Foster, director of the Utah Experiment Station, the following pertinent points on a great local industry are Mr. B. P. McAilister, of Harrodsburg, taken. He sald:

> Utah is already largely engaged in the sheep industry. The natural conditions of the State make it well adapted for the business and it will, no doubt, hereafter be our leading stock industry, but thus far only one side of the busi-ness is represented, that of the range. While this will always be much the larger side, representing the much greater investment, I seriously doubt its being the most profitable. By the other side, I mean that of the farmer. With very few exceptions there are no sheep on the farms of this State. On this account the fields and roads and many of the pastures, too, grow up to weeds. A band of sheep on some of the grain fields after harvest would do the land more good than the average summer fallow, in cleaning out the weeds. The land too would be made more fertile from their having pastured over it, for sheep are enrichers as well as scav-engers. They eat and thrive on the stuff that other stock do not relish. Every fence corner, fence row, and weed patch is more completely cleared of its foul stuff by them than by the scythe or hoe.

NEXT THE HEN. Every farmer could have a few sheep

It is claimed that a pasture and for the sum of $150 attorney's fees which will keep twenty-five cows and horses will, as a rule, be better for the addition of twenty-five sheep. From a recent address of Prof. Luther | They shear a fairly heavy fleece and are unusually prepotent. When bred to common ewes the second and third crosses are almost equal to pure-breds for general farm purposes. From whatever breed the selection is made one may soon have a flock of choice ewes. While the largest profits will doubtless come from raising early lambs, very satisfactory results may be secured without giving this part of the business special attention. The extra cost and care of winter lambs are not as great as some suppose. At this season of the year most farmers have plenty of leisure to look after them. With a comfortable place for the first week of the lamb's existence and a good shed afterwards, and with the extra attention that may be given, fully as large a per cent of February lambs will be raised as of May, and if sold for spring lamb they will bring three times as much money. By this method a permanent flock is kept up and the farmer reaps the bene fit of the constant improvement that is going on from year to year.

SECOND PLAN.

The second plan to which I wish to call your attention contemplates an entire change in the flock every year, the main object being the production of early lambs. The ewes are purchased during the summer and the rams turned with them not later than September. The ewes are brought into a good thrifty condition by plenty of feed be-fore the lambs are dropped, and both ewes and lambs are made to do their best afterwards until the lambs are ready for market. Full feeding is necessary for rapid growth. Plenty of feed at this time gives better returns for the investment than at any other. The mother keeps the lamb and all the feed goes to product. It means a larger animal of better quality and fre quently of double value. A few weeks feeding after the lambs and wool have been disposed of will make good mutton of the ewe, and during the summer such stock will command good prices. By this method the owners of large bands on the range could select the old ewes annually and make them bring in a nice profit. Good feeding and careful attention are essential to success. With our low price of lucern and mill feed there is no reason why the Utah farmer should not compete successfully with the eastern feeder in the production of early lambs. Pursuing this method, the farmer may purchase each year a number just large enough to clear his fields of waste, weeds and surplus pasture during the fall, and to eat up the hay during the winter that he would otherwise have to draw to market and sell. By this plan the same ram could be used continuously. THIRD PLAN.

There is still another line of the sheep business that very few are engaged in which seems to me very promising. I refer to raising high grade rams for the best bands of sheep in this and surrounding States. They can be raised here on our farms more cheaply than anywhere east, and the purchaser would prefer them on account of having them already acclimated and the beef; or in the ratio of 68 to 100. From this we may safely conclude that as freight. A ram reared in this climate

The claims of ex-City Recorder E. H. nderson, $500, and ex-City Auditor H. Emerson, $360, for balance of salaries ue them for the years 1898-9, were rerred to the committee on claims.

The council ordered that $2,000 of the wer bonds of 1892, becoming optional b. 1. be called in.

A communication to N. W. Harries & o, relative to the redemption or re-inding of the sewer bonds of 1890, $50,-0, five per cent, was referred to the ttee on finance.

Two tax matters, one the pe-tion of Fred Foulger and the other hat of the Ogden Building and Savys association, were referred to the mittee on taxes. In both of these ases the property had been sold in 1893 sewer taxes and in 1895 the city had taken a tax deed. Since that time, the title being vested in Ogden City, the property had been withdrawn from In the latter case, however, the taxes for the years 1896-7-8-9, for late, county, city and school purposes, had been paid, but in the former they had not been paid. If Mr. Foulger were allowed to redeem by simply paying the back sewer taxes he would esape the State, county, city and school taxes which in that time would have mounted to $276.81. The city attority owns the property absolutely and impose its own terms." The rules to govern the council for the next two years were then taken up and briefly discussed, being adopted as reported by the committee, except rule 30, which provided that the vote on the mayor's appointments should be by ballot, that rule being stricken out, efter which the council adjourned.

I have in mind three methods that might be pursued by the Utah farmer according to conditions, tastes and circumstances. By the first plan he would start with good common ewes selected from some band within easy reach and build up a choice flock by the use of pure-bred rams of some popular mutton breed. On the farm mutton must have equal if not greater consideration than wool and the question naturally comes as to what breed is best for this improve-ment. I believe there is no best mutton sheep, any more than there is a best wagon or a best plow. The se-lection is usually a matter of individual judgment or taste, but the demands of the market for lambs, mutton or wool would perhaps be the chief guide to a decision. My own preference is for the Shropshire.
