

respondence. Miss Hellfaich is a beautiful young woman of 24 years, rather brunette. She claims she took the adventurous journey all the way across the continent to better her condition in life. Even though she had never seen her lover she was confident she would be happy with him when married, and it promises to be so.

Samuel McHenry, a well-known resident of El Nido, Los Angeles county, 60 years old, died on Sunday at Campo, that county, as the result of a fall in a mine shaft. He was inspecting the mine about two weeks ago and was let down into the shaft on a rope having a lamp and pick in his hands and sitting on a stick fastened in the rope. When about thirty feet from the bottom of the shaft, his glasses fell off and in grabbing for them the stick he was on broke and he fell to the bottom of the shaft, sustaining injuries resulting in his death on Sunday.

The murderous highbinders who attempted to take the life of Koong Sang, the Chinese priest, in San Francisco, several days ago, are likely to go unwhipped of justice. Detectives Gibson and Wren were detailed on the case, and after considerable trouble they arrested Wong Fong, alias Quong Shuen, a notorious highbinder, and charged him with being a party to the crime. Subsequently they arrested another highbinder on suspicion of being the man who did the cutting. Both the Chinese were taken to the city prison and locked up in the tanks, but the assaulted priest now refuses to identify his assailants.

The Denver Republican says that Fish and Game Commissioner J. S. Swan will be unable to stock the Gunnison and Grand rivers with spawning bass, as he had hoped. He went to Provo, Utah, the early part of the week, contracted with Game Warden M. C. Newell of Utah county for a large number of spawners, which were to be transported to the Gunnison hatchery, and then placed in the above rivers. Mr. Newell at once went to work selecting the bass desired for Colorado waters, and was busily engaged at it until stopped by a telegram from Mr. Swan, which stated that he would be unable to use the spawners, and in the stead, catch 15,000 fry bass.

The big winery of Captain J. P. Crossley at Westside, Cal., was totally destroyed by fire shortly after midnight Wednesday morning. The total loss is $36,000, with insurance slightly over $25,000. The Continental Insurance company had a risk of $18,000, Northwestern National $6,000 and Westchester, $1,200. The origin of the fire so far is a mystery. The residents near the winery were awakened by a glare but when the fire was discovered it was under such headway that nothing could be done. The insurance men considered the risk a good one, and say they are unable to explain the fire except on the theory that it was incendiary.

Robert K. Burrows, a well known rancher and a prominent resident of Chular canyon, Cal., died Saturday morning. Burrows was hauling wood last Thursday. During the forenoon his team and wagon came home without the driver. Burrows was found some distance from town lying on the ground unconscious. A physician was called, who found a long contusion on the back of the head, ligaments about the ankle torn and other injuries. He had been thrown from his wagon. He never regained consciousness, dying from concussion of the brain. He had been a resident of that county nearly thirty years, was 65 years old and leaves a widow and a family of grown children.

By the explosion of a steam generator in a tannery factory at San Francisco about 9 o'clock Wednesday night, Hugh Kelly and William Golden were seriously injured. Golden and Kelly were new employees of the place, the latter having worked but one day. The steam generator has a safety valve so arranged as to blow off when the steam pressure is at five pounds. Something happened Wednesday night to prevent the value from acting, the pressure became too great and the generator burst. Both men were immediately enveloped in a cloud of steam and were struck by the flying pieces of the generator. Both were badly burned about the face, neck and hands and badly bruised by the force of the blows.

Chinese highbinders who have been preying on the merchants of Chinatown, Cal., for the past two years lost their occupation Wednesday night. The boycott between the Sam Yip and See Yip factions was ended at a meeting of Chinese merchants held in the rooms of the Six Companies. No meeting yet held among the Chinese merchants has been productive of greater results. For two years a war has been waged, which has cost all concerned an immense sum of money, much bloodshed and a hundred and one other troubles that apparently the highest authorities among the Chinese were powerless to avert, but now all differences are said to have been amicably settled and for the future peace will reign where once reigned trouble and turmoil.

Joseph N. Rallton, formerly a leader in the local corps of the Salvation Army, next an aid-de-camp of General Kelley of the Industrial army and later a lieutenant in the American Volunteers under Commander Ballington Booth, is locked in the county jail at Oakland, Cal., on the charge that he failed to provide for his children. The complaint was sworn to by his wife, Mrs. Fanny M. Rallton, who has struggled for months past to give her children the necessities which she says her husband failed to provide. The Ralltons have four children, and three of them are now inmates of a San Jose orphanage, while the fourth is cared for by Mrs. H. Shellback of Emeryville, who has befriended the wife and mother in her tribulation.

Senator Perkins of Oakland, Cal., was rendered seriously ill for a few hours Friday night by some food he ate at dinner. He partook of some fish and later drank some milk, and it is thought that the combination nauseated him. He became very ill shortly after dinner and had to be assisted to his bedroom. The members of his family were greatly alarmed as to his condition and hastily summoned assistance. Restoratives were applied and the senator recovered after some time.

A man supposed to be A. McKinnon, a carpenter of Keswick, Cal., was found dead at 10 o'clock Saturday, a quarter of a mile below town on the railroad track. The head was 75 yards from the body. It is supposed he was riding beams on the Oregon express Friday night and fell off.

A terrible disaster was narrowly averted by the presence of mind of a laborer at the Sclaroni distillery, St. Helena, Cal., on Wednesday last. While repairing a leak in a huge tank containing alcohol one of the men employed in the distillery slipped and fell. A lighted candle which was fastened in front of his cap instantly ignited the alcohol which was trickling from the leak, and a conflagration seemed imminent. Just as the flames crept to the edge of the huge tank, however, another laborer, attracted by the cries of his fellow-employee, rushed into the chamber and seizing a fire extinguisher succeeded in quenching the flames. Had the flames reached the contents of the tank nothing could have prevented a fire, which in all probability would have resulted in the total loss of the distillery and possibly the lives of some of its employees, many of whom were in positions from which they might not have been able to escape.

Oconomowoc, Wis., Nov. 29.—The mystery which has shrouded the murder of the two children of Ernest Cornell and the cutting of Cornell's throat Saturday, has at last been cleared up. Today before the coroner's jury, Cornell made a confession that to the best of his recollection and belief he killed his children and tried to kill himself, although he had no recollection of having committed the deed.

This announcement came as a great surprise to the officials, who preferred charges against Cornell's wife and John Lewis, the horse killer, and had them incarcerated in the county jail at Wakeshaw on account of the killing.
