt Lake Produce Exchange Again Raises Price on Breadstuffs.

At last evening's meeting of the Salt Lake Produce Exchange flour was advanced 10 cents, oats and corn five cents, wheat 10 cents, and timothy hay $1. The impossible condition of the roads is largely responsible for this.

IRRIGATION CONFERENCE.

The executive committee of the General Irrigation Improvement committee, met this noon in Prof. Swenson's office, with Supervising Engineer Ross of Boise. The conference is continuing through the day, and relates to ways and means and methods in publishing and arranging with the government for the inauguration of the new irrigation era.

STILL NO JURY IN SHOCKLEY CASE.

The jury in the Shockley murder case was not completed when the court took its noon recess today. Thirteen jurors were examined this morning but none of them were acceptable to the defense and were accordingly challenged for cause. There are 13 more jurors to be examined out of the 40 drawn on the special venire issued by Judge Morse yesterday afternoon and it is thought that the twelfth juror to try the case may be secured out of that number. Among the deeply interested spectators in the courtroom today was Bishop Brighton, a brother of the murdered streetcar conductor. Mr. Brighton occupied a chair beside District Attorney Elchorn. Attorney Wilson conducted the defense again this morning, Attorney Smith being absent.

Out of the 40 jurors on the venire issued yesterday afternoon, 29 passed their voir dire examination and their names were placed in the jury box, 11 were not served, 1 was disqualified and 2 were excused upon their own motion. Two of the jurors, James Ray and Murray C. Cade, were not present in court when their names were called and had to be ordered attachments issued for them. Later the two men appeared in court. Mr. Cade said that he had been served but that he had no one to leave in charge of his place of business so could not attend court on time. Judge Morse ordered him to pay the costs of the attachment, which will be about $150. Mr. Ray said that he had not been officially served until about 15 minutes before he arrived in the courtroom, so he was excused for being late.

District Attorney Elchorn used his second peremptory challenge yesterday afternoon and excused Samuel H. Worthen, who had been passed for cause by the defense and the state. The 11 jurors sworn in the case were the guests of Manager Wood at the Novelty theater last night and greatly enjoyed the performance. The father of Percy Prothero, Shockley's roommate, who gave the police information leading to the arrest of the defendant, has been present at the trial during several sessions of court.

Amusements

Mr. Dan Sully is a comedian who always appeals to a certain popular taste in any community. He has a good number of friends and admirers here, and they were out in fair numbers to greet him last night. While they gave him a handsome reception and called on him for a speech at the end of the second act, which he delivered very felicitously, it can hardly be said that he pleased his admirers as much as he has done in his old time roles. His methods, his style, and his accent all suggest the hero of the work bench or the philosopher of the corner grocery. Sully is a society part—and especially the Sully of today, who is running to avoidpursue—is really a valuable role that might have been seen for Herbert Keiley, at some of his moods. The play is not one that will ever set the world afire. It has too much dialogue and too little action for one thing, and it is generally built up on a superstructure of trite sayings and worn out mottoes, which were evidently put in for gallery consumption. The galleries consumed them with hearty appetite, it is true, but down stairs they were mostly greeted with amused shakes of the head.

The company is in all ways light hearted. Mr. Sully ought to reconstruct it if he expects to retain the old time favor with which he and his plays have been greeted. Tonight "The Chief Justice" will be seen for the last time, to be followed tomorrow afternoon and evening by "The Old Millstream."

ularly in the support is good, which in the instance, while not of the highest quality is probably as strong as can be expected in a popular-priced stock organization. Pietro Rosso, leader, man, was for the man, Colonel Roderick Majors, the friend who always "fixes things." The part of the man made Mr. Rosso quietly explain to himself that the manager "fixed him" in this case, for it is the plain truth that he was not happily best, and that he did not appear as good advantage as on the opening night. As for Lillian Elliot, who again had a wife's part, we are still waiting to see her little tested before passing a definite criticism on her work. It may be that she will yet make good the promises of her manager. There was no improvement in the efforts of Charles Blair, who did Richard Dutton, the architect, and cannot force us to the conclusion there will be none. Generally speaking, the remainder of the company did very well.

DEATH WATCH PLACED.

Warden Arthur Pratt Assigns Guards To Watch Frank Rose.

Warden Arthur Pratt today placed the death watch over Frank Rose, the convicted wife murderer, who is to die on the morning of Friday, the 22nd, two weeks from today. Rose showed no emotion regarding the innovation and remains practically of the same callous disposition as has marked him since he committed the crime. The guards assigned to this unpleasant duty are George Fuglesy, morning; Chas. H. Davis, afternoon, and Harry Shurtliff, night shift.

GOV. WELLS AND DENTISTS.

Chief Executive Humorously Fills a Cavity at the Convention Today.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Utah Dental association opened its session this morning, at the Kenyon hotel, with an attendance of 75 dentists, about one-half of whom were from out of town.

Governor Wells welcomed the association in a very neat and characteristic address of welcome, in which he made many bright and witty remarks. The governor characterized the dentist as one who "pulls your teeth with the same skill and debonair coolness that he applies to the pulling of your leg. He thinks neither operation will hurt you—they are alike painless to him."

"Dentistry is a special department of the science and art of torture, embracing a knowledge of the physiology, surgery, pathology and the therapeutic, surgical, mechanical and diabolical treatment of the tissues of the mouth, with a view to finding the tenderest places, and then jabbing them with a light running saw."

The governor made a great hit, and was well received. President W. G. Dalrymple of the association made an interesting address in which he called attention to the necessity of harmonizing the organic structure of the association and by-laws was brought up, and pending the reconstruction of the same, action on the admission of new members was postponed. The names of three dentists, Drs. Campbell of Beaver, Tate of Mercer and Broadbent of this city, had been brought over from the previous convention, for ethical reasons, and later, will be acted on with the names of these new applicants, Drs. Gordon of this city, Packard of Springfield, Christensen of American Fork and Stookley of Lehi.
