

BREVITIES.

The Rev. George Rodgers, of Dorsetshire, England, is coming to America next month to choose a western site for the establishment of an English colony.

Prof. Pepper is giving in London scientific expositions or simulations of all the various phenomena of spiritualism. He gives the responsive tips, rappings, and in short he does everything by science, which passes for manifestation of spiritual agency.

A brakeman, on the Hudson river railroad, visited his sweetheart. She had the small-pox, and five minutes after he was ushered into her presence the house was quarantined, all ingress and egress being positively forbidden, and there he was.

London court dressmakers have been notified by the Lord Chamberlain that in future, ladies in square-cut bodices will not be admitted to the Queen's drawing-rooms. This is a gentle hint in favor of more refined and seemingly dressing than has been customary.

A writer in Temple Bar says: "It is impossible for a man of business not to sympathize with an eminent physician who informed his future wife that he had no time for courtship, but that if she would marry him, and be ready on a certain day, he would be happy to meet her at the church and make her his bride."

An Amherst professor, who exclaimed in the midst of his sermon, "Wake up that young man," caused a score or more of students and members of the faculty to be roused from their slumbers. He has been requested to be more specific in his remarks hereafter.

A Gloucester man hath a wife worth possessing. Three years ago she asked him to give her all the five cent pieces he had in his pocket each day. This he did, thinking they would go, of course, for hair pins, ribbons, and such-like jimeracks, but what was his surprise a few days ago, when his birthday came around, to receive as a present a gold watch worth $100, purchased with the accumulation of these "fips."

The Fourth of July orator has already commenced to rack his brain for a speech that will make the American eagle straighten out his pin feathers and scream, and small boys to touch off an entire pack of firecrackers at once regardless of cost. Fill up your wind bags and make Rome howl, for the Goddess of Liberty is almost one hundred years old, but friskier than ever in her Dolly Varden and other summer clothes.

A Russian savant has discovered that all cholera starts from one of seven points, situated in or near the Tropic of Cancer. From there it is propagated by atmospheric streams, all of which were in active operation in 1866. These streams are called into being, he says, by means of spots on the sun. We have always distrusted these sun-spots, about which the scientists have made so much noise, and we are glad to see their inherent iniquity proved.

First stranger—I declare, sir, that women are getting more outrageously de-colltay every day. Just look over there at that Prodigious old Porpoise with the eye-glass! Second stranger—Hum! Ha! Yes! I can't help thinking she's a more festive-looking object than that Funereal old Frump with the fan! First stranger—The "Funeral old Frump's" my wife, Sir! Second Stranger—The "Prodigious old Porpoise" is mine! Let's go and have some tea!

"Emma, my love," said a much enamored, newly-married husband, "you have such pretty feet that I wonder you do not wear short dresses."

"I declare, George," she replied, "you're a greater noodle than I thought you were. Don't you see that if I wear long dresses, I can have an excuse to lift my skirts much higher than I dare wear them if made short?"

Exit wife for a walk. Husband sits down to reflect upon the subtleties of feminine strategy.

Dysentery.—As this disease prevails at this season, we copy the following remedy: A spoonful or two of pure raw wheat flour thinned with water so it can be easily drunk. Three or four doses taken at intervals of ten or twelve hours will cure any case not absolutely chronic, and from what I have witnessed, I feel sure it is one of the best remedies in the world for chronic diseases. To make the dose palatable for children it can be sweetened and flavored with some drops not acid.—Washington Star.
