A change is already noticeable in the police wing of the city administration. While "How Honest?" George Sheets was chief of police the Hand Organ repeated over and over again that no gambling was going on in this city.

It asked, "If there is, how is it?" But if the police wouldn't, was there an ordinary citizen to know? But there's a change being effected now. The new mayor and chief of police are not asking the citizen to locate gambling holes for them. The holes are being uncovered. And the patrolmen are instructed to bring the gamblers to the station, not anything different.

Salt Lake can at last feel really assured that the mayor and chief of police mean business and intend to do the right thing all the time, in spite of outside meddling and would-be-benchers. Salt Lake has the word of a staunch "American" for it, he is no other than Judge Diehl, who said last morning, "There is a disposition under the new administration, that is Mayor Bransford and Chief McKenzie, to put a stop to gambling of any kind."

The police court announces further intention of holding up its end of the good (and new) work by imposing heavy sentences upon those convicted of gambling.

The cases brought before the court this morning were those of the city of A. W. McNichol, charged with keeping a gambling house, and W. W. Harrison, H. S. Barton, Lee Fields and John named Yoshida, charged with gambling. The defendants were represented by Atty. Soren K. Christensen. He entered a plea of guilty in this case. The defendants were represented with the exception of McNichol being discharged. Judge Diehl said: "There is a disposition under the new administration, that is Mayor Bransford and Chief McKenzie, to put a stop to gambling of any kind."

WHAT DIEHL SAYS.

"There is a disposition under the new administration, that is Mayor Bransford and Chief McKenzie, to put a stop to gambling of any kind."
