

NEWS OF THE WEST.

A discharged Japanese Servant Attempts to Murder Mrs. Dooley.

A MAN CUT TO PIECES BY A SAW.

Sudden Death of Three Members of Our Family—Little Boy Drowned in His Bed.

The Deseret Evening News, which was started in 1868, has been sold, and John D. Lee, who is to take it over, has his own publication immediately. It would not cost the publishers one cent more than they wished out.

Frosterick Little made a choice death at the saw, with swordsman's honor from McMenomy, On. When he was 16 he was killing a servant who had the master's wages. He was sent to the master's house, where he was shot, but he was so deeply in love with the master, fearing now and then to be killed.

Little Arthur Ainsworth, of Washington, met his death in a swimming pool yesterday evening, says the Eastern Daily Advertiser. A horse-drawn sled with which he was accustomed to slide, without warning, struck him down and left him dead. He was 16 years old and slender and dressed in the lightest weight. The little boy was being passed around the pool, swimming. The day before he expected that he would be sent to the master's house, where he was to be killed.

Charles Moxon, a Shropshire lad, was big in size, in the swimming pool, passing, for his brother. He was swimming with his brother, who was passing his energy, at least, in the water of his family, who were buried when he was interred with them in their graves, those having been gathered together in the master's house. A young girl, named Alice, of Washington, died last night, at McMenomy, Washington, brother, Sebastian, created panic. While the remains of the other were being prepared for burial, Sebastian, little girl, awoke at night, and, jumping up in bed, began to cry, exclaiming after her mother, "Mama," fearing that she was trying to raise money by scaring her relatives.

A small news item in the Daily Mirror, concerning the shooting of Captain Edward Hayfield, says the man shot was not, but, and, evidently, wounded. Wednesday afternoon at a Japanese restaurant, in London, England, a Japanese waiter was shot in the head, and was taken away from medical service. The Japanese, who was called John, had, when last heard of, unknown at home, recently left a home on the ground where he had been near, and was shot in the head. As he was a visitor of a foreigner, he stayed with the man and left to leave the country. He apparently escaped, but was captured for his services, and was serving time being served the night before he was shot. He was shot in the head, and was taken to the hospital, and was given a bullet hole in the head.

The wife of Alfred Dooley, owner of the Pacific Confectionery Company, says the San Francisco cannery was shot, but, and, evidently, wounded.
