(Special to the "News.") Goldfield, Nev., Aug. 19.—R. E. H. Maunsell was shot and instantly killed yesterday by George Gibson, a deputy sheriff. The trouble arose in a restaurant at 5:15 in the morning when Gibson entered with two women. Maunsell is said to have made an offensive remark and the men started to quarrel. ELDER M. THOMAS AT TABERNACLE

Addreses Large Congregation Upon First Principles of The Gospel.

NOTHING NEW IN TEACHINGS.

Scriptures Not Subject to Private Interpretation—Belief Alone Not Sufficient.

Elder Mathoniah Thomas addressed a large congregation at the tabernacle yesterday afternoon. His theme for the most part was the first principles of the gospel. In most of these, the speaker showed, the Latter-day Saints do not differ materially from their friends of the various Christian churches. As to other initial doctrines, it was pointed out that there is nothing new or strange in their promulgation. Perhaps every listener and his fathers before him had read and re-read the numerous passages of Scripture wherein these laws and commandments were inculcated of old. The only difference between the Latter-day Saints and the members of other churches lies in the fact that the former believe that nothing that God has revealed can be looked upon as non-essential, while the tendency of the creeds of the day is to put private interpretation upon the Scriptures, accepting as much of Christ's teachings as suits their own notions, and passing over the remainder as being unnecessary for salvation.

PREST. WINDER PRESIDES. President John R. Winder presided over the services, which were opened by the choir singing, "Thou' deeping trials through your way." Other selections rendered were, "Lord, Thou wilt hear me when I pray," and "O come let us sing unto the Lord." The invocation was offered by Elder Hamilton G. Park, and Elder Andrew Jensen pronounced the benediction.

ELDER THOMAS' ADDRESS. As a preface to his remarks, Elder Thomas said that the Latter-day Saints do not believe that the canon of Scripture is full, or ever will be. The Lord will, now and in the future, operate upon the minds of men by the influence of His Spirit, and inspire them to the end that they may progress and develop. This life is but a preparatory existence, a link in an endless chain, to fit mortals for a hereafter. Men live before they come to earth. Just as they will live after the change called death. The speaker did not wish to imply that the Latter-day Saints believe in the transmigration of the soul. Each person has his own spirit, entity and will ever have it. All are sons and daughters of God, possessed of attributes of Deity whereby they may progress from faith to faith.

THE ONLY NAME. The speaker read a portion of the fourth chapter of Acts, and commenting upon the declaration of Peter concerning the Son of God that His is the only name given under heaven whereby men may be saved, said that in the letter of this passage of Scripture there is little difference of opinion in the Christian world, but in the spirit of it there is a vast difference. The Latter-day Saints hold that a mere belief in Christ as a righteous man, or even as the Son of God is not sufficient for salvation, but that the precepts and commandments given by the Savior must be followed. No man can consistently say that he believes in Jesus, and then set himself in part against the very teachings of the Chief Jesus. Laws have been instituted of God for the guidance of His children, and these must be observed, if men would place themselves within the pale of obedience. Individuals should be just as strenuous, and even more so, in following divine rules and regulations, as they are in demanding strict adherence to human laws. In this way only can dissension and discord be avoided. There is but one law as there is but one Lawgiver, and Christ was the exemplar of that law, and only by the complete acceptance of His ethics can salvation come.

TEACHINGS ARE NOT NEW. Elder Thomas then explained briefly but plainly the fundamental principles of the gospel. In the doctrine of baptism he pointed out the first great difference between the belief of the Latter-day Saints and that of most of their Christian friends. He said if the command was of God, no power on earth could alter its mode or efficacy, and he asked who had the better of the argument, the man who said that baptism was a mere ritual, or the man who said that baptism was a divine ordinance. The interpretation put upon it by the Church to which he belonged was in no wise new nor strange. The instance of Paul's conversion and his subsequent baptism was cited as going to show that nothing contained in the Gospel instituted by the Savior and preached by His disciples was or could be non-essential.

MEETS DEATH AT BINGHAM JUNCTION

C. S. McDermott Electrocutted While Attempting to Save Burning Piano.

USES KNIFE TO CUT A WIRE.

Body Receives 2,300 Volts, the Shock Being Fatal—Other Damage Done.

C. S. McDermott, a telephone lineman 40 years of age, was killed by an electric shock at Bingham Junction during the severe storm of Saturday evening. At 11:30 o'clock an electric sign in front of the Leader store became entangled with a main feed wire of the Progress Power company of Murray, and this tangle caused all telephone and electric light wires in that district to become heavily charged with electricity. About 2,300 volts passed through wires ordinarily lightly charged, and McDermott, not suspecting the extra load a wire was carrying which set fire to an electric piano in the Vincent saloon, rushed over to the piano, and attempted to save it. He took out an ordinary pocket knife and tried to cut the wire, but the instant the blade touched the live wire he dropped to the floor unconscious.

SHOCK WAS FATAL. His right hand was cooked, and the palm burned out. A physician was summoned, but life was found to be completely extinct. McDermott was a physical giant, and was 40 years of age. He was unmarried, and belonged to the fraternal order of Eagles, as well as to the Electrical Workers' union. Both of these organizations are co-operating in arranging for the funeral of the man, which has not been set on account of the fact that none of McDermott's relatives have been located. A sister lives in Ohio and she has been notified by wire of her brother's death.

OTHER DAMAGE DONE. While the electric current was burning the piano in the Vincent saloon it was also playing havoc with other localities. William Phelps, in the kitchen of his cafe, was thrown to the ground while Miss Jessie Steiner, a Bell telephone operator, was knocked senseless while trying to turn on the lights after they had gone out on account of the increase in current. W. P. Sweeney, who later tried to turn on the lights, was also knocked senseless. Dr. Robertson, who was called to the scene, said that both of them would have been killed had they touched the instrument with their left hands. As it was the current did not pass through the heart. The situation was relieved through a message sent to the electric company which notified them to turn off their current.
