

boards and willows he watched the trait robbers bury their plunder. At all events, he found it next day and transplanted all but $10,000, which he carried in his blankets across the river into Sacramento. From there he went to San Francisco, where he lived a riotous life. He returned once and replenished himself from the store of hidden treasure and was spending money lavishly when pounced upon by the detectives, to whom he made a clean breast of the whole affair.

One of the most pitiful cases that has come under the notice of the police and city charities in San Francisco for many a long day was reported Monday at the police station. Mrs. Duncan Campbell, a middle-aged woman of respectable appearance but with gaunt features and hungry eyes, went to the station with her three children, the eldest a boy of four years. All the children were thin and haggard. The boy was crying for food and the two babies feebly whimpering. All had been without food for two days. Mrs. Campbell told Sergeant Hotelling that unless the children had food at once they would die. Mrs. Campbell has had a sorrowful life. Five years ago she married Duncan Campbell, a longshoreman. He abused her and later the children also. He was an inveterate drinker, and though he had steady work, seldom took any of his money home. He expected her to find food for herself and babies, and when there was nothing to eat he beat his wife. Three months ago he left her altogether. The wife was turned out because she could not pay her rent. She sold her furniture and went to Calistoga, where she was promised work for a year. But the fruit was frostbitten, the work did not materialize, and she had to return to San Francisco poorer in pocket. Since then the family has been coming nearer to starvation every day. Mrs. Campbell lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Kemp, in a dark, damp basement at 120 William street. The parents are as destitute as the daughter. They are quite old. The father is bedridden and the mother is ill. They are slowly starving to death. The case was reported to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, but the mother, in spite of her awful predicament, did not want to give up her babies. The case has been reported to the Associated Charities, which will look after the whole family, old people, young people and all. Meanwhile the police will look up Longshoreman Campbell. Food has been found for the immediate necessities of the gaunt children and the haggard grandparents. The mother is willing to work at anything, and as soon as food has made her strong enough will be given employment.

PHILIP NELL.

RIVERTON, May 20, 1896.—Bro. Philip Nell of Riverton, left this mortal state of action May 15th at 5 o'clock a.m. He has been a sufferer for about four years, and for three years and a half he has constantly been in bed, and at times with the most excruciating pain that any human sufferer could experience. No tongue can tell, no pen describe, the agonies in which Brother Nell has passed the last three years of his life. The writer of this has many times, at night when all nature is supposed to be at rest, heard his cries for help and relief for over eighty rods distance. But no relief came, although everything that human hand could do was administered to him. The doctors gave him up two years ago and said he could not live three months. Under all his sufferings his faithful wife was constantly at his side, never asking relief from anybody, although having the care of a large family of children besides a helpless husband.

Brother Nell was a pensioned soldier from the last war. He leaves a wife and twelve children to mourn his loss. His age was 58 years, and his sickness and death originated from cancer in the bowels. N. J. C.

ELIZABETH U. A. MICHAELSON.

ST. CHARLES, Idaho, May 25, 1896.—Our village was again thrown into grief when it was announced that one of our number had been called to the great beyond. Mrs. Elizabeth Uzella Allred Michaelson was taken away by death at 7:40 a. m. Thursday, May 21, 1896. She was the daughter of William L. and Sarah Wilkes Allred, and wife of W. H. Michaelson, and was aged 21 years, 3 months and 19 days. She had not been feeling well for a few days previous. Last Monday about 6 p. m. she was taken with convulsions and had ten during the night and early morning. About 8 p. m. Monday night she passed into a stupor from which she never recovered. When she passed away it seemed as if it was more than her father, mother and husband could bear; it was the most affecting scene that the writer ever witnessed. Brother and Sister Allred lost their oldest son a little over two years ago, so this affliction is the more severe.

The public was permitted to view the remains at the family residence from 9 to 10 a. m. Saturday, when the casket was closed. A procession composed of members of the Y. M. and Y. L. M. I. A. to the number of sixty-four dressed in black and white draperies; the Primary children, thirty-four in number, her grandfather, William M. Allred, and eldest daughter and other relatives on foot, carriages with family and friends, followed the hearse to the meeting house, where services were held at 11 a. m.

The speakers were Bishop J. A. Hunt, S. Matthews from Liberty, M. Booth, Bishop C. E. Keeich, E. M. Pugmire and Elder J. H. Hart, who all spoke words of consolation and comfort. The procession then formed again as above stated and went to the cemetery, where our dear sister was consigned to the silent tomb, there to await the resurrection of the just.

Sister "Zella," as she was familiarly called, was organist for the ward and Sunday School choir, a member of the Y. L. M. I. A. and secretary for the Primary. She was always at her post of duty, was of a cheerful and amiable disposition and beloved by all who knew her. She was married to Wm. H. Michaelson in the Logan Temple, October 9, 1895. Her husband and parents are almost heartbroken with grief at the great loss they have sustained, but they have the sympathy and prayers of the Saints to sustain them in their hour of severe trial. E. M. ALLRED.
