FOUND DEAD. William Washburn Expires in Shack North of the Crematory. An employe of the city this motning found a dead man in a shack north of the crematory. The body is supposed to be that of William Washburn, an aged junk dealer, although identification is not complete. It is though that it was a case of natural death, as no marks in-dicating violence were found on the re-mains. The man was apparently about 60 years of age. Justice of the Peace Dana T. Smith viewed the remains and conclud-ed that an inquest was not necessary. The body is at the morgue, and if friends or relatives do not claim h it will be buried at the expense of the county.

NO STRIKE SCHEDULED. Neither the company officials or the men believe there will be any strike, or that there will be any trouble that will occasion any disturbance, or any inconvenience to the traveling public. Some of the trackmen employed by the company quit work yesterday, be-cause of dissatisfaction with their pay, but, the company had no difficulty in filling their places. The company of-ficials call attention to the fact that the Salt Lake carmen are receiving higher pay than is being given their brethren in Denver, Spokane and other far western cities, excepting Butte and San Francisco where ab-normal conditions obtain. The last street car strike occurred in September, 1891, and lasted 10 days. It was confined to the Salt Lake City Railway, as the Rapid Transit company, though organized, did not begin operation until the following month. The outcome was disastrous for the strikers, although the Federation of Labor made a public demonstration in their favor.

Judge Waldron attacked the wording of the indiciment, and contended that there were no elements of "raud" in the things alleged to have been done by his clients. It was not charged against them that they or any of them had made any illegal entries of coal lands. The most that could be said of the de-fendants was that they had made pur-chases of lands secured legitimately by individuals. individuals.

Mr. Varian followed in a brief argu-ment against the indictment, claim-ing that it did not specify a criminal offense. Adjournment came before the attorneys for complainant had an in-

"I must protest against this." interrupted Mr. Hartridge of Thaw's coun-sel. "Those papers were produced for the benefit of the commission at a se-cret session and the district attorney is reading them to the reporters. It is another case like the Lyon letters from Pittsburg. They were sent here to the clerk of the court. It was agreed that they might be capied in the district at-torney's office, and then they mysteri-ously appeared in the newspapers." "There was nothing mysterious about the publication of those letters," said Mr. Jerome, "I gave them out myself. They were public documents produced They were public documents produced in open court." "But they had not been admitted in evidence," retorted Mr. Hartridge. Chairman McClure put an end to the discussion by saying the Lyon letters were not before the commission. Dr. Diefendorf said the suggestions made by Thaw indicated a delusional state of mind. "Do you think he had delusions when he committed the homicide?" asked "Do you think he had deliasions when he committed the homicide?" asked Chairman McClure, "Yes," replied the witness, who went into an elaborate explanation of the difference between medical and legal insanity, declaring that Thaw was medically but not legally insane when he killed White. Under questioning by Mr. Hartridge, Dr. Diefendorf said that Thaw's delu-sions were similar to those indicated in the letters which formed a part of the district attorney's hypothetical quas-tion at the trial. "On similar writings, then, you reach the conclusion that Thaw was same and at another instance?" asked Mr. Hartridge. Dr. Diefendorf said he would stand on his answers. He admitted he had never personally examined Thaw, but thought him to be suffering from paranola. The Thaw lunacy commission went into executive session at 12:15 p.m. for the final mental and physical examina-tion of the defendant. The Thaw lunacy commission remain-ed in session to consider its report after the examination of Thaw had been com-pleted. nofa Mr. Jerome and counsel representing Mr. Jerome the counsel representing the defendant were notified that they were no longer required by the commis-sion and there would be no communica-tion of any sort with any one tonight. The commission undoubtedly will report to Justice Fitzgenild before the court convence tomorrow morning.

TRYING TO GET A JURY TO TRY THE RUEF CASE.

San Francisco, April 3.—The work of se-curing a jury to irp Abraham Ruef, ac-cused of extortion, was resumed this morning in Judge Dinne's department of the superior court. One talesman. J. R. Bradstreet was temporarily accepted yes-terday, and another, A. R. Duperu was passed by the prosecution but challenged by the defense. Although the challenge was denied, a question as to whether or not Depera's name was on the assessment, roll was raised, and this matter is to be passed on today. The examination into the eligibility of other talesmen will then proceed.

The grand jury this afternoon will re-sume its investigation into the charges of grait in connection with the granting of telephone and other franchises. The supreme court is expected to so ren-der a decision in regard to Ruer's applica-tion for a habeas corpus to secure his re-tion for a habeas corpus to secure his re-

Kimball had just completed his load under the trap, and the last scraper full of soil was being dumped on to his wakon, when one of the scraper horses caught soil was being dumped on to his wagon, when one of the scraper horses caught 'a hoof in the open trap. Its plunges resulted in the enfire outift rolling over down the embankment and down on top of Ximball and his team. He saw what was coming in time, and managed to escape with some cuts and bruises, but without losing the cigarette he held in his routh at the time. A cave-in accompanied the tumult-nous descent, partially burying one of the scraper horses which iay across the backs of the wagon team, with his feet pawing the zir at a furious rate. His mate was crowded down in between the wagon horses, which were forced down into the soil. It, was a great mix-up. The other teamsters were fairly frantic in their efforts to loosen the harnesses, and extricate the partially entombed animals; and after many trials succeeded. Fortunately, the horses were uninitized beyond the ter-rific squeezing, and were led up out of the cut to recover their wind. The per-formance was witnessed by quite a crowd.

The answer to this query, he said was important, as similar cases to the one at bar were pending in four states of the Union. Judge Waldron had the closing ar-gument, and he had barely started when court took a recess until 2 o'clock, this afternoon, at which time he resumed his remarks. A lengthy brief has been filed by the defense, and the prosocution was given a period of 30 days in which to file a brief on their part, and while the arguments will be closed today, the decision of Judge Marshall cannot be looked for until after the expiration of the 30 days. days

The rules for sanitary shops may be enforced by the board, and every harber must keep his shop and his tools scrupulously clean, his mators sterilized, and clean linen must be used for every customer, and any violation of the rules of the board may be followed by revocation of the harber's license. Every barber must secure a certific-cate to be issued by the state board of examination before he can operate in any shop of the state, such certificate costing $1, within 90 days of the date of the passage of the law. Any person not complying with this provision will not be allowed to continue his business as a barber. The law now gives the state board authority to appoint deputy in-spectors, and the plan is to appoint a deputy in each of the T counties of the state, who shall have power to enter and inspect any barber shop during working hours, and it shall be his duity to report any infraction of the sanitary rules adopted by the board.
