

PRESIDENT AT GERMAN EMBASSY

Mr. Roosevelt Returns the Call of Prince Henry.

GREETING MOST CORDIAL.

Visit Was Strictly One of Official Enquêtes—Later His Highness Received the Ambassadors.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Prince Henry arrived at the German embassy shortly after 11 o'clock, the approach of the party being announced by the shrill notes of cavalry bugles and the clatter of many hoofs and the escort of saliers and spurs as the escort of troops galloped down Massachusetts avenue to the point where the embassy is located. The prince occupied a carriage with Admiral Evans, while back of them followed the carriages of distinguished naval and military officers of the prince's suite and the members of the German embassy staff. A battalion of engineers occupied the avenue immediately fronting the embassy. As the party came into sight the engineers' band broke into "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Over the embassy floated a flag which has never been seen in Washington before—the personal flag of the imperial family of Germany. It showed not only the colors of the German nation, but also in the center the imperial eagle, surrounded by the colors of the German nation. Along the front of the embassy entrance were looped the German colors, intertwined with garlands of laurels and tall greenery. Above, floated the Stars and Stripes, while the residence of S. N. Kaufmann, of the Evening Star, displayed the German as well as the American colors. A guard of honor of the United States engineers, 600 strong, every one of them, in their bright uniforms, as rigid as statues, Prince Henry returned the salute of the officer and then passed inside.

On the embassy his imperial highness was indeed at home, for in diplomatic parlance this was the same as the native soil of the fatherland. The first brief salutation now gave way to a generous German welcome. The prince was escorted up the main staircase to the stately reception room used as a ballroom. At every hand the German colors gave a friendly welcome to the imperial guest. Not only were the imperial colors here, but every state in Germany participated in the welcome, each by a silken flag—Prussia in white and black, Baden in red and gold, Herz in white and blue, and thus throughout the states, each having its own flag.

The prince and his party laid aside their traps and gave way to the calm dignity with which affairs about the prince are conducted. Although there was no excessive formality, yet at all times there was that deference due a member of the imperial family. The prince first of all, the emperor had been placed at the disposal of the prince and his personal staff, and soon the drawingroom, the Japanese room, the smoking room, and the ambassador's study had their guests and officials. Prince Henry had as his private study the Japanese room, with its rich oriental furniture and curios, even the walls showing the characteristic of the Japanese style.

The ambassador's office was also at his disposal, when occasion required. The main body of the prince's staff, after the call at the White House, proceeded to the new Willard hotel, where quarters covering the entire first floor were at their disposal.

Enthusiastic cheering from the crowds at 11:40 announced the coming of President Roosevelt to the embassy to return the call of Prince Henry. The president drove in an open landau with Col. Bingham, his naval aide, Commander Cowles following in

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, kidney failure or paralysis of the bladder.

It is often the result of kidney disease. If kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell, bladder troubles must always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make it much better by taking Dr. Kimer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go out during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sized bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful medicine free of charge and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail, Address Dr. Kimer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

A carriage. The cheers continued as the president drove along and he had his suit back of his head much of the time, in recognition of the repeated demonstrations. At the residence stopped the carriage the German ambassador was at the threshold to greet him. There was a momentary exchange of greetings and then the president passed up the main staircase to the stately reception room used as a ballroom. with an expression of earnest thanks. He spoke in English and referred to the pleasure with which he had looked forward to coming to America. At this welcome to the city of Washington he not only expressed his heartfelt appreciation of the courtesies shown him, but he also, referring to a part of Mr. MacFarland's address, spoke of the strong ties which had been made here in Washington as far back as 1785, when in the first international relations between Germany and the United States were established.

RECEIVES AMBASSADORS.

Washington, Feb. 24.—One of the most brilliant functions of the day was at 2 p. m. when Prince Henry received at the German embassy the members of the diplomatic corps, including the ambassadors and ministers, accompanied by their staffs of government, naval and civil attaches, all in full uniform. It was the same brilliant assemblage that is seen at the White House on New Year's day to give greetings to the president—Turks in red fez, Russians in tall shako, Chinese in rich oriental dress. But today there was added brilliancy in the showy uniforms of the imperial receiving party.

Prince Henry remained in the drawingroom while the ambassadors were being received, meeting them separately and alone, the staffs remaining in the reception room to be greeted later. Lord Pauncefoot was the first to be ushered before the prince, followed by the French, Russian, Italian and Mexican ambassadors.

In the meantime the foreign ministers and the staffs of both the ambassadors and ministers, had assembled in the ballroom, to await the conclusion of the prince's personal conference with the ambassadors. When these were over the prince entered the ballroom and was presented to the ministers and then to the members of the diplomatic corps.

The scene as these many diplomatic officers of high rank mingled with admirals, generals and members of the many noble houses of Europe, was brilliant. Almost every famous regiment in Europe was represented among the foreign military officers, in rich gold-embroidered uniforms, their breasts resplendent with medals and decorations. The reception of the diplomatic corps lasted about an hour.

RETURN CALLS OF AMBASSADORS.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Prince Henry prepared to make calls upon the foreign ambassadors stationed in Washington, as the high rank of an ambassador makes him a personal representative of his sovereign or ruler and entitles him to the first call. The prince was accompanied by the German ambassador, the duke driving in an open landau. As the prince came into view the crowd gave him an ovation of cheers. Ahead of the carriage galloped the escort of cavalry troopers. The drive took the party throughout the northwest section of the city, where crowds lined the streets.

The prince's first call was at the British embassy. Lord Pauncefoot being the dean of the diplomatic corps. The prince did not enter the embassy, simply leaving his card. Calls were then made on the French ambassador, M. Cambon; the Russian ambassador, Count Cassini; the Italian ambassador, Signor Mayor; and the Mexican ambassador, Aspirazu, at each place cards being left. The prince's calls did not extend to the foreign ministers as their rank does not make them personal representatives of their sovereign or ruler.

Returning to the German embassy, Prince Henry and his party took lunch with the German ambassador and the members of his staff. The party at the table numbered twenty-two. Prince Henry occupied the seat of honor, with Dr. von Holleben sitting opposite. The lunch was confined to the prince's party and the ambassador's official staff, except the officers forming the honorary escort.

PRESENT TO PRESIDENT.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Before the dinner at the White House tonight there was presented to the president a large pastel portrait of Prince Henry in naval attire, a statuette (bust) of the emperor, and an autograph naval seal prepared by the emperor. The bust of the emperor shows him in uniform of the corps guard, with eagle-tipped helmet.

HIS HIGHNESS VISITS CONGRESS

Henry Enters the Senate at a Most Dramatic Moment.

ANGLO-SAXONS AND GERMANS

Heard Mr. Gilbert of Kentucky Declare They Were of One Race—
He Pleased With Reception.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The visit of Prince Henry and his suite to the capitol this afternoon must have been not only a gratifying experience to the royal visitor on account of the warm and flattering reception he received at both the house and senate, and of the opportunity it afforded of meeting personally the leaders of both houses, but it must have been an extremely interesting experience as well. The prince not only saw the houses of the American parliament at work, but in the senate he witnessed one of those rare and intensely dramatic moments which come in that body occasionally at the conclusion of a great debate.

The prince and his party in carriages, escorted by a troop of cavalry, and flanked on either side by a bicycle platoon of police, arrived at the eastern entrance of the Capitol at 4 o'clock, exactly on schedule time. Prince Henry no longer wore the brilliant uniform and plumed chapeau in which he had appeared earlier in the day. He was attired in the simple dark blue fatigue uniform of the German naval minister, and wore the flat German naval cap of his rank. The members of his suite wore fatigue uniforms, and the German ambassador had exchanged his military dress for a conventional frock suit. In the matter of toilet and dress, Gen. Corbin and Admiral Evans, still in the splendor of full dress uniform, far outshone the prince and his staff.

The party was met at the great bronze doors leading into the rotunda by a committee from the house, consisting of Mr. Pitt of Illinois, Mr. Dismore of Arkansas, and Gen. Grosvenor of Ohio. When brief cordial greetings had been exchanged, the prince had taken a half hour, under the protection of a half hundred police, to make his way through solid walls of people packed in the rotunda and statutory hall to the room of Speaker Henderson, in the rear of the house lobby.

Here the speaker, who was awaiting him, greeted the prince with a warm handshake as Mr. Pitt presented "His royal highness, Prince Henry of Prussia, to the senate." The prince was then escorted to the senate chamber, where he was met by the German ambassador and the other members of his staff. Asthma

The doctors tell us they cannot cure every case of asthma with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. They say it is the best thing for relief and that it often completely cures. We are willing to take their word for it, are you?

Lodge of Massachusetts and Morgan of Alabama, appeared, and, after being presented, escorted the prince and his party to the senate. In crossing to the other end of the Capitol the party again moved through a solid mass of people congregated in the rotunda, and there was much handclapping and cheering. The prince was interested in everything, remarked upon the polished marble columns in the statutory hall, the great historic paintings in the rotunda and the frescoes in the corridors.

Through the marble room in the rear of the senate he was escorted to the richly gilded chamber of the vice-president, and there Senator Frye of Maine, the president pro tem of the senate, greeted him and the members of his suite. No formal remarks were made on either side. The members of the prince's party were escorted by Gen. Corbin to the diplomatic gallery, but Prince Henry and Ambassador von Holleben were ushered directly into the senate chamber.

The prince's first view of the senate of the United States hardly could have been more dramatic and thrilling. The chamber was brilliantly illuminated from above, the overwhelming galleries were thronged to suffocation, every senator was in his seat, the sides of the chamber were fringed with representatives drawn thither by news of the fierce conflict that was raging, and on the floor the youthful senator from Texas, Mr. Bailey, was hotly engaged with several of the older leaders on the Republican side over the right of it to two senators from South Carolina, who are in contempt of the senate, to vote on the Philippine bill.

The excitement at the moment was so great that, even the entrance of a foreign prince, uninvited as it was, could hardly divert attention from the great debate, which was in progress. The prince, with the prince at his side, mounted the rostrum and invited him to be seated. The senators on the floor and spectators in the galleries had risen at his appearance, but there was no audible manifestation. He took a seat beside the president pro tem and Senator Frye resumed the gavel, which he had yielded to Senator Hoar, and the debate proceeded.

With only a few words of explanation from Mr. Frye the prince seemed to understand the situation. He fully advised not on the question of Texas tried the matter first of one adversary and then of another. The two South Carolina senators, of whose counter last Saturday the prince was fully advised, sat on the right of Mr. Bailey, with only a single chair, occupied by Representative Jackson of Kansas, between them. The prince reviewed times glanced at them, but was more interested in the question at issue than the personality of those it affected. For fully twenty minutes he sat completely engrossed by the scene.

At last Ambassador von Holleben, who sat below him at the clerk's desk, suggested that it was time to go, whereupon the prince thanked Senator Frye and arose. Senator Frye interrupted the senate with a rap of his gavel. The senators immediately stood while the people in the galleries applauded. Then, as the prince ascended the steps and stood in instant bowing his acknowledgments, he took his departure, the galleries broke into applause.

BEKIN GREATLY PLEASED.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—The narratives of the reception of Prince Henry at New York cover one and two pages in today's issues of the principal German newspapers. No foreign event has ever been reported in the German press with such detail as the welcome of New York to the brother of the emperor.

Everybody here is pleased, throat and court circles are specially gratified by the spontaneous goodwill manifestation, as well as the great size of the organized demonstrations. The editorial articles on this subject are without exception kindly. America is seemingly a rediscovery of these peripatetic judgments, space given up to elementary discourses on American characteristics, history and commercial expansion.

To Investigate British Remounts.

New York, Feb. 24.—Pressure upon the government for a thorough investigation of remounts and purchases and contracts of all kinds in the army is steadily increasing, says a London dispatch to The Tribune. Lord Tweedmouth, supported by Lord Spencer and Lord Rosbery, contended in the house of lords that a strong prima facie case has been made out already for an inquiry of a sweeping nature. Lord Salisbury has turned a deaf ear to all the demands of the united opposition. Mr. Brodbeck is under fire daily in the commons on a similar question. Mr. Lauchlin Currie is among the surest and most persistent of the marksmen. The ministers also are menaced with revolt in their own ranks unless they face the music.

The oceanic steamship Sierra and the Canadian-Australian liner Moana both arrived today, the former from San Francisco and the latter from Victoria, after terrible experiences with a storm of which Hawaii has felt the effects slightly. The Sierra was 24 hours late and the Moana two days.

Capt. Carey of the Moana reports a hurricane on the 10th, and again on the 12th, and a part of his deck cargo was washed away. The sea broke over the doors of the officers' cabin.

Capt. Houdelle of the Sierra reports the worst storm he has ever seen in over 200 trips between Honolulu and San Francisco. The sea broke over the bridge of the big steamer, her port rail was carried away and some of the signal machinery high up on the bridge was damaged.

Men of Affairs

One may sail the seas and visit every land and everywhere will find, that men of affairs, who are well informed, have neither the time nor the inclination, whether on pleasure bent or business, to use those medicines which cause excessive purgation and then leave the internal organs in a constipated condition. Syrup of Figs is not built on those lines. It acts naturally, acts effectively, cleanses, cures, and strengthens the internal organs and leaves them in a healthy condition.

If in need of a laxative remedy the most excellent is Syrup of Figs, but when anything more than a laxative is required the safe and scientific plan is to consult a competent physician, and not to resort to those medicines which claim to cure all manner of diseases.

The California Fig Syrup Co. was the first to manufacture a laxative remedy which would give satisfaction to all; a laxative which physicians could sanction and one friend recommended to another; so that today its sales probably exceed all other laxatives combined. In some places considerable quantities of old-time cathartics and modern imitations are still sold, but with the general diffusion of knowledge, as to the best medicinal agents, Syrup of Figs has come into general use with the well-informed, because it is a remedy of known value and ever beneficial action.

The quality of Syrup of Figs is due not only to the excellent combination of the laxative and carminative principles of parts known to act most beneficially on the system, with agreeable and refreshing an astringent liquid, but also to the original method of manufacture. In order to get the genuine and its beneficial effects one should always note the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.
