

EMINENT WOMEN AT HOME.

MRS. J. ELLEN FOSTER.

It is a natural impulse which prompts us to be interested in the home life of the great and the good of the earth. They become our friends, if we read them or about them very much, and we long to know more of them and of their habits and methods of work.

This natural desire is sometimes carried to the extreme, and then it becomes vulgar curiosity; but when controlled and exercised in prudence this interest in great human souls leads us to seek to conform our own lives to the higher lives of those who have found a better way.

With this thought in mind, let us pay a few visits to the homes of some of the best and best known women of these United States. Let us observe what environments go to make up the personnel of these famous friends of ours; we will likewise study the inner characters of these women through the outward expressions of their daily surroundings.

First then go with me through the wide, busy streets of beautiful Washington, riding first in the trolley car, then taking the hurdle, (as the neat bus is called) to the western and northern part of the city.

A tall, modern apartment house, handsomely simple in its massive outline, stands upon the corner of Fourteenth and I streets. It is called "The Turner" and like all other Eastern apartment houses, the upper stories or floors are the choicest and most expensive.

Here we enter, and give our cards to the colored page who silently opens the hall door at our approach. Presently, we pass into the elevator and, arriving at the upper floor, we find ourselves ringing the hall bell and at once our charming hostess meets us and draws us into her cozy little parlor, with the great windows full of Washington's white beauty.

Rugs, pictures, couches, bric-a-brac, books, statues, things they are all there and arranged with a woman's loving hands. Are you surprised? Did you expect severe plainness and austere simplicity?

Because, forsooth, Mrs. Foster is a lawyer, an orator, and one of that rare but noble creature we hear spoken of as a "strong-minded woman," did you expect to find her housed in barracks and clothed in sackings? Behold her then, a very woman to her finger tips, robed in a tea-gown with flowing, clinging draperies and flying ribbons, her surroundings refined and beautiful as only women with artistic feeling can make them. Men artists can never impart the soft delicacy that comes alone from woman's artistic fingers.

We are not disappointed; Col. Foster is a tall, gray-haired man with a kindly eye and a most yet forceful influence. He is every inch a man, and looks worthy the affection and confidence of his gifted wife.

And then what? Greetings, yes; pleasant laughter and banter; yes, O yes! Politics, argument, logic, history, or philosophy? No, indeed, Mrs. Foster, I told you, was a woman, pure and simple. And about the second thing she does, after the colonel has gone back to his study, is to send her maid up for her new dress into which she has incorporated her piece of Utah silk, presented to her by the Provo R. W. C., and we proceed to admire and discuss it in detail.

Then we talk of the weather, the social functions on the tapis, and by and by we ask some questions.

Isn't you surprised to know that this young looking woman is the mother of two married sons, who, themselves, are no mean factors in the history of this nation?

The eldest is the editor of one of the most influential newspapers in Philadelphia and commands an influence in the newspaper world seldom accorded to young men. If all things are to be judged by results, the upbringing of these two brilliant sons of a brilliant mother and a wise father incline us to favor a wide public life for women.

Given a womanly heart and a wise brain, are children injured by a great purpose in the life of the mother? Later we peep into the daintily appointed sleeping chambers, the tiled bath room. Light and beauty are in every room, and as we say our lingering good bye to our hostess we decide anew that home is not four square walls either in a village or in one of the great world cities. Home is an atmosphere, an environment, and a capacity. Blessed is she who holds all these within herself, however the canopy may be stretched above her. Of such is brave and brilliant Mrs. Judith Ellen Foster.

SUSA YOUNG GATES.

be beneficial, but other treatment, usually known as face massage, steaming and so forth do not preserve the complexion. Mrs. Watson is a graceful woman, below middle height, with perfectly charming manners. Her reception room is small and cozy, surrounded by photographs of famous women of the day, her lasting friends.

Cost of Maternal Indulgence.

Mothers wear themselves out and do an injury to their children in not teaching them to help themselves and to be helpful to others. The amount of care that a child requires is very different from that which it may from indulgence demand. If the child were better for it one would not grudge the time and weariness that the mother or nurse spends, but the child is defrauded in the exercise of those powers which can only develop by being put into use. It is better for a child to go to sleep by itself than when it is rocked and sung to sleep, but as a general thing mothers prefer the bondage of the process of wooing sleep for their children, and so tie themselves up and add to their burden without in the least increasing the comfort of the child. Mothers would spare themselves greatly if they would only learn that the training of the child begins with the earliest weeks, and that they can make the child under not believe possible. When the mother is remonstrated with for spoiling the child by overindulgence she will say: "My child is different from others; she is more nervous. If I do not take her up she will cry and make herself sick." The child in the beginning finding that the mother ran to it the minute it began to cry, of course soon learned this method of summoning her. It also perceived that the louder the cry the greater the indulgence, consequently it develops speedily into a despot, beneath whose tyranny the mother grows wan and pale. When it is said of her, "She is a perfect slave to her children," she looks satisfied and pleased, as if she had won a martyr's crown, instead of which she has uselessly squandered her strength and prevented the child from learning proper habits, which are as necessary to his growth and development as it is that he should learn to walk instead of being kept on his knees creeping the rest of his life, because he may fall and hurt himself and cry now and then.—Harper's Bazar.

Lessons in Home Sewing.

All well-cut patterns necessitate the stretching of those edges which occur on a bias thread of the texture, to insure that part setting without a wrinkle; for instance, a front shoulder edge, to give that fast appearance we all wish should be well stretched, and should dip downwards slightly, while the back one is eased to it, and either cut straight or with a slight upward curve. The front neck edge, where it is on the bias, is also usually a much better fit for a little stretching, which in both cases must of course be done when the lining and material are together.

The following rules for fitting will be found to be reliable: First see that the bodice is setting well down to the waist at back. Next pin the front lines together from the neck to the waist. At the latter place do not let out if too tight, as by so doing you immediately alter the set of the darts, and give a broad, straight effect, which is very ugly. Make the required enlargement at the under-arm seam, throwing the front of bodice more forward. Make any required fitting at the waist before touching the upper part unless the bodice is a little short-waisted, and by lowering the shoulders a little this may be rectified; in such a case open the shoulders and pin them temporarily together, fitting them properly after fitting the waist. If too long waisted, pin a tuck all round the waist line in the lining and slash it along each piece when they are all separated. If there is more fullness than is needed just in the front of the armhole, an interlining of fine French canvas (the best kind of padding) will make it set quite smoothly. Or take up a small dart from the armhole edge, tapering it off to nothing at about the center (or below the top) of the back dart.—Harper's Bazar.

A GIRL'S WAY.

I ask her if she loves me. She shakes her head, and when I turn to leave she sweetly smiles, And lures me back again.

"Alas! you love another!" In angry tones I say: She nods, but as I turn to leave She sweetly bids me stay.

With outstretched arms I offer My love—my all—to her, And seek to clasp her, but she cries: "Stand back! How dare you, sir!"

With sinking heart and hopeless I turn, once more, and lo!

I hear a soft, sweet voice that says: "I wish you wouldn't go."

I throw my arms around her. And press her to my heart. And, after a while when she gets time, She says: "You think you're smart!" S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

He is a Wonder.

All who see Mr. C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, as he is now, cheerful, erect, vigorous, without an ache, could hardly believe he is the same man, who, a short time ago, had to sit in a chair, propped up by cushions, suffering intensely from an aching back, in agony if he tried to stoop—all caused by chronic kidney trouble, that no medicine helped till he used Electric Bitters and was wholly cured by three bottles. Positively cures Backache, Nervousness, Loss of Appetite, all Kidney troubles. Only 50c at Z. C. M. I. Drug Dept.

Rheumatism is conceded to have its origin in a poisoned condition of the blood and to be most successfully treated by HERBINE, which acts upon the liver, kidneys and other blood purifying organs, thereby diverting the system of the offending agents. Price, 50 cents. Z. C. M. I.

TEACHERS.

Dr. Talmage's new book, "The Great Salt Lake, Present and Past," should be in the hands of every educator. The amount of information it contains relating to the great saline sea, makes it an invaluable work for reference or study.

PUTNAM.

PUTNAM NAIL CO.

New York, Nov. 18, 1900.

Dear Sirs,—

In reply to your favor I would state that I have used the Putnam Nail for several years, and have advised my friends to use it only.

It is hardly necessary for me to add that I prefer it to all others.

Very truly,
Robert Bonner.

The Putnam Nail enjoys the distinction of being the only Hot-Forged and Hammer-Pointed nail made by machinery, and which imitates the old hand process.

ROBERT BONNER

INSISTS ON ITS USE.

All others are COLD ROLLED and SHEARED, as an examination of their edges near the point will show, and are liable to SPLIT or SLIVER in driving, to injure and perhaps kill the horse.

The above picture, from a photo representing Mr. Bonner in the act of handling his smith a Putnam nail, while superintending the shoeing of a Sunol, will be sent in the form of a half tone, size, 5x8, on thick, white paper, with wide margin, on receipt of 2 cent stamp for postage, etc.

FEMINE FLOTSAM.

THE VIRTUES OF A MILK DIET.

Milk is the latest and most approved dietetic fad. The woman who is fair and with 40 starting her in the face, and who is determined not to be fat, makes her breakfast and lunch of milk and fresh fruit. She dines on a quarter of a pound of lean roast meat with enough fresh green vegetable to "make bulk" and "brimides," as Tommy Atkins would say. The fresh, wholesome beauty of the young queen of Holland is attributed to her frugal diet of the national milk and cheese and the extraordinary vitality of the aged Roman pontiff is another evidence of what a rigorous diet will do for even so delicate a man as Pope Leo has always been. The milk diet is of more value than many complexion washes, and as a means of adding or diminishing one's weight it has no equal.

The popular superstition that milk is fattening arises from the fact that many misguided people, in addition to a heavy meal, drink milk sufficient for another meal, and complain that it disagrees with them and increases their weight. In order to derive benefit from the milk diet one should get hold of a few fundamental facts. In the first place, a meal and a half pints of pure milk, or three glasses, contain, besides water, enough food in concentrated form and agree with them and increase their weight. In order to derive benefit from the milk diet one should get hold of a few fundamental facts. In the first place, a meal and a half pints of pure milk, or three glasses, contain, besides water, enough food in concentrated form and agree with them and increase their weight.

Milk and meat should never be taken at the same meal. Heavy vegetables, like beans and peas, should be avoided entirely by the gouty, and if by reason of infirmity of appetite they are indulged in they should take the place of meat. At that meal. Where the diet is adopted because of a nervous breakdown, or general debility, liberal addition of cream to the stewed fruit is recommended. Sweet butter is also most valuable for this purpose. Indeed, some physicians go so far as to say that bread is absolutely valueless except as a medium for butter eating.

Many physicians who advocate the milk diet find it difficult to wean their patients from heavy breakfasts and lunches, especially as they are accustomed to regard milk as a beverage. Best results are to be obtained from the indulged diet, but where the flesh is too weak concessions are made. Breakfast is easily managed by putting a spoonful of coffee in each glass of milk, and some recipes will give the mid-day allowance the similitude of a lunch. Butter and cream may be added freely when the reduction of weight is not an object.

Horsehair Back Again.

In the matter of furniture, old pieces are being copied or the genuine secured, if possible. All sorts of quaint pieces are being worked from the real old-time square work table to a genuine Fairfax divan. This Fairfax divan is now most popular, and how, think you, it is upholstered? In horsehair. Yes, the real old, cold horsehair of our grand-mother's days. But it is a much prettier horsehair. It comes in soft greens, old reds and other rich colorings, and it has a figure woven in it like a brocade of goods. So you see it is horsehair up-to-date.

For the dining-room, mahogany furniture is preferred, and when we discuss the new hangings you will see why. As to other pieces of the furniture in general wicker in forest green will be used, upholstered in high-colored cretonne cushions. For covering furniture, jute in rich colors will be much employed. It has all the appearance of a silk brocade and comes in both plain and figured goods and in the two-toned styles.

A Delicious Sandwich Filling.

A sandwich filling useful for a tea is made of cold boiled chicken chopped very fine, to which, for the meat of one chicken, weighing about three pounds, is added half a pound of almonds that have been blanched and finely chopped. Season the mixture with two teaspoonfuls of salt and a teaspoonful of pepper. When thoroughly blended in a smooth paste, it is ready to spread on thin slices of bread, cut in oblong or fancy shapes.

Having Their Faces Made Over.

Society's greatest fad at present is the crase which has broken out in what is called face improvement. The high apostle of this is a Mrs. Watson, in England. She has at the present time half the smart ladies of London under her hands. Her specialty consists in double chins. She guarantees to make the double chin disappear, and tells me, and equally will add one if you like. But above all, the manner in which she places and displaces flesh, taking it away from where it is not wanted and pushing it into places where it is, has brought her customers in almost embarrassing numbers. Gentle friction, says my informant, may
