

AMERICANS ARE INVADING MEXICO.

Keen Interest in Growth of Commercial Relations With United States.

SPLENDID TRAIN SERVICE.

Senator Platt a Model of Mental Activity—Railroad Rate Bill and Other Measures.

Special Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 7.—While a widespread interest is manifested everywhere in the growth of the commercial relations between the United States and the Oriental empires, very little has been heard or seen recently in reference to the growing commerce between this country and the republics to the south of us, Mexico in particular. Yet within the past few years millions of American capital have been invested in mining, forestry, agriculture and manufactures in the sister republic. The railroads are beginning to recognize the opportunities for business which a satisfactory line of communication promises, and recently an experiment in transportation was inaugurated between St. Louis and Mexico City which has already demonstrated that the time is ripe for better facilities for communication.

SPECIAL TO MEXICO.

Mr. William E. Hoyt, eastern passenger agent of one of the western roads has been here this week and he tells an interesting story which demonstrates the readiness of the people of this country to seize any opportunity to reach the City of Mexico promptly and comfortably. "On the 18th of January," said Mr. Hoyt, "a special solid vestibule train was started out of St. Louis over the Iron Mountain & Mexican National railroads. It is scheduled to reach the City of Mexico in 59 hours from the time it leaves St. Louis—which is equivalent to four days from New York. The train is a solid vestibule Pullman car line with diner, smoker and all modern traveling conveniences. Its capacity is 196 passengers and it is at present run out of St. Louis twice each week. The demand for space has been so great that every berth is engaged for three weeks ahead and from present indications a daily service will be necessary within a short time. This only indicates," said Mr. Hoyt, "that the American people are anxious to establish closer relations with Mexico and I think that we are entering upon an era of commercial and social reciprocity which will bind the two republics closer together to the mutual advantages of both peoples." AN ACTIVE SENATOR.

Senator T. C. Platt is physically one of the frailest men in the senate. And yet the senior senator from New York need take no back seat when it comes to mental activity. There is no more industrious man in the upper house of Congress today than he. As chairman of the joint committee on printing he has worked hard and continuously with his colleagues in bringing about a reform of the methods prevailing in the government printing office. He has attended nearly all the hearings and is as well posted as to the conditions prevailing and the best methods for curtailing expenses in the great print shop as any member of Congress. But it is not only in the committee on printing that Senator Platt is an important factor. He is a member of the important committees on finance, naval affairs, and inter-oceanic canals, and no member of those bodies is more regular in his attendance than he. In fact, among his colleagues the senator is regarded as the most persistent attendant upon committee meetings in the senate today. Senator Platt is no sprinter. He walks with difficulty, but he is as clear in the head today as he ever was, and from all appearances will continue to be a potential force in the affairs of the senate during the remainder of his term.

RAILROAD RATE BILL.

A railroad rate bill will be passed during the present session of the Fifty-ninth Congress. Every indication points to that end. It is true that there is disagreement in the interstate and foreign commerce committee of the senate, which has under consideration all bills relating to railroad rate regulation, but it is anticipated that out of that committee will come a bill such as the Democrats signed with the Republicans in the house and between the Hepburn measure, which will pass the house on Tuesday of next week, and the bill which the senate committee will report, there will be little difference. President Roosevelt recognizes the rights of railroads, he also recognizes the rights of individuals. Confiscation of property is prohibited by the Constitution. Redress for attempted confiscation lies with the courts, and the bill which is now under discussion in the house of representatives, comprehending that clause of the Constitution which relates to interstate commerce, has adroitly avoided any suggestion as to the constitutionality by clothing the interstate commerce commission with power to fix a reasonable rate.

ROYAL RESIDENCE IN COPENHAGEN AND NEW DANISH RULER.

PALACE OF AMALIENBORG

KING FREDERICK VIII

President Roosevelt has presented a number of very definite issues to Congress in the messages he has sent to the legislative body of the government since assuming the office of president. Statehood for Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Arizona and New Mexico has been very close to him. Since the visit of Secy. Taft and a delegation from senate and house to the Philippines a reduction on imports from the Philippines has impressed him to the extent of writing a strong message to Congress urging a reduction in the Philippine tariff. Two of these measures have passed the house, and are now pending in the senate. The third proposition, which is really first in the president's mind, will pass the house on Tuesday, without material amendment, and will go to the senate with an almost unanimous vote. And this is the proposition on which the president stands, the regulation of railroad rates. The railroad rate bill will be long in passing the senate. There are many isms in that body and there are many constitutional lawyers, but the way things are moving now it looks as if both the Philippine tariff bill and the statehood bill might be modified and accepted by the administration in order that a railroad rate bill along the lines recommended in the last message of the president to Congress may become a law. To that end every power that the administration has is being directed.
