

PAYING FOR THE AIR.

Many Peculiar Expenses Incurred in Running a Great Hospital.

FEW people have any idea of the cost of running a modern first class hospital.

At the London St. Vincent's hospital, for instance, there was expended in 1933 for dressings and bandages about as much as $2,500, while the bill for drugs, chemicals and disinfectants came to a total of $4,175.

During the same period $2,500 worth of provisions were consumed in this institution, the most bill alone totaling up to $5,400, and that for milk to the large sum of $4,000.

The year's washing bill was $3,850, and this, although the hospital possesses its own splendidly equipped private laundry, with a capacity of 15,000 pieces a week.

In order to heat and light the miles of corridors, wards and other apartments, a sum of $7,475 had to be disbursed.

For merely scrubbing the floors, stairs, and so on, over $800 has to be found every 12 months; and this is exclusive of the annual "spring cleaning," which costs about $1,200 additional.

The hospital authorities have even to pay for the air their patients breathe—in the case of $200 odd per annum. In other words, the atmosphere of East London, being none of the best, has to be purified and heated, and this is the cost of running the necessary apparatus and the ventilating fans.

Salaries and wages run away with $25,000. Out of this no fewer than 553 trained resident nurses have to be paid.

Altogether the upkeep of the whole huge establishment cost in 1933 slightly over $100,000, and this quite independently of the $24,000 odd which was expended in improving and extending

it. In the question of life and death is prepared like a prince, that is, as the average householders cannot purchase even if he could, because of the cost of the food and the cost of the fuel.

This "case" is treated with complete isolation and with such care that its weight in gold. That, where death from weakness brought on by starvation is feared, is caused back from the hospital with concentrated soups and later with game that, perhaps, our king himself has shot.

Ordinary drugs and other remedies have to be paid for by the hospital, and at least 2,000 pieces of linen are used for making bandages, the payment on that account alone being $2,450. Some hospital, too, are spending large sums in bacteriological research. Thus, in the Middlesex hospital and in the Brompton Cancer hospital, respectively, thousands of pounds are being expended in seeking to solve the mystery of cancer, the least understood and most deadly of all modern plagues.

Of accidents alone there are treated yearly in the London hospitals, including the suburban ones, over 200,000. The bandages used, if fastened together and to end, would suffice to go round the earth in the equator, and every month more than 10 tons of timber are split into splints.

To give sufficient land for patients a farm of 100 acres would have to be kept constantly under cultivation, and at least 2,000 acres of pasture land would be required to feed the annual supply of cattle and sheep for the patients' needs.

Finally, the quantity of liquid disinfectant of various kinds used yearly would suffice to fill all the reservoirs of all the London water companies, or, if it were run into one big lake, having

AMERICAN ADVISER FOR BARON KOMURA.

One of the most interesting men in the retinue of Baron Komura, Japan's senior peace envoy and Foreign Minister, is an American, about whom little has been said, and yet he will have no small part in the negotiations between Japan and Russia. This is Henry W. Denison, a native of Vermont, who has been a resident of Japan for a quarter of a century. When not more than 20 years old he received an appointment in the United States consular service and was sent to Japan. Denison was a lawyer, and he had made a special study of international law during his service as consul. He was thrown in contact with many of the government officials, and it soon came to be understood that Mr. Denison was in authority on international affairs.

A STRANGE COUNTRY.

Colony Modeled After "Looking Backward" Found in Paraguay.

A COMMUNITY which closely approximates Bellamy's "Looking Backward" is found in a little settlement near Asuncion, Paraguay, described by Wilhelm Lachmann in the Leipzig Greifbath. Equality, democracy and community of wealth and work are the principles on which it was founded in 1921 by a group of Australian immigrants to Paraguay. "The houses of the settlers lie together and form a small village, and are small, pretty and clean. They have only one story, and are built of boards and shingled or roofed with magueza grass. The roof hangs far over the side walls and is supported by posts, a detail which allows for a wide veranda, most welcome in the hot, humid climate. On one side of the house is a small outbuilding which contains the kitchen, and every house has its garden. Little plantations of sugar cane lie between the houses and the gardens. Up to the present the dwellings have covered only a quarter of the space which has been reserved, and when Herr Lachmann visited the place there were some 20 houses occupied and 100 in course of construction. In time the buildings will form a great square, which will be about a larger open square. In addition a number of smaller public places have been provided for, which will be those already in existence, between the houses. There is an absolute community of goods in come, the only exception being that of the household or personal use—furniture, cooking utensils, clothing and food—remain the property of their users. When one enters the colony he must bring his entire property in with these exceptions. When, however, one wishes to withdraw he does not receive back the amount of his contribution, but only the amount which corresponds to his share for the last working period.

Everyone must go through a probationary period of one year, and before this period is completed no membership is obtained nor any contribution of goods made. Every applicant, upon entering, must pay into the treasury $25 for each adult member of the family, and half of this amount for each child. If then the probationers decide not to remain in the colony their expenses to Buenos Ayres are paid, but this is not done unless the applicant remains in the colony three months. The only requirements are that the applicant be strong and healthy. "Under no circumstances are colored persons admitted."

War Against Consumption. All those who are endeavoring to check the ravages of consumption, the "white plague," which claims so many victims each year, will find in the "white plague" a most welcome ally. The cure is simple and easy to follow, and you are in no danger of consumption. Do not risk your health by taking some unknown preparation when Foley's Honey and Tar is safe and certain in results. Ask for it. It is the only remedy that has been found to be effective in the treatment of consumption. For sale by F. J. Hill Drug Co.

CHAUNCEY VERSUS WHITE-LAW.

One of the best of the stories told of White-Law, the disgraced journalist-publisher, who went to the court of St. James in succession to Joseph Chamberlain, goes back to the campaign of '92, when the editor of the New York Tribune was the vice president candidate upon the Republican ticket. An immense mass meeting had been arranged at Carnegie Hall, and all the leading Republicans in the East were scheduled to appear. Ried entered the hall, his box in the second tier, and he was to be directly beneath that which had been set aside for Chauncey DeWitt.

As Mr. Ried entered the house the tumult of applause broke forth. He bowed to the welcome, courtly, graceful, but above all else dignified. The meeting continued, and he bowed again, still the crowd kept up its tumult, and a third time he bowed, now warming up a little, and as his recognition of the applause did not seem to lessen it, he stepped to the front of the box as if to speak.

Instantly an uproar of laughter swept over the hall. Instantly the distinction guished candidate for vice president froze up. The laughter increased. Ried's handsome face, and this cry: "No! No! Ried! Ried! Ried!" The applause swept up into new life, but with the call for him, Mr. Ried could distinctly hear yells of laughter and turning he started to leave the box. At that psychological second appeared a breathless committee man. "Ried, stand up on the platform," Mr. Ried, he gasped.

"Then what under heaven are they laughing at?" "Why, it's all a mistake. DeWitt's got the box above you, and when the welcome to you broke out, he thought the crowd meant him. He's so used to the spotlight, you know. He hasn't found out the mistake yet—he's still bowing and smiling—but someone's gone up to tip him off."

Then Mr. Ried dignifiedly melted at last, and he bowed with the heartiest in the laugh that went up to the third tier where a man was seen talking to "the only Chauncey."

Was Wasting Away. "I had been troubled with kidney disease for the last five years," writes Robert H. White, of Salt Lake City, Utah, and never felt well and decorated with leading physicians and tried all remedies suggested without relief. Finally I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and less than two bottles completely cured me and I am now sound and well. During the summer months kidney irregularities are often caused by excessive drinking of beer or overeating. Foley's Kidney Cure. For sale by F. J. Hill Drug Co.

COLONEL HENRY WATTERSON.

Colonel Henry Watterson, the Kentucky editor, who arrived recently from a long tour abroad, expressed his belief that the Portsmouth peace conference will result in an agreement leading to an adjustment agreeable to both Russia and Japan. Mr. Watterson said, "My idea is that Baron Komura and M. Witte will come to an agreement. However, if they do not, it is likely that President Roosevelt will be called in to give advice."

the hospital, under the provisions of the king's hospital fund, in other words the ordinary expense of carrying on the London averages $2,900 a week.

For this large sum, however, there were relieved in 1903 no fewer than 196,625 sufferers, 13,510 of whom had to be admitted to the wards as "in-patients." The number of children under 12 years of age treated was 5,557, or 1,000 in excess of the total at the largest of the children's hospitals in London.

As it is with London, so it is with all other hospitals. Notwithstanding the most rigid economy expenses will mount up.

It is true that eminent medical specialists, whose fees to wealthy patients run into hundreds of pounds, give their well-earned invaluable services free to the poor sufferers who flock to these institutions in their tens of thousands. But advice, and the skilful use of the knife on occasion is not all that is necessary. There are drugs that must be kept in stock in every well regulated hospital that cost actually as much as $20 and $200 an ounce.

The outbreak from the streets, when not too extensive a flock of a modern hospital could find therein comfortably and safely.—Payson's Weekly.

A BARN CONVERTED INTO A RUSSIAN CHURCH.

The Russian soldier may be limited in his rations, deprived of shelter and the conveniences of living and even restricted in the supply of his vodka, but there is no necessity when he is provided for him at any cost—he must be given an opportunity to attend religious services. The Muscovite authorities recognize this fact and are careful to supply the crying need. The cut shows how it was accomplished in one instance. A rude hatched roof barn was hastily turned into a chapel, and a Russian regiment attended the service, although all of the men could not get inside of the building.
