

GENERAL MILES AS A CANDIDATE

What G. A. R. Veterans Have to Say Regarding the Proposition.

GIVE FREE EXPRESSION.

Some Are For and Some Against Ex-Commander-in-Chief for President of the United States.

Gen. Miles during his brief visit in Salt Lake yesterday emphatically declined to discuss politics in any shape or form. The question of Gen. Miles as a presidential possibility, however, is being freely discussed among the G. A. R. veterans who have been passing through Salt Lake by the thousands en route for the grand encampment at San Francisco. There is a great variance of opinion on the Miles candidacy among the veterans, with the majority against him. The expression of G. A. R. veterans, a Denver veteran, is a sample of the almost general opinion expressed. Mr. Hall says he fought under Miles and found him a most capable soldier, but when it came to his being a candidate for the highest gift in the hands of the people, that was another matter. "It would be another Doves incident, I fear," he said.

From a number of opinions expressed by the old soldiers now passing through Salt Lake the following interviews show the sentiments, some for and some against.

H. S. Vaughn, department commander of Colorado—Why, I'm a Republican, and to say that you are a Republican nowadays is as much as to hand from the house to your opinion that no one on the face of the earth is in it with Theodore Roosevelt. Gen. Miles as a presidential possibility, indeed, Gen. Miles is a presidential impossibility.

J. T. Howard, a Vermont delegate, is an enthusiastic Miles man, and according to him the retired general would be good presidential timber in the next campaign in those districts where they have Democrats. But Mr. Howard added that down in Vermont they don't have Democrats, and even the G. A. R. men were unable to overcome their political scruples enough to vote for Gen. Miles on the Democratic presidential ticket.

C. D. Bowman of the Vermont delegation believes that Gen. Miles stands a good chance of becoming the next commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., but when asked what sort of a Democratic presidential candidate the general would make in the next campaign he said:

"If Gen. Miles attempts to run for president in the next campaign his fate will be similar to Dewey's. If I were an intimate friend of the general's I would advise him to withdraw from the everything that gives him publicity and for a time to try to drop clear out of the public view."

C. J. Woodford, New York—Never was a man worse misquoted or worse abused than Nelson A. Miles, and I believe the real soldier sentiment is for him. He was a valiant fighter in war and has fought for the public good since. But this latter fight has been, politically, his injury and possibly his undoing. He has not been, politically, a success and I do not feel assured that he could be elected president, because of the enmities he has thus made. He was a splendid soldier, but war and politics are not counterparts and the valor of a man in one might not save him from the inimitations of the other.

L. Longfellow—The Grand Army has done all it can do for Gen. Miles. It will not support him as a candidate for the presidency. I hardly think that the general will be a candidate. I think that he realizes that he is a soldier and not a statesman. The army is pretty solid for Roosevelt, and it is hardly likely that it will consider any other candidate, no matter what may be the politics of individual members.

C. Dittmore of Ohio—I do not think that Gen. Miles dreams of being a candidate for the presidency of the United States. I think he realizes that any man is a fool who attempts to run against Roosevelt. Individually, the Grand Army might wish to see an old comrade like the general in the highest place possible, but politically I believe it would cost him the vote for Roosevelt.

Edwin D. Force of Duluth: The general is a brave man and a good soldier. He is a restless fellow, a trouble-maker. He stirs up disturbances. That is not the kind of man the American people want at the head of their nation. Roosevelt is the man for the place, and we feel it no matter what may be the politics. The Grand Army has seen this country plunged into distress and warfare too many times to want any more of it. We old soldiers want peace and harmony now, and we think that Roosevelt is the man to give it to us.

Maj. J. J. Finney, Washington, D. C. Miles was a glorious fighter and was badly abused the other day by a president, who is, apparently, a little too ready to snub. This may make him commander-in-chief, but it can scarcely make him president. I live in Washington, and I know some of the inside workings of the politicians.

Clark Manfull, Missouri—I'm a Miles man now because I was a Miles man when it took nerve to say so in Missouri. I didn't think then of his being a presidential candidate, but I'm not too old now to take off my coat for him—which I wouldn't do for Grover Cleveland and don't want to do for Bryan.

S. S. Hubbel, Iowa—Our man Cummings for vice president, is kind of tied up with Roosevelt, so I reckon I will be pretty much for "Teddy." We think Miles was pretty badly snubbed, but that won't make him president.

R. P. McCoy, Ohio—With the Grand Army boys of Ohio, Miles would stand no show against Roosevelt. We have tried Roosevelt now, and we know what he is.

W. F. Sanders, Illinois—Miles has more strength in Illinois than anybody would have supposed. Since that discourtesy the other day upon his retirement, I have heard a hundred men from about that many different sections of the country, talking very strongly and very favorably of him. At first I kind of shook me, but the more I think of the possibility, the better I like it. In fact, he can have my vote.

Wallace of California county, Vermont, was enthusiastic in his praise of Gen. Miles.

"I would support him for any office, and I think that of chief executive of the United States is none too high for him," he declared. "I think his candidacy will prove popular with the rank and file of the Grand Army, because he has seen service in the regular ranks and is the finest soldier we have. The veterans like him better than the young fellows for that reason. He's the man for me, and I will vote for him on any ticket, although I am a red-hot Republican. Confound it in Vermont if I wasn't. He'll make a good run and I nominated will, I believe, be elected. Vermont sentiment will be in his favor.

ATTENDANCE WAS VERY LARGE

Methodist Episcopal Conference Brings Out Many People.

BISHOP CRANSTON TALKS

The Time Mostly Taken Up in Reading Reports and Routine Church Matters Generally.

There was quite a large attendance of members of the Methodist Episcopal conference at the First Methodist church on Third South street this morning, and quite a number of deacons were also in attendance, as well as some spectators. The time was taken up mostly in the reading of reports and routine church matters.

The session of the conference began at 9 o'clock by singing and prayer and was followed by an address by Bishop Cranston interpreting passages of the Mosaic law. Prayer by the bishop followed and then reports were read of the ministerial work performed during the past year by the various pastors, and also the condition, financial and otherwise of their respective churches. For the most part substantial progress was reported throughout the state.

Following are the committees for the year 1903:

Foreign missions—The Revs. J. C. Hickey, Joseph Wilkes, D. M. Heinicke. Home Missions, Church extension, women's home missionary society, Sunday school union, tract and deaconess work—G. E. Jayne, J. M. Hansen, Thomas Johns.

Education, Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education society, local and general education society—S. Allison, C. Hickner, H. G. Kemp. Reform, temperance and Sabbath—W. Murphy, W. B. Benton, J. H. Worrell. Church Publishing interests, periodicals and book accounts—H. W. Parker, H. L. Hansen.

Present Situation in Utah—A. J. Clifton, G. E. Jayne, G. F. Cook, Thomas Johns.

Resolutions—W. B. Burton, T. F. Kelly.

Auditing—Thomas John, J. M. Hansen, S. Allison.

Public worship—Presiding elders and pastors of city churches.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

The afternoon session of the Utah Methodist mission conference yesterday was taken up with the Women's Home Missionary society, which held its anniversary. Mrs. Murphy of Provo presiding. Miss Cordelia Robinson of the Davis Deacons' home read her report of the work done in the past year. There was singing and Bishop Cranston, who was engaged in an interview in receiving callers was sent for and requested to address the ladies present.

As is well known, Bishop Cranston is a very able man and one who has traveled extensively and thought a great deal, and yet it was evident that he was slightly embarrassed at being called upon at this time to deliver an unexpected address and he said so, too. Nevertheless, he made a very good informal talk and confined himself to the work done by women which had come under his notice. He gave them unstinted praise for the heroism which he had seen them display in western China some years ago. Whatever differences there may exist in the conference were carefully avoided by the bishop and it is plain that he came here to console and not to divide the confiding elements. He will deliver a carefully prepared sermon tomorrow at 11 o'clock, which, no doubt, will be worth listening to.

He was followed by Mrs. S. B. Potter.

LAST EVENING.

In the evening the anniversary of the Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education society was held at which the Rev. G. F. Cook of Park City presided. Rev. A. J. Clifton of Logan and Hyrum delivered the prayer and Rev. W. B. Burton of Brigham canyon made an interesting address on the work of the society in the south.

He gave a history of the negro in the south at the time of the emancipation and showed the advancement since made. He said the society had turned out over 2000 ministers of the gospel. Rev. F. T. Kelley of Mercur, who was born in the south, followed with an address on the same subject in which he showed that it was the uneducated blacks of the south who were guilty of the crimes perpetrated down there, and not those who were educated or

SHEEP SHIPMENTS.

Railroads Aiding the State in Stamp-ling Out the Scab.

Some delay is still being occasioned in the shipment of sheep out of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming owing to the neglect on the part of the shippers in securing a certificate showing that the sheep have been dipped twice in one of the prescribed solutions for eradicating scab. The railroads are helping the state and government officials all in their power to stamp out this disease among sheep, which is said to be decidedly prevalent in Utah. Officials state that numerous delays that have been occasioned in some quarters are due not so much to the shortage of cars as to the omission on the part of shippers in complying with the law in connection with the dipping of sheep.

The railroads rightly take the view that they have no right to contribute to the spread of contagious disease by taking any risks in transporting sheep that have not been properly dipped.

PEOPLE WHO ARE PASSING

Among the G. A. R. hosts who arrived on yesterday's belated train was Captain Thomas H. McKee, for many years journal clerk of the house of representatives at Washington. He said it was his first trip across the country and he was much impressed with the question of irrigation. He rather believed that the next Congress would appropriate $10,000,000 for the reclamation of arid lands. He thought the president's recent trip across the country was one of the best things he ever did, as it gave him an opportunity to get acquainted with both people and country. Captain McKee believes that Grover Cleveland will be nominated by the Democratic party, and will be backed by the Morgan-Rockefeller combination.

THE LIGHTNING HOE PRESS ON WHICH THE DESERET NEWS IS NOW PRINTED.

This illustration shows the new Hoe perfecting press on which all the editions of the Deseret News are now printed—Daily, Saturday and Semi-Weekly. The marvels of the press are constantly watched by a crowd of people who view it from the north side of the "News" building, where its workings can be plainly seen. The press is entirely new, modern, up-to-date, and was built specially for the Deseret News by the firm of R. Hoe & Co., New York and London, their expert Mr. Paul Kramm, having had charge of the erection here. Its capacity is 24,000 eight page papers per hour completely printed, pasted, and folded. It will also print 16, 12 or 10 pages completely finished.

Thursday night saw the last run of the Deseret News on the press in the old quarters which have been used as its home for so many years. Today a section of the wall of the old edifice will be taken out and the printing machines will be conveyed to the new linotype department on the third floor of the Annex, where the types of the paper will be set up hereafter, the forms being sent down to the press in the basement through a pneumatic chute. The mailing, job printing, binding, circulation and book press departments of the paper are being removed to the Annex as rapidly as possible, and in a few days the old "News" quarters, and the Cannon building where the Church works have been so long printed, will be entirely deserted.

The second Miehle job press which "News" has purchased within the last 18 months, is now being hoisted into position on the seventh floor of the Annex. This press arrived from the factory only yesterday, and is one of the most convenient and rapid job presses made. With several other smaller job presses it will be located permanently on the seventh floor. The five book magazines, etc., are printed will be located in the basement of the main building back of the newspaper press. The old press the machine was set up alongside the Hoe and held in reserve in case of accidents.
