might be a characteristic of the "Mornon" people, but his opinion of the people of this Territory becomes somewhat modified as he proceeds. He "After crossing Bear river I find mysell on a somewhat superior road lead-ing through the Mormon settlements to Ogden. Birds are singing merrily in the willow hedges and the shade trees; green fields of alfalfa and ripening grain line the road and spread hemselves over the surrounding country in alternate squares, like those of a vast checker-board. Farms, on the average, are small, and, consequently, houses are thick; and not a farmhouse among them all but is embowered in an orchard of fruit and shade trees, that mingle their green leaves and white blossons harmoniously. At noon I roll into a forest of fruit trees, among which, I am informed Willard City is situated; but can see nothing of Nothing but thickets of peach, plum and apple trees, all in full bloom, surround the spot where I alight and begin to look around for some indications of the city. "Where is Willard City?" I inquire of a boy who comes out from one of the or-chards carrying a can of kerosene in his hand, suggestive of having just come from a grocery,—and so he has.

"This is Willard City, right here," replies the boy; and then in response to ny inquiry for the hotel, he points to a small gate leading into an orchard and tells me the hotel is ln there. The hotel-like every other house and store large attendance of Saints. Apostles Snow and Grant each devered discourses that were replete with instructions and encouragement Short addresses were made by President Thurber, Elder G. W. Bean, Pres-idents Beal and Malben. Bishops W. T. Reid, of Manti North, N. P. Madsen, of Mount Pleasant North, C. A. Madsen, of Gunnison, Amasa Tucker, of Fairview, and J. W.

The general, Stake and local author-ties were all unanimously sustained No changes in either Stake or local de Temple reports were read as usual. Elder W. H. Folsom made a state nen of the progress of the work on the Temple, the condition of the finances, that it is better to eat moderately of any easily digestable article of food before going to bed, than to resist the gnawing of real hunger, for fear that the lunch' will interfere with sound slumber. A late supper of rich dishes, which tempt the appetite to over-indulgence, may breed bad dreams, as it may make one uncomfortable if he sits up some hours after; but rational sits up some hours after; but rational eating at a late hour will disturb the siumbers of none but the confirmed lyspeptic. A recent writer has some sensible remarks on this subject, from Man is the only animal that can be taught to sleep quietly on an empty stomach. The brute creation resent all efforts to coax to such a violation of the laws of nature. The lion roars in the forest until he has found his The horse will paw all night in have their own provision for a late meal just before dropping off to their Man can train himself to the habit of sleeping without a preceeding meal, out only after long years of practice As he comes into the world, nature is too strong for him, and he must be fed before he will sleep. A child's stom-ach is small, and when perfectly filled, if ao slokness disturbs it, sleep follows naturally and inevitably. As digestion toes on the stomach begins to empty. A single fold in it will make the little sleeper restless; two will awaken it, and, if it is hushed again to repose, the nap is short, and three folds put an end to the slumber. Paregoric or other narcotic may close ts eyes again; but without other food, or some stupetying drug, it will not sleep, no matter how healthy it may be. Not even an angel who learned may be. Not even an angel who learned the art of minstrelsy in a celestial choir can sing a babe to sleep on an empty stomach. It is a fact established beyond the possibility of contradiction, that sleep aids digestion, and that the process of digestion is conductive to refreshing sleep. It needs no argument to convince us of this
