

THE PARIS FOOD MARKETS.

The aspect of the Halles Centrales of Paris these magnificent markets which are unrivaled in the world—has undergone a complete transformation since the commencement of the siege. The first change one noticed was the fish pavilion, where the arrival of the daily way-trucks, driven at full speed and freighted with tons of sea-fish from the northern and western coasts, presented no longer the exciting event of the day. After September 15, no more sea-fish arrived in Paris, and the supply of fresh water fish being extremely trifling, the pavilion was chiefly devoted to the sale of all manner of alimentary odds and ends, including dried cod, bullock's liver, salt junk, sheep's heads, and cow's heels, and ultimately horse-flesh. A falling off was next apparent in the pavilion appropriated to the sale of game and poultry, then in that devoted to cheese, butter and eggs; eventually butchers' meat began to disappear and to be gradually supplanted by horse-flesh; and, finally, fruit, after becoming scarce and dear, vanished altogether.

At first the dead-meat market was kept perfectly sacred, and not a pound of horse-flesh was permitted to penetrate its precincts; but when beef and mutton came to be rationed out, and the trade thereof was confined to the municipal butchers, the doors of the pavilion were thrown open, and carcasses of horses were admitted as freely as those of oxen and sheep had been before. Now one can promenade for a quarter of a mile or more in front of joints of horse-flesh, growing small by degrees and beautifully less, from the entire side to the diminutive fillet. Of course, no one could mistake a side of horse for a side of beef; but the horse steaks—as regards the look, at any rate—are hardly, if at all, distinguishable from the beef. The price of horse-flesh being fixed by Government decree, and the supply being nearly equivalent to the demand—for at the present moment only a percentage of the inhabitants of Paris have taken to feeding regularly off the viandes de cheval—those with moderate purses who have overcome the prejudices of past years are enabled, even in these famine times, to secure a substantial allowance of animal food of this particular kind. For many weeks past horse-broth has formed the basis of all the soups, even at the most expensive hotels and restaurants.

As but little fresh water fish seem to be caught in the Seine, or, if caught, finds its way to the Paris markets, such as is consigned there realizes most exorbitant prices. The invariable practice is to dispose of it by auction; and the excitement that will be got up over a Seine eel and half a dozen gudgeons, which will be eventually sold down, the one at five-and-twenty francs and the others at even more—is something tremendous; the screaming and shouting and struggling remind one of that famous scene at the commencement of the siege, when a cargo of Dutch cheeses, the owner of which was unknown, had been handed over by order of the Government to the Halles factors for sale by auction, and such a disturbance ensued that it was found necessary to suspend the sale, and to call in armed National Guards to clear the pavilion.

Statistics are no longer published by the Government of the quantity of provisions under their control which are still in Paris; but, if one turns to the Bulletin Municipal a few weeks back, ascertains the stock then on hand, and deducts from it the presumed daily consumption up to the present time, one comes to the conclusion that the stock of fresh butcher's meat will not be entirely exhausted before the end of November. That there is almost a fortnight's supply of salt meat in the Government and private stores, no one will venture to deny. When this is exhausted we shall all have to take to horse-flesh, the supply of which, at the rate of 1,500 horses per day, will be sufficient for fully a month longer, bringing us up to the middle of January. Then there will remain the wallahs, strays, the odds and ends, and the scrapings—the undevoured domestic pigs, with the rats of the sewers and the carnivora of the Jardin des Plantes for the more highly seasoned palates, and at least 4,000 milch cows known to be within the city. Beyond the foregoing there will be, moreover, live rabbits, fowls and pigeons innumerable, with which prudent people have provided themselves for the moment when the pinch of famine shall come, together with the stock of preserved meats, puddings and such like condiments. If these should prove sufficient to furnish animal food of some kind to the inhabitants of Paris for another fortnight, it will be the end of January before they are reduced to simple bread and wine, not forgetting the jam, of which the stock appears to be inexhaustible. Possibly fresh vegetables, with the exception of potatoes, will fall by the end of the year; still, if they do, the stock of preserved vegetables is very large, but, unfortunately, very dear.

As for the supply of flour, this is not likely to fall before February, if even then. The Halle-au-Ble was the usual store-place for this commodity; but the Government have filled other immense granaries with sacks and barrels of flour from the floor to the roof, and notably one of the largest of the glass pavilions of the Halles Centrales.—Paris Cor. of the Illustrated London News, Dec. 3.

SINGER'S

New Improved Silent FAMILY SEWING MACHINES ARE The Best in the World, d12-1m

Because all of them are in constant use, while a very large proportion of other makes are not used, owing to their being partially or utterly impracticable. d12-1m

THE SINGER

NEW FAMILY MACHINE Has been brought to perfection, regardless of time, labor or expense, and is now incomparably the best Sewing Machine in existence. d12-1m

It is simple, compact, durable, beautiful, quiet, and capable of performing a range and variety of work never before attempted upon a single machine; using either silk, twist, linen or cotton thread, and sewing with great facility and speed. The Machines themselves are plain or highly ornamented with pearl and gold to correspond with their tables or cabinets. d12-1m

The New Improved Attachments for Hemming, (any width) Braiding, Embroidering, Folding Tops and Cabinet Cases, peculiar to the Singer Machine, are in every variety of Wood, such as black Walnut, Mahogany, Rosewood, and from the plainest to the most elaborate pattern and finish. The Machines themselves are plain or highly ornamented with pearl and gold to correspond with their tables or cabinets. d12-1m

In the Singer work is fed or passed through the Machine in the natural direction, namely, from the operator, permitting her to sit in a natural and healthy position. In many other Machines the work passes from right to left, or the reverse, compelling the operator to sit in a bent and unhealthy position, and thus causing weakness of the back, etc. d12-1m

The Singer uses a SHORT STRAIGHT NEEDLE, which is not liable to break or miss the stitch. Many other Machines use a long crooked needle, which is liable to break and miss the stitch. d12-1m

In the Singer Machine the Shuttle is carried, thus avoiding nearly all wear. It requires no oil, and does not get out of order. Many other Machines drive their Shuttles, in a race, thus causing great wear, and requiring oil, soiling the thread and goods. d12-1m

On the Singer, the Tension on both the upper and lower threads is absolutely under the ready control of the operator, thus rendering the Machine always available for good sewing, which is not the case with any other. Many so-called cheap Machines are really worthless, and so are many of their new peculiarities and supposed advantages. d12-1m

The SINGER is the Oldest Practical Sewing Machine, Being about twenty years in the market. Having been constantly improved by the employment of the most skilled ingenuity of the age and unimpaired, it is now the only one of its kind in existence. All the very latest inventions and improvements, it is the only Machine that is now directed as all its parts are Practical and will do all that is claimed for them. Some other Machines are Greatly Complicated, so do useless and silly things, and thus are rendered almost constant Derangement. The Singer Seldom or Never gives trouble, but is readily and easily managed by those who utterly fail on other Machines. d12-1m

New Manufacturing Machines Claim the same advantages over others of their class as the new Family Machines. These old and well-tried Machines are applicable to all kinds of heavy and light manufacturing in Cloth, Leather, etc., and run in the most perfect and reliable manner without trouble to the operator. d12-1m

Without any previous advertisement, the demand for the Singer Machine is so great that we have been unable to keep our stock on hand. All sold, but a large number are now on the way from New York, and WILL ARRIVE IN A FEW DAYS. d12-1m

They will consist of the Different Varieties made by the Singer Manufacturing Company, and we shall sell them at a discount, and on terms of credit, to accommodate parties who cannot pay all down, we will sell on EASY MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS. d12-1m

So that all may possess one of these Machines, for the convenience of our Patrons we have engaged the services of a gentleman who has had twenty years experience and is one of the most skillful experts in the world in repairing and adjusting Sewing Machines. He will repair each Machine in complete and practical running order before it leaves the Institution, and will also impart to purchasers all needed instructions, so that each Machine will be in perfect working order. d12-1m

We resort to no trickery whatever, to sell these Machines, but offer them on the same terms as we would our own. We can do this, as the demand for them is so great that although the Singer Company make more than 100,000 Machines annually, they cannot nearly fill their orders, and are compelled to sell extended their Gigantic Works. d12-1m

We have been so fortunate as to secure the General Central Agency, For this Territory, we extend a cordial invitation to all to come and see the Machines, whether they wish to buy or not. See all the improvements, and without any obligation on your part, examine the Singer. d12-1m

We Guarantee every Machine we sell to give entire satisfaction. d12-1m

THE SINGER
