EDITORIAL NOTES.

Dr. Dix terms "society" that "wild, strange maelstrom."

He who does not respect confidence will never find happiness in his path. The belief in virtue vanishes from his heart, the source of nobler actions becomes extinct in his soul.

The money order business of the Postoffice Department last year amounted to $120,000,000, with a profit to the government of $165,000. This system was established May 17, 1864, and in the fifth year of its existence the business amounted to about $25,000,000.

The Providence Star calls attention to the fact that the word "stalwart" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "staelforth," and originally meant "worth stealing." As applied politically, it still retains this meaning, but in an objective rather than a subjective sense.

Dr. Hammond claims that a healthy adult should eat per diem forty ounces of solids, of which two-thirds should be vegetable and one-third animal, twenty ounces of water, and eight ounces of tea or coffee. Does he expect a man is going to carry a pair of scales with him to the table at every meal?

The Indian training school at Forest Grove, Oregon, has been highly successful in securing the attendance of pupils and stimulating in them a desire for learning. Beginning with an attendance of fifteen, the number has now increased to ninety, the children representing a variety of tribes, from Alaska to Idaho.

A new species of exquisite has appeared at the East and is known as the "dude." He is like unto the "masher" in his fondness for gorgeous raiment, but he has none of the predatory instincts of the other nuisance; he is satisfied in contemplating his own loveliness; he exists merely for the sake of wearing good clothes and exhibiting himself for the admiration of the public.

The Evening Post, of New York, says of the clergyman who wrote in the Quarterly Review so untruthfully concerning the effects of the marriage with a deceased wife's sister: "The best way of dealing with this clergyman would be to compel him to produce a respectable American family where the children are led by the existing state of the marriage law to regard their aunts 'with apprehension.'"

The Cleveland Herald says it is stated that wicked New York City contains one retail liquor store to every one hundred and twenty-five inhabitants. Well that is a good many. The last directory credits Cleveland with 1,067 saloons, which with a population of slightly under 200,000 souls, would make an average of one saloon to about 180 people. In all cities the per cent. ratio of churches to saloons is about as 1 to 10. Not all Mr. Herald. Put the word "Christian" with quotation marks before the word "cities" and you may be correct.

The Jewish Chronicle says: "Herr S. D. Levontin, President of the Society and Colony 'Rishon Letziyon,' founded by Russian Jews whilst the persecutions were at their height, sends a favorable account of the progress of the colony which has been formed in the neighborhood of Jaffa. Ample testimony is borne to the hearty co-operation and valuable aid which the settlers receive at the hands of M. Hirsch, Director of the Agricultural School of the Alliance Israelites at Jaffa. The first essays of the colonists in agriculture promise to be successful, thanks to the practical assistance they have received in this branch of industry. In order to promote useful knowledge, the settlers have recently established a library."

Chance acquaintance is a dangerous thing for young ladies, and secret engagements generally lead to misery. Five years ago a well known young lady of Detroit, while returning from a music lesson, met a very presentable young man on the street. He addressed her on some pretext and so impressed her that she met him several times after and finally agreed to a runaway marriage. The parents, who discovered the marriage on the following day, had the fellow arrested and discovered that he was a notorious burglar. Since then he has been serving out terms for burglary, and the foolish girl, who was legally bound to him, concluded that a divorce would suit her better than life with a cracksmen. The moral is obvious.

The workings of the boasted school laws of the States are illustrated by the following from the N. Y. Sun: "Chicago spends $1,600,000 a year on her public schools. The making of the annual appropriation leads the Times to charge that the city's school system is inadequate for the work assigned it; that half as many children as are enrolled are educated at private cost in private schools; that many young children, the parents of whom rely wholly upon the free system, absent themselves for want of sufficient accommodations; that the money which might secure these facilities for children who must get the simple elements of common education in the public schools at a tender age, or be deprived of them altogether, is expended in providing for older pupils instructions in accomplishments not contemplated by the law providing for common school education; and that, whereas, the State at large educates children at an outlay of from $8 to $10 per capita, Chicago wastes about $34.

The influence of the teeth upon the nervous system is recognized as an important one by medical experts, and the science of dentistry is constantly increasing in general esteem. Defective teeth may cause a long list of nervous ailments, and the eye and ear may both suffer seriously from their influence. The total loss of vision and of the sense of hearing has been known to result from disease of the teeth, and catarrh and neuralgia are both in the list of maladies which may have the same origin. The services of a good dentist in early life may save large expenditures in doctor's fees in later life, besides preventing much distress. It is generally understood, or should be, that it pays to take good care of one's natural teeth, and that it is better to have them all removed than to let them make the cavity of the mouth the abode of disease. One of the most distinguished specialists in the surgery of the ear New York has ever known gives an earnest warning as to the care of the teeth for the sake of the nervous system.
