He Made Holes Through the Opponent's Line Big Enough for Company Of Soldiers.

There are many who are adverse to believing that Jack Munroe, the ex-miner from Butte, can fight, even though he did give and take with Jim Jeffries, the champion, for four rounds last winter. But there are about 2,000 New Yorkers who will swear that the man from the west is a skyful of stars as a football player. Those 2,000 saw the glant in a uniform of Olympic Athletic club on Harlem oval at One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street and Madison avenue. He looked good in it. Looked as mild as a kitten, too. That's the way he appeared to a giant named Creighton of the West Point cugineers, who played opposite Munroe at right tackle. In just one minute after play was called Creighton changed his mind at right tackle. In just one minute after play was called Creighton changed his mind. "The smile that won't come off" beamed over the face of the man who nopes soon to fight Jim Jeffries. The signal was given. Munroe was not aggressive. He just pushed forward, waved one hand genty and there was a hole big erough for a whole company of soldiers to pass through. The result was that the Olym-ples wor by the score of 29 to 0. Munroe was really a here in the game, and more so when after getting the ball on one oc-casion he ran 25 yards and made a touch down for his teath. Munroe is a different man on the foot-ball field than he is in the ring. He seems to take the game on the griditon as a joke and is always smiling. In the ring he wars a facre expression. There is nothing rough in his play. He is rather genese and an idea of his strength is casily gained in the olaying of football. Owens, who a couple of years ago, was on the Columbia varsity eleven, says Munroe is as line a player and as fast as he ever saw, and with a good coach would develop into the greatest of line-men. The ex-miner will play all season on the lympic team. and next for line-men. The ex-miner will play all season

Prison Officials Have Theory Regarding the Jail Delivery Of Two Weeks Ago.

LOVE LETTER FROM WADDELL.

Authorities Believe that Johnson, the Trusty, Escaped to Avoid Punishment for Part He Played.

It is now strongly believed by the prison authorities that E. P. Johnson, the trusty who escaped from the state prison last Wednesday, was implicated n sumuggling into the prison the revolvers which were used by the convicts in the recent break for liberty. It is also thought that the willingness of Harry Waddell, one of the main leaders of the break, to tell how the revolvers were secured, is the cause of Johnson leaving the prison to escape punishment for his part in that event-ful incident, Waddeli, it is believed, won Johnson's friendship and also the won Johnson's friendship and also the friendship of the latter's friends, sim-ply to use them in the plot to escape. Johnson's capture will probably be effected in a short time. Mrs. S. C. Larson, the mother of the two girls who had frequently visited Johnson at the state prison, indignantly denies that she would shelter an escaped convict. She declares that if he comes to her house she will at once notify the officers and assist in his capture in the officers and assist in his capture in order to disprove the suspicion which has been cast upon her and her daugh-

COMPROMISING LETTER.

A letter, written by Waddell to one of the Misses Larson, is now in the hands of the authorities and is be-lieved to be convincing evidence as to the intimacy which existed between Johnson and Waddell. The letter, which Johnson and Waddell. The letter, which is affectionate in the extreme, follows: "U, S. P., Sugar, Utah, Feb. 27, 1903. "Miss Annie Larson, Salt Lake City, Utah;--My Dear Miss Larson-I would address you as my dear friend if 1 dared but until I prove myself worthy of your friendship and earned it I am denied this privilege. Although until this moment I have never expressed to you a written or spoken word. I regard the inexplicable phenomena of the hu-man mind? One may experience a senman mind? One may experience a sen-timent, an emotion or a passion with-out knowing its causation. I might see a person but once and never exchange a word with her or him, as the case might be, and there would form in my mind involuntarily a profound regard or a pronounced dislike for that person. So it is in this case. As I said, I have seen you only a few times, and then an influence as irresistible as it is inex-picable. These reasons, I trust, will excuse me for writing to you, a strangscuse me for writing to you, a strang-er, as I do. The instances when I saw you were when, in company with your sister, you visited Mr. Johnson at the penitentiary. It was some time, how-ever, after I saw you for the first time that is school on the first time that I was emboldened to speak to Ed-ward, to whom I have become very much attached, of you. loyalty was rewarded with disloyalty. My friends, as I believed them, left me to suffer in their stead for their misdeed. If they were really my friends I would gladly suffer the 10 years' im-

i would giadiy suffer the lo years imprisonment imposed upon me by the court. Indeed, I would suffer more. I would give my life.
"Although I feel friendless, I feel as though I stood alone on a barren rock with the angry seas of injustice and vengeance dashing against me in reality. I have many friends, but they are a thousand miles away, as is my home. A thousand miles is not a great distance, yet in this case it is as great as though it were a million. This is true, because my parents and friends do not know of my prediciment here and, please God, they will never know. I would remain here a hundred years-did I live that long-rather than have my father, mother and friends know that I am incarcerated in a prison and branded a feion. I would friends know that I am incarcerated in a prison and branded a felon. I would die of shame did these dear ones learn of my ignominious fate, regardless that I am absolutely innocent of the crime for which I suffer! Suffer! Great God! did you know what agony I have suffered during the cruch, long years that I have been here you would at least pity me, if you do deny me your friendship. Mv suffer-ing has been mental, not physical. Puysical pain is nothing compared with mental anguish.

WADDELL'S THOUGHTFULNESS "Did I believe that I must remain

Did 1 believe that 1 must remain here for five more years, until my sen-tence expired, I would go mad, I am sure. But I will not have to remain so long. I am convinced that ere long my innocence will be established and that my freedom will be restored to me. It is this belief that buoys me up and prevents me sinking into the exthat my freedom will be restored to me. It is this belief that buoys me up and prevents me sinking into the ex-treme depths of despair. I sofnetimes condemn myself as a fool for suffering here in this veritable hell, more ter-rible, it seems to me, than Dante's inferno of the seventh circle, when by writing to father I could regain my liberty. I speak thus with assurance because I know what money and influbecause I know what money and influ-ence can accomplish; and he would spare neither in effecting my release. As I said before, however, I would remain here a hundred years rather than bring disgrace upon those loved

"For fear I will weary you I will bring this already too lengthy letter to an end. But before doing so I must explain I will send this letter to yo confidentially. That is, without th knowledge of the authorities here. I you will make my poor heart glad I entreat you reply to it; and if you do, I beg you make no reference to it. "Let it appear from your letter that we were formerly, before my arrest, acjudited and that you learned from Mr. Johnson of my being here. If you per-mit me to write to you again I will send my letters through the regular channel. If you, my dear Miss Larson, grant me my earnest prayer, if you will extend to me your hand in friend-ship, you will lighten the burden I ship, you will lighten the burden 1 perforce must bear, you will make me happy. Perhaps you will have a desire to see me—I fervently hope you will— and if you do. I suggest that you visit me some Sunday when you are visiting Mr. Johnson, but not, of course, un-il we have exchanged a few latters. Mr. Johnson, but not, of course, un-til we have exchanged a few letters. I snow you would be embarrassed to talk to an entire stranger. But I will no longer be a stranger to you, I be-ileve, when I have written to you a few times. Believe me, my dear friend, I beg for the honor to be your most obedient servent. obedient servant

New York, Oct. 26,-It is a long time since any event has caused such a sensation as the walking competition just held here by the dressmakers working girls, says a Parls dispatch to the Herald. The place of the rendezvous was the Gardens of the Tuilleries. Here they began to arrive two hours before 10 c'clock, the time fixed for the start The scene inside the gardens was most picturesque. There were hundreds of girls of every kind. Their ages were from 14 to 40, and their costumes were as varied as the wearers. There were 1,600 starters, and many of them took the matter quite seriously. After their numbers were arranged, the warning for the start was given and the heavy gates of the garden swung on their hinge

By this time the trowd of rightseers was something enormous; there was not a vacant inch of space on the place, while up the Avenue des Champs Elysces, at far-as the eye could reach nothing could be seen but serried lines of speciators. In the Place de la Concorde were a couple of companies of the Republican guards, supplemented by a score of mounted men and a large force of police. With dimculty a space was cleared for the 1.60 midineties who faced the starter. A crack of the pistol, and the waik to Nanterre had begun. Owing to the crowd there only remained a matrow lane up the center of the Champs Elysee, and the starting line at once revolved lised into a procession. These who had the luck to take the lead in the scramble for places at the start narraily were able to keep it without difficulty, while those who had to fail in behind had tut little hope of forcing their way to the font.

Those who journcycl out to the university grounds on Saturday afternoon to witness the game between the 'Varsity 'Preps' and the Ogden high school team.
were more than repaid for their trouble. They saw one of the most interesting gridron battles of their lives; saw two teams evenly matched put up a determined struggle for victory, fight viciously but fairly for every inch of ground, and then saw the struggle end with an even score-lo to 10. Neither side had any marked advantage, and it was impossible to safely predict a winner at any time the ball was in play. It was a game full of pretty plays that set the spectators to howing with delight. As soon as one side turned a spectacular "stunt." It was equalled by something from the other side had its advanages, when the work was summed up it was apparent to all that it was a toss up between the two aggregations. The wto bright particular stars were Captain Johnson of the Cyale team, and Lawrence of the university eleven. One of the bright features of the contest was the Soyard run to a touchdown by Johnson. Lawrence was given a big round of applause for his splondid goal kick from he field. The summary follows:

But Little Difficulty. When Captain Bassett of the All Hal-lows college football team stated early in the season that bis eleven would have to be reckoned with before the state championship was stored away for the football season of 1903, he made no idle boast.
