THE LONDON "TIMES."

Its Influence, Wisdom, and Independent Integrity.

A keen-sighted American gathers constant material for reflection in this vast city-world. Not a day passes without a new fact in science, government and society. The London Times has been unusually independent and interesting for the last three months, especially on American and French affairs. Some of its views have been unusually fresh and bold, and, as the Times is in a large degree the leader and reflector of public opinion, these utterances must be accepted as far beyond individual opinions. For instance, it has fearlessly asserted, in regard to Cuba, that Great Britain would never allow a constant and bloody insurrection like that in Cuba so near its borders, without a prompt and stern protest. This declaration fell like a thunderbolt upon the English newspapers which had been stigmatizing the course of the United States Government in regard to Cuba as a gross violation of international law. The effect also upon Spanish and Continental sentiment has already been most salutary. The Times has spoken, in language not less decided, in favor of the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, and the article, after the action of the American House of Representatives appropriating $1,500,000, was a noble specimen of editorial eloquence. On the subject of universal amnesty, it has taken very high and fearless grounds. Earnestly advising that our Congress should exercise the largest liberality to the ex-Confederates still under the ban, it does not hesitate to pay tribute to the extraordinary clemency of the United States Government to the leader of the rebellion. The steady reduction of our national debt, and the dissolution of our vast armies at the close of the civil war, have repeatedly received its warm commendation.

Very recently, the Times has discussed the late French elections in a spirit not previously noted in these columns. It regards the triumph of the moderate republicans as the sign of a permanent French government. It applauds the discretion of Gambetta and the wisdom of Thiers, while it denounces the arrogance of Mr. Buffet, and the extravagance of Victor Hugo. These are altogether memorable indications. It is unnecessary to speculate upon the effects of such an argument in such an organ. The English people are for the first time told, in tones of authoritative conviction, that the Republican example is not as vicious as they have been taught to believe, and the great concession is the more weighty, made as it is, in a style of singular grace, and fortified by the best examples. What a contrast between the angry intolerance which, not many years ago, pervaded the English press in reference to Republican, and, especially, American ideas.

The first number of the London Times appeared January 1, 1788. Its founder was John Walter, grandfather of the present proprietor, John Walter, M. P. for Berkshire. Its own history is the record of human progress; and its attitude to-day is a wonderful proof that, if we are not wiser than our own fathers, we are certainly more advanced in the art of making good newspapers. The Times is a model daily journal. The paper on which it is printed, the ink, the types, the whole arrangements place it at the head of its contemporaries. Enormous sums are expended to give it this pre-eminence, and enormous revenues repay the outlay. I do not write of this paper for the purpose of praising it, although an experience of forty years, as printer and editor, would justify my opinion. I prefer it, after eighteen months daily reading of its pages, as a pattern of business management and editorial statesmanship. A well known writer says: "There are many excellent newspapers in the world, yet there is but one Times. Frequent attempts have been made to excel it; many a time has it been said that it would be easily beaten, but in the struggle for journalistic influence and position the Times is first, and the rest are nowhere. Jupiter has several satellites, and no equal."

END OF A CLANDESTINE MARRIAGE.

When woman stoops to folly she invariably makes a mess of it—at least so has done Mrs. Eliza Hawthorne, daughter to the wealthy physician, Dr. Lounes, of No. 101 East Nineteenth street. Two years ago Miss Lounes and a younger sister made the acquaintance of Charles Hawthorne and his brother John, the one a clerk and the other a barkeeper in a Broadway saloon, and both young women being of a romantic turn of mind resolved upon an elopement and a clandestine marriage all around. By virtue of this arrangement the two pairs became one at the house of a mutual friend, Eliza created into a bone of Charles, and Henrietta the better-half of John, Lounes, the stern parent, closing his door and double locking it against the brace of filial transgressors. Last November the dream of married bliss in Eliza's case was dispelled through her husband informing her that, as he was compelled to leave town, his mother, a Mrs. Lee, proprietor of a large boarding-house, No. 30 Waverly Place, would take care of her during her confinement. She did so with a vengeance, for, representing herself as being a missionary, and her daughter-in-law a young lady discovered by her in distress, she transferred her charge first to a lying-in asylum, and subsequently to the Clinton Place Infant Home, where fortunately one of the physicians recognized her as Dr. Lounes's daughter, and compelled the stern parent to take her provisionally to his home. Next the retribution of Nemesis was set in motion, and despite Mrs. Lee's ingenious prevarications the absconding husband and father was apprehended upon a charge of abandonment and securely lodged behind iron bars, chiefly on account of Mr. Justice Kilmarth's matured opinion as to his being "one of the most heartless young scoundrels ever arraigned before his court," and in the interim Mrs. Hawthorne will commence a suit for divorce.—N. Y. Cor. S. F. Chronicle.
