CORRESPONDENCE.

The Reduction of Government Employees.

WASHINGTON, April 20.

Editor Deseret News.

The dismissals from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in the Treasury Department, yesterday, are the subject of conversation in the city at present. Almost every one has a friend who has been affected by them. Assistant Secretary McCormick has been overwhelmed with complaints and petitions. Many sad cases have been presented and favorable consideration urged with tears. Among those discharged was a woman who lost two husbands and three sons in the Union army. The first husband was shot dead at the first battle at Bull Run, the second fell under Sheridan in 1864. Of the sons, two were killed at Gettysburg and a third died of a disease contracted in the army. One woman who was dismissed returned with a letter from President Hayes, saying that he knew the applicant and was personally cognizant that her dismissal was a great affliction, but that he would not suggest any deviation from rules adopted for the good of the public service, only hoping that the applicant might be considered in future if consistent with government interests. Another applicant came to Mr. McCormick saying, "There is a letter signed by two names that I think ought to be potent in having me reinstated." The letter was endorsed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and by Senator Thurman, of Ohio, the father-in-law of Mr. McCormick. The Assistant Secretary said he did not see how it was possible for him to reinstate her. Secretary Sherman says the removal of so many employees, who were helpless, poor, and dependent for their very bread upon their monthly salary, has been the most painful duty he was ever compelled to perform. The force will have to be still further reduced, and the first of May has been fixed for the dismissal of an additional three hundred. Two years ago the employees in this bureau numbered 1,900. After the dismissals contemplated have been crrried into effect, the force will not be larger than three or four hundred.

Other bureaus in the different departments are overflowing with employees who, since they are without employment, it would be more proper to call payees. None are so plethoric as the Bureau of Engraving and Printing was, but they will all require depletion before the service can be reduced to a legitimate working condition. When the discharge of supernumeraries, as contemplated by the administration, shall have been accomplished, there will be not only a great reduction of expense in the matter of salaries, but the numerous private buildings, rented as government offices, will be no longer needed; hence there will be a great saving in the matter of rent.

While the country rejoices in every measure looking to economy and lessening the burden of taxation, Washington, through its local sentiment and press, expresses a futile protest. Since the prosperity of the city, in all private enterprises, is dependent on the money disbursed to the large number of government employees resident here, the merchants, real estate owners, hotel and boarding house keepers are of course not pleased with a policy that must reduce the population of Washington, and the amount of money in circulation. Individuals, and especially the helpless women, must be pitied, but their loss will be the nation's gain. Government offices will not be in the future asylums for indigence, no matter how meritorious, nor the booty of unsuccessful politicians to reward their political helpers. C.

Foul-Brood.

Putrid foul-brood is a disease which attacks the young brood of the hive, showing itself fully after the larvæ have been sealed up. It may be known by the viscous, gelatinous, and yeast-like appearance of the decomposing brood, the unpleasant odor arising from the hive, and by the sunken covers of the cells. The cause of foul-brood has been, until recently, involved in doubt, but late discoveries in Germany have thrown much light upon its origin. Mr. Lamprecht alleges that he has discovered the cause of the disease. His theory is this—"The chyme, which the workers prepare from honey and pollen by partial digestion, and with which the larvæ are fed, contains a nitrogenous, plastic, formative substance, from which all the organs and tissues of the larvæ are derived and composed; * * and precisely because of this its complicated composition it is peculiarly susceptible of rapid decomposition when exposed to air and moisture; that is, to undergo fermentation and putrefaction. It is hence obvious that pollen, even though having undergone only a partial decomposition, must affect the bodies of bees and larvæ differently from what it did or would do in its natural condition; and there is no longer a doubt that it is from pollen, thus partially decomposed, that the foul brood originates. That it can readily undergo decomposition is manifest. Moisture, emanating in part from unsealed honey, and in part from the perspiration of the bees, becomes condensed in the hive from external cold, and in the fall and toward spring it is frequently found hanging in drops on the combs, just as we find it condensed on the windows of our dwelling-houses. If one of these drops falls into a cell containing pollen, decomposition of the latter speedily commences, and is then communicated by the bees to the pollen in the other cells; and the cause of foul-brood is hence abundantly present in a hive thus circumstanced."

The discovery of Dr. Preuss, an eminent physician and mycologist, is that a microscopic fungus, Cryptococcus alvearis, developed from fermenting matter, feeds upon the young larvæ, and thus causes foul-brood; and that by means of the numerous sporules of the fungus, the disease is spread through the hive, and finally through the apiary. To show the character of this microscopic pest we quote the following from the article of Dr. Preuss, published in the Bienenzeitung, and translated by Mr. T. W. Woodbury:

"The foul-brood fungus, which I have named Cryptococcus alvearis, belongs to the smallest of the fungoid forms. It is round and dust-shaped."

There is no cure for this disease when it has once obtained headway. Destruction of the bees and honey and thorough purification of the hive is the only remedy to prevent the spread of the disease. As a means of preventing the disease, Dr. Preuss gives the following directions: Feed no fermenting honey; feed no meal, especially when the hive is threatened with disease; destroy carefully every particle of dead and moldering matter; and avoid weakening bees during the brooding seasons, so that they will not be able properly to maintain the heat necessary for the development of the brood.

With the light now thrown upon the nature of this disease by these recent discoveries, bee-keepers may be able to conquer the contagious malady whenever it makes its appearance.—Patent Office Report.

of such Instruments!

The MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO. have the honor to announce that the Organs of their manufacture have been unanimously assigned "the FIRST RANK in the SEVERAL REQUISITES of instruments of the class" by the Judges at the CENTENNIAL EXHIBITION at Philadelphia, 1876, and are the ONLY INSTRUMENTS OF THIS GENERAL CLASS AWARDED THIS RANK. This is after the severest competition by the best makers, before one of the most competent juries ever assembled.

They have also received the MEDAL, but, as is well known, medals of equal merit have been awarded all articles deemed worthy of recognition; so thus it will be easy for many makers to advertise that they have received "first medals."

The differences in competing articles, and their comparative excellence, are recognized in the Reports of the Judges from which the following is an extract:—

"THE MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO.'S exhibit of Reed Organs and Harmoniums consists entirely of the FIRST RANK IN THE SEVERAL REQUISITES OF INSTRUMENTS OF THE CLASS, viz: Smoothness and equal distribution of tone, scope of expression, resonance and singing quality, freedom and quickness in action of keys and bellows, with thoroughness of workmanship, combined with simplicity of action."

(Signed by all the Judges.)

The Mason and Hamlin Organs are thus declared to rank first, not in one or two respects only, but in the SEVERAL REQUISITES of such instruments, and they are the Only ones assigned this rank. This triumph was not unexpected, for the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have uniformly been awarded the highest honors in competitions in America, there having been scarcely six exceptions in hundreds of competitions. They were awarded highest honors and
