SALT LAKE GROWING.
New Directory Shows the Population at Over 90,000.

The new city directory is out and will be ready for delivery Wednesday. Its introductory says: "We began to make directories for Salt Lake City and vicinity in 1890. In 1891 we secured 24,304 names, and as this count was confined to individual names (no firms), we estimated that a multiple of 25 would give approximately the total population, and consequently placed it at 74,312."

"This year we have 49,430 names—a gain over last year of 3,502 names, and reducing the multiple to 24, it gives us a total population of 90,592, which is the figure approximately correct. It gives the city proper (within the suburbs) close upon 80,000 people."

FRUIT AND BIRDS.
Salt Lake County Horticultural Officials Take Steps to Protect Both.

At the meeting of the Salt Lake County Horticultural society on Saturday afternoon the speakers were J. E. Cox, S. D. Wallace and County Fruit Tree Inspector J. P. Sorenson. Mr. Cox made an interesting talk on the subject of the protection of useful birds. After a discussion of the subject by the members, a committee, consisting of J. E. Cox, J. P. Sorenson, and H. C. Anderson, was appointed to inform the state, county and city superintendents of schools of the society's views in the matter.

Spraying of the sodling moth was discussed by S. D. Wallace who recommended a solution of lime, salt and sulphur as the best spray for these. The use of arsenic was recommended by County Inspector Sorenson for spraying. He also urged upon the members the necessity of cleaning out old and defective orchards.

At the next meeting of the society on June 3 those who will read papers are Joseph M. Smith of Draper and C. M. Naper of Riverton. They will discuss the cultivation of orchards. Joseph C. Naper will speak on the subject of raising grapes.

Why Suffer From Rheumatism?
Why suffer from rheumatism when one can get relief from a Pain Relieving Pill? This is the question that every sufferer from rheumatism should ask himself. The relief is so quick and so sure that it is worth many times its cost. Many who have used it have found it a short relief from suffering and have been surprised to find that after awhile the relief became permanent. Mrs. V. H. Lorette of Young's Union, Tennessee, writes: "I am a great sufferer from rheumatism, all over from head to foot, and Chamberlain's Pain Relieving Pill is the only thing that will relieve the pain." For sale by all druggists.

AMUSEMENTS.

Although many ticket sellers had been in the field for a week, there were not over 150 people in the audience at Saturday night's Tabernacle concert, for the benefit of the University of Utah gymnasium building, and seven of these were in the gallery. It was certainly extraordinary business management that placed the event for the same date that the University was booked for Saltair. Where the purchasers of tickets were, if they were as numerous as was supposed, is not definitely known, but it is supposed that some of them were in the line of the lake.

However, the small audience was so full, and there was no lack of appreciation, and they applauded as enthusiastically as the large audience. The Tabernacle had been one-quarter full.

The program was carried out as intended, for the noble 150, excepting the harp number. This was omitted, the most authentic "With full voiced choir resounding: 'The Utah Ladies' excellent quartet sang, 'Come my love,' and 'J. J. Fishback's' rendering of the Chopin Funeral march, was a dainty and exquisite piece of work. Mr. Douglas favored the audience with the ever popular 'Forenoon song' from 'Carman,' being impressive and dramatic in the upper registers. The double piano number by Misses Ellerbeck and Planders was one of the finest musical efforts ever given in the Tabernacle. They played Chaminade's 'Concertstück,' Miss Ellerbeck playing the piano part proper, and Miss Planders the orchestral part, arranged for second piano accompaniment where there is no orchestra. Miss Ellerbeck's performance was from memory, and was given without the slightest hesitancy. She is a charming artist, her playing is always without conscious mental effort and always graceful. It is doubtful if there is any other woman in the west who has more technique than Miss Ellerbeck. Miss Planders, of course, performed her accompaniment perfectly and gracefully, and showed herself an accomplished artist. Both ladies were very well received.

The Orpheus club number was given with the snap and spirit, as well as the artistic excellence for which that organization has always been noted, and they received a warm encore. Mr. Skelton gave the Sixth Air of De Berlioz on the violin, playing also the violin accompaniment to Mrs. Plunders' well-received 'O Sanctaria Ave.' Mrs. Allison's rich contralto voice was never sweeter, and she was given royal reception. Mrs. Allison is always a favorite. The evening closed with 'The Star Spangled Banner' from the choir and organ. The organist just 'turned himself loose' in that number, and the way he opened up his battery of 32 feet diapasons in connection with the organ, made the audience realize the reality to believe that a celestial wind band of indefinite numbers had been suddenly sprung on them. Prof. Squire proved a most excellent accompanist.

The time consumed by that audience in getting out of the Tabernacle was the shortest on record.

The Pollard Lullington Opera Co. opens at the Grand tonight in "The Belle of New York."

The Utah theater will present an old time favorite drama this week in "The Octoroon" at the usual prices of admission. Few plays in the history of the stage have had the success of this thriller, and it can be relied on to do the old time business.
