

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Friday evening at the Astor House, Broadway, the "Little Mothers" benefit concert and entertainment takes place. Homer Davenport, the cartoonist and lecturer, will give one of his original talks. Mr. Davenport was asked to select a singer musician that he could endorse as he is the principal figure at the entertainment, and at once wrote Miss Lucy Gates for permission to put her name beside his on the program. The result is Miss Gates is down for two numbers. This charitable society is composed of New York's "Four Hundred," its patrons being among the most exclusive set, and "society" will be out in force. Miss Gates will leave soon after the mountains of Utah.

New York's advertising firms are always on the lookout for illustrators of originality, and will accept only meritorious work. Mr. George Burnett, who has always shown marked ability in art, recently submitted a number of his drawings to a prominent firm with the result that he was engaged at a good salary at once, and urged to give his entire time to the business, but as this would interfere with his school, a compromise was effected, and three days out of the week are devoted to his employers, and three to his classes. Mr. Burnett, has always met with encouragement, for the reason that his work calls forth praise, and he is an earnest worker in his profession.

Prof. Lambert, will chaperone five of his best pupils to Europe for the summer vacation. Two Utah girls will be of the party, Miss Dot Pitt of Ogden and Miss Lulu Shaw of Salt Lake. It will be a red letter event for the young people, to see the old world under the guidance of a master, and one who knows the route by heart. The party will leave some time in the early part of May.

The members of the original "Corianton" company, are heard of now and then, and generally in some good production. The latest is W. D. St. Clair who has an excellent part in "The Education of Mr. Pipp." It will be remembered that Mr. St. Clair was the leader in "Corianton," and that he did some good work; he is now a French villain of the deep dyed hair and comes in for fine notices from the press.

Monday, April 10, Mr. Frank Higgins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Higgins of the Brooklyn branch, and Edmund Satter, their son-in-law, take their departure for Utah; both young men carry with them the highest of recommendations as to their ability as workmen. Mr. Satter being an expert engineer, having run trains from one end of Manhattan and back for over seven years, and Mr. Higgins, an equally good electrician. It is the hope of the travelers to establish themselves in the west, and to be able to send for their families before next winter. Best of wishes from all here go with them.

Elder B. F. Cummings, who has been very ill with grippe for over two weeks, is out again, and able to attend to business. His absence from the meetings and classes has been felt, and friends are happy to see him around again.

The Brooklyn branch has been reinforced by Elder Chas. E. Allan, of Coeville, Cache county, a new worker in the field, who is endowed with plenty of enthusiasm and push.

And now the Harmonites are to have the opportunity of seeing Pleasant Robinson, and her admirable company in "Merely Mary Ann," the coming week.

Ada Dwyer—Mrs. Hal Russell—has a host of friends this side of One Hundredth street, and tickets for "Mary Ann" have been circulating freely since the Thursday sale opened. Miss Dwyer is a most important factor in the play, and her friends will be heavily represented in the shape of theater parties, for several different performances.

Lorenzo Snow, a one-time student here in the New York Art school, but now in business with his brother, in the automobile trade, which he is building up in the west, is visiting the eastern markets in the interest of the firm. Washington, Chicago and Philadelphia have been seen in turn, and now New York will give Mr. Snow a few weeks of her time, and show what she can do in the way of auto speed and improvements.

On west One Hundred and Forty-ninth street, Miss Jennie Smith and her brother Frank, are comfortably located in a Harlem flat. Miss Smith's services are constantly in demand. She is a trained nurse of wide experience, and in difficult cases has few equals. Already she has been called to undertake a case that requires great skill; she is preparing to leave her home for a few weeks.

Mrs. Louise Ferguson, widow of the late James Ferguson (Jimmie Harris), has moved from West Ninety-fifth street to 822 Amsterdam avenue, with her two sons Dale and Alan. Mrs. Ferguson's daughter Gladys, is married and lives near her mother.

The limit of prejudice has been reached in the case of a medical student here, who, though successfully and brilliantly passing stiff examinations since his entrance into the broad field of medicine, has been turned down, owing to the fact of his religion. For some time the student has worked with unusual success, and last week realized the fulfillment of his hard-earned desires by being selected among the eight foremost graduates, whose markings stood highest, to a position on the board. Congratulations from professors and fellow students were freely offered, all interested being conscious that he had justly merited the distinction. For a few days our young friend was a happy man. But even a special train leaves Salt Lake City 8:50 a. m. and it is thought some of the students informed the professors of his religious beliefs; be that as it may, the young man was summoned before the board, and very bluntly asked if he was a "Mormon." "Yes," was the ready reply. For a few moments there was a rather warm discussion between the three judges and the student, the result being that the principal speaker said: "Dr. So and So, we find your record above reproach, and your markings the highest, but owing to the prejudice now existing against your people, it would be unwise to retain you on our staff." He had been weighed and found—not wanting, but guilty of being a "Mormon." JANET.
