MRS. JANE WILKIE BLOOD.

Early on the morning of the 7th of September, 1898, the spirit of Sister Jane W. Blood, wife of Elder William Blood of Kaysville, quitted its earthly tabernacle and went back to God who gave it existence, there to await the resurrection of the just. There was gathered near her when the end came, at 12:30 a.m., her husband and all of her ten children, her father, John Hooper, her sister, Mrs. Margaret Manning, and her brothers, George Galbraith and John W. Hooper.

The deceased had been an invalid, and at times a great sufferer, for nearly six months prior to her death, having been stricken with hemorrhage of the brain on March 21, 1898, an attack from which she seemed utterly unable to recover. Every attention that loving hands could bestow was given her, but beyond easing her pain and ministering to her comfort, the efforts of friends and physicians were alike unavailing. She became weaker day after day, finally sinking into a comatose condition, and the last few days she slept constantly. The end came peacefully. There was no struggle; no word was spoken, but as if an angel's hand had touched her brow and removed from it the tracings of prolonged suffering and illness, her face assumed a calm and happy expression as the spirit passed away.

Jane Wilkie Hooper Blood was the daughter of John and Annie Wilkie Hooper, and she was born in Southampton, Hampshire, England, on May 2, 1845. While she was an infant her parents moved to Bristol, and were engaged as steward and stewardess on the steamship Brilliant, which sailed between Bristol and Cornwall. Her mother joined the Church in 1852, and in 1853 her father also became a Latter-day Saint. In January, 1854, the family strated from Cornwall to come to Utah, and early in February they sailed from Liverpool for New Orleans on the sailing vessel Golconda, arriving at their destination after a six weeks' voyage. They reached Salt Lake City on October 3, 1854, after having walked the greater part of the distance across the Plains. On April 17, 1855, the family came to Kaysville, where they resided three years and then moved to Ogden.

Brother and Sister Blood were married on September 9, 1861, and her home has been in Kaysville ever since.

She has been very active and prominent in the various local church organizations. She was the oldest member of the ward choir, and was an officer of the Relief Society and the Sabbath school. When the Kaysville Primary Association was organized in 1879, she was chosen as president, a position which she continued to fill until her death. During recent years much of her time has been devoted to public work, and to caring for the sick. Her greatest pleasure seemed to be in teaching and training children. She was a faithful, true and consistent Latter-day Saint, a compassionate and loving wife and mother, a friend to the aged, the poor and infirm, and her memory will be cherished by all who knew her in life.

At the funeral services, which were held on September 10th, the speakers were Elders F. D. Richards, Angus M. Cannon and George C. Lambert of Salt Lake, and Rosel Hyde, Wm. Court and Bishop Barton of Kaysville. There was a very large attendance. M.

Prof. A. de Lapparent points out that it is a decided error to regard the earth's crust as immovable and suggests that it may be well to make sure by suitable measurements, whether he supposed displacement of the pole is not due to local changes of the very points whose latitudes are selected for determination.

It is claimed that acetylene is likely to prove a specific for cancer. The surface is coated with calcium carbide, water is applied, acetylene is evolved, a burning sensation is felt, and the symptoms are immediately abated.
