TERRITORIAL AFFAIRS.

marks of Hon. Richard C. McCormick, of Arizona, in the House of Representatives," last session-

I discover, Mr. Speaker, in all that has been said in this discussion no just cause for a refusal to clothe the Territory of Colorado with the dignity and rights of a sovereign State, if Congress would treat her citizens as our fathers would have treated them. If our system of government is to be adhered to, the simple question of population cannot be made the test in the admission of new States, although by such test Colorado has a claim which many of the States did not have when admitted.

I propose, however, but a word upon this bill, and that in support of a point made yesterday by the gentleman from Nebraska, [Mr. Taffe, the chairman of the Committee on the Territories. Among other things that gentleman said:

out having any representation whatever here or in the other branch of Congress.

It is indeed an alarming proposition that hundreds of thousands of our citizens should be deprived of the right of a voting representation in Congress for any cause, and my wonder is that the fact has excited so little attention throughout the country, and been so patiently borne by those directly interested. It would be but reasonable to suppose that the men who carry the national flag to the frontier, who overcome the hostile savage, who occupy and redeem the distant parts of the public domain, and whose achievements in the best interests of peace and material prosperity are the boast of our free Government, should at least enjoy citizens of the Republic.

Not only have these men under our present laws no vote in the Presidential election, although it is ever a matter of as much interest to Territories are to be kept Territories, them as to any of the citizens of the Republic; not only are they without a voting representation in both Houses of Congress, although paying their full proportion of Federal taxation, but they are treated with a systematic neglect and absolute indifference by Congress, for which there can be no excuse.

So profoundly unconcerned is the average member of Congress upon all that relates to the Territories ed. that if he speaks of them at all it is only to blunder as to their locality, area, resources, capabilities, population, or needs, and any proposition for the admission as States of Territories even as populous as Colorado, by him as "preposterous," however the Dead Letter Office. strong the arguments presented in its support.

Gentlemen constantly overlook the fact, as in the present discussion, that through the very neglect of Congress the Territories have no fair opportunity to rapidly make that substantial progress which is demanded as the evidence of their claim to admission as States.

The Federal laws now in force deprive them of many important rights and benefits, and of the independent action guaranteed to the States. If they are not to be admitted to the Union as one by one they present what have hitherto been accounted reasonable claims, then Congress should, in my judgment, enact some law or an amendment to the Constitution, if required, by which the Territories together as a unit may be formed into a State or States, with a formality at least sufficient to give them that potent voice in this House, and in the Senate, which alone will command for them the consideration their enterprising people deserve and their necessities absolutely demand; which will insure to the men of the frontier their full share of Government aid, protection, and favor, and put them where by every right they belong, upon an equal footing with their brethren who have preferred to remain in the luxurious ease and security of the old States, and in blissful ignorance of the hardships, the privations, and the perils which beset the pathway of the pioneer.

If time would allow I might pile fact upon fact to illustrate, and I should like to, how very little attention the Territories, with their varied and important interests, now receive at the hands of Congress. Together they have an area greater by far than that of the thir | Schubert M Smith A F

Yet a most reasonable proposition of mine, wheeler R made more than a year since, that Wheelock R P Wilson Com one day in each month should be set apart by this House for the con- Young S sideration of territorial affairs, still slumbers in the indifferent hands of the committee to which it was referred. A proposal to place the territorial representatives upon certain committees has resulted in their admission to one only, while there are a half score of committees for the particular duties of which they are, by familiarity with | Baker W P western interests and wants, especially qualified. It is true that by organization and united action, the Boin J H Delegates have of late secured Barrows E more legislation in the interests of the Territories than ever before, but It is an alarming proposition that men what they have obtained is but as Campbell S B Culwell R are to go West and help build up and add to the material resources of the country, withneeded.

The eloquent gentleman from New York, [Mr. E. H. Roberts,] in his Case A T speech of the 16th instant, concluded his argument against the admission of Colorado, with this reference to local rule in the Territories:

"The real aim of the Territories is not control in the Senate of the United States, but local self-government." "All that the people of the Territories seek is the right to choose their own officials and the repeal of the power of review by Congress over their territorial laws."

This is well enough and there | Fast T are good reasons why local selfgovernment should be permitted, but my observation on this point-and I think it has been quite as extended as that Figy EP of the gentleman from New York -does not prove to me that the Fisher F all the privileges accorded to other real aim of the people of the Territories is local self - govern- Gardner J ment. FROM the Central Baptist, St. Louis: "A few days since a friend handed us a few packages Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder, with a request to 'try it.' We tried it and found it superb. We gave small packages to a few friends, and they all came back to us for more. As we were not prepared, however, to abandon the conduct of the Central to go into the Baking Powder business, we were obliged to turn them away disappointed. For their gratification, and that of the general public, we will say that this inimitable Powder can be had at most of the leading grocers in this city, and at wholesale of Steele & Price, Chicago and St. Louis.
