ANNOUNCEMENT

Salt Lake City, Sept. 22, 1906.

The Salt Lake Auditorium, one of the largest and most complete buildings of its kind in the country, will be ready for business on or about Oct. 15th. The Auditorium is admirably located, being on Richards Street, one-half block from the Temple, easy of access by all street car lines, and only one-half block from Main street. The Auditorium floor is being laid of hard maple, hexagon in shape, and especially adapted for roller skating. However, the building will be available for all first-class entertainments, conventions, lectures, concerts, etc. We realize that the endorsement and patronage of a discriminating public is only to be won and maintained by presenting a series of entertainments from which every objectionable feature is excluded, and in which ladies and gentlemen may participate with pleasure.

It is the determination of the management to supply only efficient articles of irreproachable character and to exclude from the atmosphere of the Auditorium every element that might possibly exert a harmful influence on the mind of the young and impressionable people while in search of employment. All the safeguards with which it is possible to surround young people in their hours will be scrupulously enforced.

Every objectionable element will be eliminated, and only the patronage of those who report themselves in a manner consistent with the strictest propriety will be solicited. In fact, none but those known, or supposed by the management to be acceptable to our patrons will be admitted and furnished with skates. No intoxicating liquors will be sold on or near the premises. The skating surface of the floor will be 28 feet by 122 feet, and will be extended 100 feet more in the near future. Hot's brass band has been engaged, and will furnish music afternoon and evening. Gentlemen uniformed in skates will be in attendance to teach beginners the art of roller skating.
